FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

That bunch working on the War Bond Drive are the workingest bunch we ever saw on anything. A little thing like missing out one month on their quota didn't seem to put a damper on their spirits at all. They raised $41,000 in December. That normally would seem like the hardest month at all, what with folks buying Christmas and everything. Anyway, here's to 'em, and may their New Year be the Bond bearingest blitz yet. By golly.

A Portland draft board received this V-mail Christmas greeting from Pfc. Anthony P. Sheridan, 29, Portland (drafted last Spring), from one of the Pacific island war theaters:

"Merry Christmas, having a wonderful time. Wish you were here (instead of me)."

Boy did we get results fast. We suggested that the traffic lights be left off except when absolutely needed and Tuesday mornings Montgomery Advertiser carried a story where ODT was seeking to put more "go" and less "stop" in traffic lights.

Alex Hayes and Reba have been promoted to Assistant Flight Commander. Of course Alex got the promotion but then, Reba commands the Commander, No fooling, Alex has been promoted to Assistant Flight Commander at Carlston, Field, Arcadia, Fla. We congratulate him and wish only the best for both.

The new City Police are doing a mighty good job of keeping the automobiles moving on the main streets of Clanton. Time was when you had a hard time getting down a block within five or ten minutes. Now, however, as a rule the streets are always clear. Or could gas rationing have something to do with it?

This'n that-wonder what the daughter meant New Years Eve when she said "sleep tight" . . . the waitress at City Grill with the winning smile-makes your coffee taste better . . . thanks to James Carl Martin for the nice little desk calendar keeps reminded that you are Protective Life Ins., Co.'s local representative. . . . our friends the Burgess's have moved to Selma. Coming from Montgomery some three and a half years ago, they have made many friends in Clanton and Chilton County and it is with regret that we lose them . . .

Friends of Sgt. Eugene V. Kelley of Maplesville, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kelley, will be interested to know that Sgt. Kelly is now serving as a Military Police with the A. E. F. in Northern Ireland . . . Joe Earl Gowan is not a Lt. anymore. He's a Captain. Got his promotion recently . . . Alex Arnold is in town again. He has a ten day furlough but says so many of the old gang are gone, both boys and girls that he doesn't think he will be able to stay the ten days-nothing to do . . . Bill's Place, since the pool rooms have been closed, is specializing in hot dogs. Mr. Posey, the owner, says that he is fixing the place up for the ladies as well as gentlemen and invites his friends in . . .

Hey, Boy, hold me back. Here comes a WAAC. News leaked out that Miss Ola Mae Parrish, who finishes at Auburn this year will immediately join the WAAC's. She has just returned to school after spending the Christmas vacation with her parents. Ola Mae says that things are a little too quiet with all the young fellows in the services so the only thing that can be done is "jine-up" too.

National Farm Mobilization Day January 12th

By: P. H. Smith, County Agent

"A proclamation by President Roosevelt declares January 12th as 'Farm Mobilization Day' throughout America," says P. H. Smith, County Agent. "On that day farm people and agricultural workers are requested to come to gether to discuss the job ahead in 1943 of agricultural production for Victory.

"Meetings will, therefore, be arrang-leaders and will be held on a county-ed in the different counties by farm wide basis or by communities.

"Much good should come from this day devoted to joint examination of the farm problems for 1943 and statements byleading farm people as to how the production goals can best be met,' County Agent Smith continues. "The President recognizes in his proclamation the importance of agriculture in the War Program anl the necessity for large production as an important phase of conducting the War."

In his proclamation, the President says:

"The people of this county may well be grateful that for three successive years the farmers of the United States have given us record harvests. Every pound of food finds use in wartime. Our soldiers, sailors, and marines require large supplies of food both in this country and abroad, and these three record-smashing years of farm proluction will mean much for Victory.

"Food is no less a weapon than tanks, guns and planes. As the power of our enemies decreases, the importance of the food resources of the United Nations increases. With this thought in mind, we must further mobilize our resources for the production of food.

"I should like Farm Mobilization Day to be a symbol of a free America; a symbol of the might and productivity of our Nation; and a symbol of our unalterable determination to put to full use our agricultural resources, as well as our other resources, in the achievement of complete Victory."

A MESSAGE FROM PATTERSON HICKS

When abnormal times and conditions come along such as we are having now people become suspicious of many pleas for help and assistance. It is wise to question any of these drives for funds as frauds are ever present to take advantage of any opportunity that presents its self. The Alabama War Chest drive has been examined and approved by the governor of Alabama as well as many other people of authority in this state. Any person may contribute to this fund with full assurance that their money will be spent for worthy causes.

Most of this money is to be used for the men in the armed forces of this country and their families that are in need. Every citizen is asked to give a day's pay to this cause. This is a very small donation to make when we consider what our boys and men are giving who are called on to go to the front. Chilton County and Clanton cannot afford not to do its part in this drive.

MUST HAVE CERTIFICATE FOR WAGON PURCHASE

All Chilton County Farmers who wish to buy a farm wagon for 1943 should file an application for a Purchase Certificate on or before Jan. 16, 1943, announced the Chilton County Farm Machinery Rationing Committee.

These applications should be filed at the Office of the Farm Machinery Rationing Committee which is located in the A. A. A. Office at Clanton.

These blank applications may be obtained from any local Hardware Implement Dealer or by writing the A. A. A. Office in Clanton.

Letter To The Editor:

January 1, 1943

Mr. R. M. Tucker,
Clanton, Alabama.
Dear Sir:

The Navy wants Negro men between the ages of 18 and 38. These men are taught to be expert Mess Attendants (Waiters and Butlers) earn good pay while in the service, and come back equipped to earn a good living in civilian life.

Navy training is an excellent morale builder. The men you send to the Navy will come back good American citizens, filled with common sense attitudes and ideals.

No doubt you know of several better than average negroes whom you would like to see qualify for this work.

Send them to their draft boards, where they should apply for voluntary induction in the Navy. The draft board will do the rest.

Thanks in advance for this additional service to our Navy and our Country.

Yours for Victory,
C. L. Bromberg,
CSp (R)(AA), USNR.

A REVIEWERS REVIEW

I have just returned from a three month's visit in Birmingham. While I was there, I learned some very pertinent facts that are of usmost importance to us.

Many of us do not know very good reasons for doing the things we are doing in this war effort. Now, however, I think I have found some good reasons for a few of the things we are doing.

For instance, I believe I have found a good reason why, though we are thousands of miles from enemy air bases, we must have blackouts, demolition squads, and Civilian Defense. I believe I have now a reason for Hitler's attacking Russia. I think I know now the kind of spirit that the deepest thinkers in America believe we must have in order to win this war. I think I have found the reason why, though pushed back on every side, though bombed from above, the German soldier is still determined to win or die for Herr Hitler.

I attribute these reasons to four very well-informed people who visited Birmingham in the interval from September to December. These people were Anne O'Hare McCormick, foreign correspondent for America's greatest newspaper, the New York Times; Pierre Huss, roving reporter who watched Hitler in action; Louis Fischer, the journalist who spent a week with Gandhi in India; and Dr. Ben Wood, Columbia University's brilliant writer, lecturer, and geography student.

These people have studied the international situation. They have tried to interpret it on the wide background that they possess. What follows, therefore, I submit for your careful consideration.

Mrs. McCormick was the first speaker in this year's Birmingham Town Hall Series. Her subject, "Europe and Ourselves", soon became a lecture on what kind of spirit we must have in order to win this war. She told her audience, "In this war we are fighting for something to look forward to. Unless you have seen the homesickness for the future possessed by the European peoples, you have never seen homesickness." She remarked that war is caused mainly by the fear of war, and that, since the democratic governments had abandoned the idea of war after the first world struggle, the nations were afraid of the revolutionary forces which another war would release.

Chilton County Garden Suggestions For January

American Food Is In The Fight—Let's Do Our Part To Keep It There

By: M. R. Glasscock, Ass't Co. Agt.

It is too early in the game to say that "Food is Wining the War", but many able individuals have made the statement that if it were not for the lend-lease supplies of food that the United States has been able to send to England, Russia, and our other Allies, that they would never have been able to withstand the attacks of the Axis as they have and we would not have had the time to prepare for the offensive that is now being launchel against the enemies of the Democratic World.

Our home gardens helped make this possible. Last years job was well done, but lets begin now to plan and prepare to do an even better job of food production in 1943.

It is not too early to start planting in January, but lets start with first things first. If the garden area given a thorough cleaning and several loads of compost added now and the garden turned as soon as it is dry the litter will have time to decay. Turning the garden during cold weather will destroy many insects and thereby decrease the amount of labor and expense necessary to produce next years garden. Repair the garden fence now so this job will be off hand before the major crop planting season.

After these jobs have been completed, a few dry days in January will allow the following vegetables to be planted.

Asparagus (Mary Washington). Plant now, 100 foot in row along fence use 50 2 year old crowns.

Beets (Early Egyptians). Plant Jan. 20 in South Alabama, in 50 foot rows using 1 oz. of seed.

Broccoli (Green Sprouting). Sow seed in box or hotbed now, use 1 oz. of seed.

Cabbage (Copenhagen or Wakefield). Sow see in box or hotbed now. 1 pkt.

Marine Corps Open Yet To Registrants

Men between the ages of 18 and 38 may still enlist in the United States Marine Corps by obtaining releases from their draft boards, Capt. Davis A. Holladay, Birmingham Recruiting officer, said here today.

Capt. Holladay said men who express a preference for the Marines may go before their draft boards at any time before they receive orders to report for induction into the Army.

"The present recruiting plan differs only in one way from our former procedure," Holloday explained. "The step of obtaining a release from the draft board has been added."

Rationing News

Your local rationing board asks that you read the instructions appearing in the press from day to day about rationing of foods that will begin sometime in February. Just as soon as all forms are received and the information assembled the date and instructions for obtaining Ration Book No. 2 will be given to the public through this column.

Your local rationing board is doing the very best to serve you at all times. It does not function perfectly but it is the desire of the board to give you the very best service possible. When it does not approve your application for a service, or a commodity, it is not that it wants to appear indifferent, but it is carrying out its instructions to the best of its ability.

COFFEE

Stamp No. 28 in your sugar rationing book is good for one pound of coffee for each person over fifteen years of age from January 4, to February 7.

TIRE INSPECTION

Your local board wishes to remind you again that it is necessary to have your tires inspected by January 31 and every sixty days thereafter.

War Bond News

January 5, 1943

Dear Editor:

I want to congratulate every one that served on our Victory Stamp and Bond Committees in 1942. I want to especially congratulate each person that bought a Bond last year and I know that everyone will be happy when I tell you that our quota for last December was $33,000.00 and we raised $41,000.00. The amount raised in December brings our entire quota up to date and I sincerely hope that we will subscribe for whatever amount the Government requires of us this year. I wish this information could be conveyed to every one of our boys who is now serving in our Army and especially those fighting on the front.

I wish I could express as chaiman of the committee the appreciation and the gratitude that we owe to the Banks and Postmasters and Newspapers of this County. They have done a wonderful job and should be congratulated. Also Mr. Duffey for his help with his loud speakers.

I hope that all of our Committees will continue the good work as long as we have boys on the firing line.

I hear people complaining about rationing sugar, coffee, gasoline and other things, but let's not complain about the things our Government asks us to do. The Rationing Committe are citizens of our County and I feel that they are doing the best they can. When you complain think of how little we are required to do compared to what our boys are doing in the fight.

I hope that every one that is making additional money on the account of the War will buy Bonds with the same. If they would do this we would have no trouble getting our quotas each month.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds,
Executive Chairman.

‘194 To Bring Many Changes In Civilian Life”--Roger Babson

USINESS AND FINANCIAL UTLOOK FOR 1943

Babson Park, Mass., Dec. 31—Events e moving at breath-taking speed. ever before has the world been in e midst of such far-reaching tur- oil. Within the next hours news ight break that will change the whole urse of history. Nevertheless, it is tally important to keep your per- ective. To change your business or vestment program with every piece war news is utmost folly. A good ample of this was portrayed when e United States opened up a second ont in North Africa. That morning any thousands of self-appointed com- entators were convinced that the ar was going to last at least five ars. Yet by midnight of that same ty these same commentators could e nothing but a short War and a ick victory. Let us now, therefore, nfine this Outlook to probabilities.

TAIL TRADE

The first quarter of 1943 should equal the first quarter of 1942; considering the entire year, a decline of 12% is probable. Just what will happen depends on two things: first, upon the quantity of goods; and second, to what extent consumers are willing to take substitutes. Washington talks about 300,[illegible] retailers being put out of business; but I believe this is entirely unecessary. If londlords will be easy on rents, as sensible ones should be, practically all retailers can run on a skeleton force and keep alive until the War is over when business again should be good.

The hope of America lies not with big concerns, but with small businessmen. These small businessmen must be protected in order to preserve democracy. I go further and say that the preservation of democracy depends on small and so-called inefficient manufacturers and retailers to "clutter up" the economic situation. Large units lead ultimately to tyranny. As this is becoming recognized, I think 1943 will see some real help given the small retailers. Of course, no general forecast will apply to all parts of the country. The industrial and agricultural sections should hold up to 1942 figures; but retailers in certain other sections are bound to suffer. After paying their tax bill in 1943, the American people will have left out of their income $36 billions more than they had after paying their taxes in 1940. City restaurants and amusements will prosper most; while filling stations, garages, lumber yards, household appliances and hardware stores will suffer most.

COMMODITY PRICES AND LIVING COSTS

Prices of practically all commodities are at their low with the exception of certain ones that are now imported from India, the Far East and Africa. As we are shipping loads of men to these points, ships may bring back supplies of cocoa, coffee, olive oil, dried fruits, cork, antimony, lead, manganese, hides and skins, mercury, molybdenum, zinc and other commodities. Throughout 1943 there will be a continued pressure to pierce price ceilings. These ceilings will be kept down fairly well on goods which the armed forces need.

Thus far the OPA has made no distinction between essentials and non essentials. Not only is this a very difficult thing to do, but it is good politics to class everyone alike. The war against inflation, however, will never be won in this way. The only way to keep women from buying unnecessary clothes, for instance is to let the prices of these clothes increase to a point where the price taghurts. Therefore, during 1943, I forecast a reclassification of the essentials and non-essentials. Prices will be held down on the essentials, but retailers will be allowed to charge higher prices for non-essentials. There will be a little increase in living costs, but care in buying and less waste can more than offset any increases.

SECURITY PRICES

I believe that the Dow-Jones Stock Averages will go to points during 1943 higher than anything seen in 1942; also that bond yields and stock yields will tend to come closer together. This may mean a decline in the prices of low-coupon, long-term bonds and an increase in the prices of many stocks. This especially applies to stocks [illegible] companies which are not handicapped by cumulative preferred issues or bond issues. Remember, the London Stock Market is witnessing the hi[illegible] prices it has seen for five years. Certainly, investors are sound asle[illegible] the United States. Even the utili[illegible] begin to look better in spite of co[illegible] inflation.

The most important question for the investor during 1943 will be, "Sh[illegible] I buy peace stock or war stocks". Of course, the safest thing is to buy p[illegible] stocks. The war stocks include airplane manufacturers, the steels, coppers and other metals and machine tools; while the peace stocks include building supplies, motors, rubbers, household appliances and the stocks of most other companies which are now suffering from lack of business. one sure bet is that companies which are now prospering most during the war will suffer most after the War; while companies which suffer most during the War will prosper most after the War. There are some concerns of course, such as the merchandiseing companies, which should [illegible] well both during and after the War. The railroads will do well dur[illegible] the War—but afterwards, look out!

BUILDING AND REAL ESTATE

New building during 1943 will fall off. Government building, both of factories and cantonments, will decline while residential building will continue to be held down. This means

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Wallace Urges Post-War Federation; Giraud's Selection for North Africa Post Bolsters French Unity Against Axis; Russ Continue Ground-Gaining Drives

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Col. Merian C. Cooper (left) points to map of China and Burma as he makes report to Robert Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, in Washington. Colonel Cooper returned to the United States after serving as chief of staff of Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the China Air Task Force.

WORLD FEDERATION:
Asked by Wallace

Ever since his "quart of milk a day" speech forecasting bettered conditions for the world's underprivileged, Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been regarded as a No. 1 administration spokesman on post-war reconstruction.

Thus his latest address proposing a world council to preserve peace and promote the general welfare after the war received close inspection in world chancellories, for it was taken as a major administration statement of future plans.

Wallace's recipe for international organization after the war: "The maximum of home rule that can be maintained along with the minimum of centralized authority that must come into existence to give the necessary protection."

The vice president outlined a fourfold objective for future peace: "To preserve the liberty, equality, security and unity of the United Nations—liberty in the political sense; equality of opportunity in international trade; security against war and business depression due to international causes; and unity of purpose in promoting the general welfare of the world."

For the American people, Wallace said, "the war is entering its grimmest phase" where we will learn for the first time the meaning of war privations. But, he added, Hitler's "desperate bid for a Nazi world order has reached and passed its highest point."

4-WAY OFFENSIVE:
By Russ Armies

The Russians continued to prove that while the summer might have belonged to the invading Nazi hosts, the winter was the season for Red revival.

Four strong Soviet armies were proving this in four separate drives against the cold and weary Germans. These offensives sprung with the purpose of destroying Nazi manpower and equipment and weakening Hitler's hold on the Eastern front were centered on the Rzhev sector, in the Stalingrad area, in the reaches of the Middle Don and in the central Caucasus.

The central Caucasus drive was the newest on the Red schedule and was started south of Nalchik, where Nazi armored mountain units had been trying unsuccessfully for weeks to break through to the Georgian military highway in Transcaucasia.

Most significant news came from the Stalingrad area, however, for Russian communiques reported the capture of Kotelnikovski, key transportation town anchoring a 200-mile stretch of the Stalingrad-Caucasus railroad and a supply depot for the Nazis' eastern operations. Here big stores of Axis supplies were taken over by the Reds. From Kotelnikovski the Russians began a spearhead drive toward Rostov.

Meanwhile the Red encirclement of 22 German divisions trapped before Stalingrad was tightened by Russ advances of from 37 to 58 miles from the southwest.

GIRAUD:
Assures Unity

Gen. Henri Giraud had been the Allies' original choice for the post of high commissioner of North Africa. Then the bullet of the 20-year-old assassin that killed Adm. Jean Darlan made Giraud's selection inevitable by the French imperial council.

That the elevation of Giraud to the slain Darlan's post had a unifying effect was immediately manifest. Not only did the French North African civil and military forces rally behind the new commissioner, but Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, quickly pledged his support of Giraud's regime and urged the formation of a temporary government to unite all French elements.

While the murder of Darlan undeniably settled the controversy raging through the United Nations over the North African alliance of the Allies and the ex-Vichy collaborationist, observers believed that before his death Darlan had honestly recanted his former views and was wholeheartedly leading his forces for the liberation of France. And they defended the wisdom of General Eisenhower's first alliance with Darlan.

Tunisia Battlefront

Although tropical sunshine had dried the surface of Tunisia's boggy roads, the gumbo mud continued to hamper free movement of either the Allied or Axis forces. Principal strategic key was the town of Medjez-el-Bab, where General Dwight Eisenhower's army was endeavoring to anchor its positions for the coming all-out offensive against strongly held Tunis and Bizerte. That these positions could not be won without fierce struggles was indicated by reports that the Allied forces had withdrawn from an advanced hill six miles northeast of Medjez-el-Bab.

Air offensives continued against Axis bases in Tunisia and Axis supply lines from Sicily and Italy with Flying Fortresses battering Sousse, Tunis and Bizerte.

French forces under General Giraud had carried out aggressive action along the "waist" of Tunisia, taking the town of Pichon and advancing in a drive to prevent the effective junction of Marshal Rommel's Libyan forces with those of General Walther Nehring in Tunisia.

DRAFT:

With fighting forces of 9,000,000 forecast for the United States by the end of 1943, draft officials estimated that between 250,000 and 300,000 men 18 through 37 years old will be called to the colors monthly this year.

Approximately half of the 1943 draftees will represent the 18 and 19-year-olds. The remainder will come from the ranks of childless married men, since the pool of unmarried men available for military service has been virtually exhausted.

Included in the 9,000,000 fighting forces will be an army of 7,500,000; a navy of 1,500,000; a marine corps of 400,000 and coast guard enrollments of 300,000.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: The navy department announced that dive bombers from Guadalcanal had sunk a 3,000-ton Japanese vessel near Wickham island in the central Solomons. The destruction of the ship raised the number of Japanese vessels sunk in the Solomons to 54. Wickham island is within 120 nautical miles of Guadalcanal. There is an anchorage nearby where Japs have been active.

MOSCOW: As a reward for leading the recent successful break through the German lines on the Middle Don, Vassily Mikhailovich Badanov was elevated to the rank of lieutenant general of tank forces and awarded the highest Russian military decoration, the order of Suvorov. General Badanov's feat was described as "unprecedented in scope."

CANNED RATIONING:
Little Panic Buying

Fears that a nation-wide scramble of housewives to buy canned foodstuffs would develop following official disclosure that a point rationing system would be inaugurated in February failed to materialize as reports from retail grocers indicated only isolated instances of panic buying.

Announcement of the ration plan which covers more than 200 canned food items made by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard had been attacked by trade representatives as "premature" and almost certain to result in public hoarding and unfair distribution of available supplies.

Federal authorities defended the advance announcement on the ground that complicated controls were necessary to administer the program. They contended, too, that if the public were not notified, rumors might circulate and cause hysterical purchasing.

Grocers attributed the absence of panic buying to two major reasons. One was the government's requirement that before a rationing book could be issued, any hoarded goods had to be declared and the equivalent number of rationing coupons surrendered at the time of registration. The other was that any case of hoarding where false representation was made, might be punishable by a maximum fine of $10,000 or one year in prison or both.

CASUALTY LISTS:
Full Publicity Ahead

Confident that the American public can "take bad news," government officials revealed that the ban on nation-wide publication of war casualty and prisoner lists had been lifted.

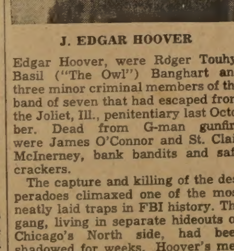
The new policy, officials said, would permit publication anywhere and in their entirety, lists of men killed, wounded, missing or taken prisoner. Previously newspapers had been restricted to publishing the names of men whose next of kin lived in their particular circulation area.

Explaining the new ruling, one spokesman declared it had been determined that the publication of casualty lists would not jeopardize national security and moreover, "the public has enough stamina and fortitude to take the bad news of long casualty lists if the papers care to publish them."

G-MEN:
Spring Neat Trap

Acting with all the detective-thriller technique for which they are famous, G-men brought to a sudden end the liberty of jail-breaking Roger ("Terrible") Touhy and his desperate henchmen, in raids in Chicago that rivaled in excitement the celebrated Dillinger case of nearly a decade ago.

Safely in the FBI bag, whose strings had been pulled by Chief J. Edgar Hoover, were Roger Touhy, Basil ("The Owl") Banghart and three minor criminal members of the band of seven that had escaped from the Joliet, Ill., penitentiary last October. Dead from G-man gunfire were James O'Connor and St. Clair McInerney, bank bandits and safe crackers.



J. EDGAR HOOVER

The capture and killing of the desperadoes climaxed one of the most neatly laid traps in FBI history. The gang, living in separate hideouts on Chicago's North side, had been shadowed for weeks. Hoover's men moved swiftly when they sprung the trap.

TOJO:
'Real War Starts'

Bland-visaged Gen. Hideki Tojo. war minister, had no bland words for the Japanese people when he appeared before the Nipponese diet to report on the state of the war. Instead, he warned grimly that the Allies were preparing to deliver "counter - blows of great importance" and added that signs indicated "the real war is starting from now."

Tojo admitted that Jap forces in Burma, New Guinea and the Solomons were on the defensive and pointed out that the phase of surprise Jap attacks and lightning success was over. He said, however, that his armies in these areas were "successfully frustrating enemy attacks by counter-blows."

Before ending on a somber note that "Japan is engaged day and night in providing against air raids," Tojo listed some of the plunders of war his forces have acquired, adding that transports had brought home 1,800,000 tons of material.

Importance of World Trade Turns Spotlight on Sec. Hull

Post-War Rebuilding of International Structure Will Get Consideration Before Armistice.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Hints to the effect that the President will make a discussion of post-war conditions a part of his forthcoming message to the 78th congress foreshadows the re-entry on the diplomatic stage in a prominent role of the figure of Secretary of State Cordell Hull. In wartime, diplomacy plays its part chiefly behind the scenes—the brass hats have their day in public. But there are now several indications that Secretary Hull is about to take the spotlight again in an old familiar role, namely, as spokesman for the economic platform which he made a part of our foreign policy before the war.

To understand Secretary Hull's importance today it is well to recall the words spoken to me not long ago by a very keen diplomatist:

"Secretary Hull," he said, "was probably chosen as secretary of state for four reasons: One, because of the President's political debt to him and because they were friends; two, because he had a diplomatic gift; three, because there was vital need for liaison between the state department and congress; and four, because of Hull's deep knowledge of international trade relations."

Reason No. 3 is more important than ever, and although reason No. 4 may have been a pure coincidence at the time, it is turning out to be one of the most important factors.

Today "reason No. 4" is coming to the front. There are those in the administration who believe that America must play a vital part in the building of the post-war world if freedom of enterprise is to be maintained. They realize, too, that unless conditions of peace are outlined before the armistice, isolationist sentiment may break out again and force America back into extreme nationalism when the war is over, as it did in 1918.

Turning Point Toward Depression?

America's withdrawal from world affairs in 1918 is considered by the people who believe in Hull's international trade policy as the turning point that led straight to the depression of the twenties. Then it was that America began building up her tariff walls, which many economists consider one of the causes of World War II.

Throughout this period the foreign war debts were festering. America continued to demand payment of those debts and at the same time to raise trade barriers that curtailed international commerce and thus made the debt payments impossible.

Then came the New Deal and the introduction of many measures, some of which tended further toward nationalism. Secretary Hull, who had been fighting an uphill fight for free trade relations without much success, especially after the sabotaging of the London Economic conference in 1933, finally launched his reciprocal trade agreements plan.

Hull's progress was retarded for many natural reasons. In the first place, it was too slow and undramatic a procedure to engage the President's active support. The President leans to the dramatic, does not pretend to understand fiscal matters.

In the second place, the traditional state department attitude was one of aristocratic disdain of all matters involving trade.

Lend-Lease Policy Fitted Into Picture

Then came that new and strange device, the lend-lease policy. It was inaugurated, first in the hope that we could fight the war in absentia by furnishing Britain the tools, and secondly, to avoid the recurrence of that painful phenomenon, the war debts. And then, just when, it is not known, or exactly how, Secretary Hull was able to revive his policy of unhampered trade by introducing Article VII into the lend-lease agreements.

Briefly, Article VII provides:

"In the final determination of the benefits to be provided to the United States of America by the Government of..........in return for aid furnished under the Act of Congress of March 11, 1941, the terms and conditions thereof shall be such as not to burden commerce between the two countries, but to promote mutually advantageous economic relations between them and the betterment of world-wide economic relations. To that end, they shall include provision for agreed action by the United States of America and......, open to participation by all other countries of like mind, directed to the expansion, by appropriate international and domestic measures, of production, employment, and the exchange and consumption of goods, which are the material foundations of the liberty and welfare of all peoples; to the elimination of all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce; to the reduction of tariffs and other trade barriers; and, in general, to the attainment of economic objectives identical with those set forth in the Joint Declaration made on August 14, 1941, by the President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

"At an early convenient date, conversations shall be begun between the two governments with a view to determining, in the light of governing economic conditions, the best means of attaining the above-stated objectives by their own agreed action and of seeking the agreed action of other like-minded governments."

The chronology of America's approach to a peace founded on the principles of free economic intercourse is:

Autumn of 1940: The Atlantic Charter.
March, 1941: Lend-Lease law.
June, 1942: President's clarification of Article VII.

Secretary Hull believes that a sound and equitable international economic policy must be laid down before we can hope for international political stability. He will be, as he always has been, the champion of that view.

That is the internationalist view.

Washington's 'Second City' —The Pentagon

"This ain't a building—this is a city with a roof over it, that's what I calls it."

This was the remark of my dusky-skinned guide between bites of a ham sandwich which one of his colleagues had offered him as we made our journey through the maze of corridors in that amazing building, the Pentagon, in Washington, which houses the war department.

It is a city, for it houses no less than 40,000 workers. When they leave, they begin at 4:30 p. m., one group after another every ten minutes. Otherwise, all the busses and cabs and private cars that jam the labyrinth of highways, which cost $150,000 a mile to build, would never be able to take care of them.

I'm afraid I took the hard way. There were four policemen at the door and a huge receptionist desk. I found my proper stall, labeled "Press," and showed my pass to the girl. She had never heard of me or the Western Newspaper Union or the Blue Network, and she spelled my name wrong three times. However, I was eventually moved up to a waiting bench and finally a guide appeared and escorted me to the officer I wished to see.

We passed two beverage rooms on the way and as I was somewhat exhausted, I dropped into one for a soft drink and a cigar.

It took me 30 minutes from the time I got in the building to the time I reached my destination and some of the people there told me they had already been waiting longer than that.

The officer whom I was visiting had an inside office. He told me that if the lights ever went out, they would be in pitch blackness at noon, for, of course, there were no windows. I asked what would happen if the ventilating system broke down. He said he had not thought of that. I had—and I imagine the air would get pretty bad before very many minutes if the air conditioner ceased to work.

This huge institution is only a fraction of the expansion of Washington which has been caused by the war, but it is a concrete symbol of the tremendous clerical effort required to beat the Axis.

WHO'S NEWS This Week

By Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—That brief dispatch from Chile reporting that Berlin had recalled Ambassador Wilhelm Freiherr von Schoen is something more than a straw in the wind of World war politics. Baron Von Schoen has been so long and so deeply intrenched in Latin-American intrigue and so successful in covering his tracks and staying on the job that this four-line news item may well indicate a powerful Chilean swing to the Allied Nations.

Von Schoen Recall May Mean Chilean Swing to the Allies

His organization of subversion in Chile has been exposed and attacked time and again without so much as jolting the baron's monocle. He has been most elaborately wired in, not only with double-dealing politicians but with a hemisphere complex of industrial and financial interests and German-based cartels. If it is true that they finally have cut him loose from these moorings it surely means that some of the scaliest and toughest Axis tentacles in those parts have been severed.

His family is an old, established firm in international political conspiracy, in war and peace. His father, the late Baron Albrecht, circulated in Europe before the start of the first World war, trying to soften up the opposition, and Baron Wilhelm carried on over here in the Mexican machinations which helped get us in the war. He did this so smoothly that a few post-war years passed before his role, as an aide to Count Bernstorff, was understood and his activities fully appraised.

In 1914, he arrived in Washington, after several years as secretary of the German embassy in Japan. In an interview, which seemed to have been carefully premeditated, he told of Japan's bitter hatred of the United States, and her determination to annihilate us, sooner or later. The interview stirred up much angry discussion and brought the baron a sharp reprimand from President Wilson, with a hint that the statements had been intended to promote enmity.

He was married in 1916 to an American girl, highly placed socially, and, as secretary to the embassy, achieved deep penetration in the capital salon diplomacy at a time when our entry into the war was still in the balance. He returned to Germany, after the failure of the Mexican conspiracy and little was heard of him until the early days of the Hitler ascendancy.

AS THE army and navy propose to take over the colleges, their plan to teach the young how to shoot meets considerable academic opposition. Presidents Wriston of Brown and Dodds of Princeton are in agreement, but other prexies throughout the country register dissent on varying grounds. The main base of opposition is that liberal arts education and small colleges will be casualties.

Prexies Disagree On Army, Navy Taking Colleges

Dr. W. H. Cowley, president of Hamilton college, an active ally of the armed forces in collegiate mobilization in the past, finds the plan "quite inadequate." His is a college of about 450 students, and he has been a goal-keeper among college presidents against drives threatening the humanities and liberal arts in the colleges. As an educator, he has opposed early and extreme specialization and has stressed the importance of educating the "whole man."

With this strong conviction, he believed colleges, by proper adaptation in teaching, could help meet the demands for youth in the war and at the same time hold their ancient cultural franchise. A year ago, he circularized 200 upperclassmen of his college with a letter urging them to join the navy and has served as a member of the educational committee working with the army and navy. He says this committee opposed the new plan, about a month ago, without success.

Dr. Cowley became president of Hamilton in 1938, at the age of 39. As an expert and authority on vocational guidance, and in educational research, he has concluded that an organized and adequate personality, and the ability to think must take precedence over special skills.

If boys off to war can somehow cram a little sound education into their duffle bags, he thinks it will be all to the good—or, more precisely, he thinks it is urgently important that they do so. He is the most modern of educators, but has opposed such innovations as those of Dr. Hutchins and Stringfellow Barr, which would reduce the college course to two years.

When he was graduated from Dartmouth, he was voted the "most likely to succeed." He took his Ph. D. degree at the University of Chicago.

THE WORKING LIVER

For a number of years I found myself writing about the liver almost once every month. I pointed out the various jobs done by the liver such as manufacturing bile and then the various jobs done by the bile; the storing of sugar in the liver for future needs of the body; the importance of the liver in filtering out the harmful substances from the blood and the effects these harmful substances would have on the body tissues and body processes if they were not filtered out; the coloring and other materials in the liver used to help form the blood; that the liver was the largest organ in the body and had within it about one-quarter of all the blood of the body.

Dr. Barton

There was one point I mentioned once or twice but did not emphasize as I should have done and that was the advisability of having the liver tested for its working ability just as the heart, kidneys, stomach, blood vessels and other organs are tested. A test can be made showing the working ability of the liver by the use of substances taken by mouth or injected into a vein. The liver should remove these substances from the blood within a definite time if it is doing its work properly. One of these substances is hippuric acid.

In the Medical Journal of Australia, Drs. Margaret Henderson and B. Splatt report their results in 89 patients with liver disease, 86 with various other disorders, and 25 normal adults or patients recovering from minor ailments. Not only did the results show the extent to which the liver was damaged or unable to do its work, and the extent of heart damage, but it showed also how the damaged condition of the liver was allowing poisons to aggravate other conditions present in the body, such as pernicious anemia, tuberculosis and rheumatic arthritis.

In the treatment of a sluggish liver or a liver that is not doing its work properly, the physician prescribes special diets and various drugs.

However, we can keep the liver in good working condition by taking long deep breaths or by bending exercises, keeping the knees straight (both exercises squeeze the liver) and by avoiding overeating.

Mental Clinics Doing Good Work

A few years ago the statement was made that at the present rate of increase in the number of mental cases in any and all communities, within 50 years it would mean that at least one-half the population would require mental care. Naturally health departments everywhere are trying to prevent this condition by various means.

Today mental institutions by regular and special forms of treatment, by the help of visiting or resident specialists — throat, teeth, heart, lungs, and others—are able to send back to home and business about 6 in every 10 patients admitted.

Where the greatest progress is being made, however, is the recognition of the "early" symptoms and signs of mental ailments by the family and general physician, and the sending of these early cases to a mental or psychiatric clinic.

If the average taxpayer stopped to think of what it costs to keep just one patient in a mental institution, he would gladly pay a few cents extra yearly to prevent it.

Dr. Victor H. Vogel of the U. S. Health Service, as recorded by Science Service, states:

"It would not cost taxpayers a cent if their local health services added mental hygiene clinics to their child health clinics and other services. Such clinics would prevent mental breakdowns and so reduce the number of patients cared for in mental hospitals. Mental illness is the most expensive kind because of its long duration. If only three people a year are saved from becoming public charges in a mental institution, that means enough money saved to support a mental hygiene clinic for an entire year."

The saving of money is but the least of the benefits of a mental clinic. It cannot be compared with the saving of life and happiness.

Mental hygiene clinics help people whose lives are threatened by other dangers, too. A divorce can sometimes be prevented, a home kept intact or a suicide prevented.

Farm Girls

By R. R. WILLS

Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

IT WAS a swell idea and quite novel. Beulah and Candida had met in the New York office of Mortimer and Brown, attorneys. Both were stenographers. They became fast friends because they found something in common. That something was a desire to live on a farm in the country.

They talked about it incessantly. Then Beulah came through with the great idea.

"Let's work hard and save for a year. Then let's pool our resources, make a down payment on a small farm and—and live there!"

"But we don't know a thing about farming. We've both lived in the city all our lives. We couldn't make it pay."

"We could," Beulah said, "if we wanted to badly enough. There are books on how to do everything these days. Of course, if you're doubtful—"

"I'm not. I'd love to try it! Oh, I think it would be grand!"

So for a year the two girls worked and saved. They spent evenings on end at the library reading books on small-scale farming, and they hunted through the papers every day for bargains.

When spring came they took a week-end and drove up into the country and called on the farmers who had offered their homes for sale. The second place they visited proved exactly what they wanted. It was a small, white, tree-shaded house with a barn, a hennery containing a flock of 100 birds; a cow, a horse, a pig and several cultivated acres. The price was high, but Beulah had a sharp business head. She talked to old Mr. Naaman, and old Mr. Naaman finally agreed to take their savings as a down payment.

It was a swell idea. It proved to be the fulfillment of the girls' dreams. Best of all, what with the sale of eggs and fowls and milk and raising their own vegetables, they made a profit. The enterprise would likely have developed into something lasting, had it not been for Barnaby Xerxes.

He was a radio singer, suffering from a nervous breakdown. He had come to Hillside to recuperate. Beulah met him one day on a deserted section of country road. He was walking and she gave him a lift back to town in the delivery truck.

Beaulah was thrilled. During the days that followed she hated going out evenings and leaving Candida home alone, but, obviously, Barnaby and she couldn't take the other girl everywhere with them. After all, young lovers want to be alone once in a while.

Beulah was wondering how, when Barnaby proposed marriage and she accepted him, she was going to break the news to Candida. Poor Candida.

Two nights later Beulah delivered a half dozen fowl to the village church for its semi-annual supper, and was returning home earlier than she was expected. It was dark when she swung into the drive. Lights were on in the front room and through the window she saw Candida in his arms, kissing her. And Candida seemed to like it.

Beulah was furious. She stormed into the house.

"You—you vixen!" Beulah shrieked

Well, it looked like the end of the female partnership. A week passed. The girls went about their duties without speaking. Barnaby, being wise, stayed away. Both girls knew that sooner or later they would have to come to some agreement about the farm. They hated the idea of giving it up. But it was silly to think about keeping on under the present circumstances.

So Beulah made arrangements with Lawyer Stearns and one evening the girls set out in the delivery truck for his law office to write the final chapter in the adventure that had given life a meaning for both of them.

They were silent on the drive to town. Even when the lights went out for no explainable reason neither of them said anything. Silently Beulah got out, lifted the hood, discovered a fuse was blown, and having no spare, tried to produce a makeshift from a hairpin. She tried for quite a while without results. It was inky dark. Candida sat in the truck and was silent. She knew nothing about mechanics. It began to look as though there was nothing to do but continue on foot, when suddenly the connection was made and the lights flared up.

"Oh!" exclaimed Candida, clutching the truck door. She was staring up the road. In the glare of the headlights a man and a woman, evidently having come up in the darkness without knowing of the truck's presence, were standing in close embrace. Startled, they remained like a tableau for a moment, before leaping apart.

The man was Barnaby Xerxes. The woman was a girl about town whom both Beulah and Candida knew by reputation.

"Oh, shucks!" said Beulah, "let's go back and milk the cow and call it a day."

"Oh, let's!" cried Candida happily.

They did.

JESUS INSTRUCTS A GREAT TEACHER

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

Nicodemus came to our Lord when He was in Jerusalem for the Passover. Jesus had chosen six of His disciples, had performed His first miracle at Cana, and had made a brief visit to Capernaum, after which He came to Jerusalem for the feast.

In high and holy indignation He had driven the money changers out of the temple. The Pharisees who looked for the coming of the Messiah as a secular conqueror wondered at this new spiritual leader. It was probably as much on their behalf as his own that Nicodemus came to inquire of Jesus.

In answering his questions Jesus reveals the necessity, the nature, and the method of regeneration. The only entrance into the Christian life is by the door of the new birth. Regeneration is the act of God whereby the divine nature is imparted to the believing sinner and he becomes the child of God. He who has not entered by this way has not entered at all. He is still dead in trespasses and sins, without God and without hope (Eph. 2:1, 12).

Men seek to enter the household of God by almost any other means—culture, reform, character building—and neglect or reject God's way.

I. The Necessity of Regeneration (vv. 1-7).

Jesus was not unduly impressed by the dignity and high station of his visitor, nor by the visitor's courteous acknowledgment of His own position as a great teacher. With incisive boldness Jesus declared that this man, a cultured and distinguished ruler of the Jews, must be born again if he is to see the kingdom of God.

God is no respecter of persons. This "doctor of divinity" must be born again, just as was the illiterate fisherman. The requirements are the same for all, and the necessity as great in one level of society as in another.

The surprising thing is that this teacher of theology could be so ignorant of the one essential element of a real spiritual experience. He evidently thought he could bring his soul to eternal life by his own works, when in fact he was not able to give himself physical—let alone spiritual—life.

Two reasons are given by our Lord for the "must" of verse 7: (1) The kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, and cannot be entered by way of our human nature; and (2) "that which is born of the flesh is flesh" and is radically and essentially bad. To learn why the flesh is bad read Jeremiah 13:23 and Galatians 5:19-21. Scripture on this point is diametrically opposed to the teaching of unbelieving men. When such a difference arises be sure of this—God's Word is right. Follow it!

II. The Nature of Regeneration (vv. 8-13).

The new birth is a divine mystery, not fathomable by human reason. Those who insist that all spiritual truth be put through the little norm of their intelligence will never understand it or receive its blessing.

The striking illustration of the life-giving and energizing wind used by our Lord is most illuminating. Wind is unseen, but the results of its movement are evident. Even so the spiritual rebirth of men is an enigma to the worldly man, but even he can see its results in godly living.

Observe the clarity and simplicity of our Lord's teaching on what is undoubtedly the most profound subject in all the world. Let us follow His example and always "make the message clear and plain, Christ receiveth sinful men!"

III. The Method of Regeneration (vv. 14-16).

Many there are who ask Nicodemus' question, "How can these things be?" (v. 9). The answer is clear—"Only by faith in the Son of God, our Saviour."

Just as there was healing and life in a look at the uplifted serpent (Num. 21:8), so there is life for a look at the Crucified One. Faith receives God's perfect provision for sin.

John 3:16 may well be regarded as the greatest sentence in the greatest Book in the world. It presents the whole plan of salvation—its source, its ground, its recipients, its condition, and its result. It also reveals God's love—its "object, character, manifestation, purpose, and the result" (John W. Bradbury).

This glorious salvation is for all men—"whosoever"—but some reject it. Notice that God does not condemn them. Their own evil works and desires condemn them (vv. 17-20). God in His grace is ready and willing to save, but men love "darkness rather than light," for their works are evil.

Nicodemus came to Jesus by night — but he came. Have you come? Will you come now?

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

that not only will manufacturers of building supplies and contractors have a poor year in 1943 but there is liable to be more or less unemployment among carpenters, masons, painters and plasterers. The honeymoon of the building trades is over for the duration. After the War, however, building should come back with abang although prefabricated houses may put some union labor out of business. Hence, do not sacrifice good real estate or farms during 1943. Besides there may be legislature requiring the demolition of buildings over 75 years old.

NEW INDUSTRIES

1943 will see the greatest crop of new scientific developments that any year ever witnessed. These may revolutionize agriculture, industry and commerce even to a greater extent than the War will revolutionize governments, politics and human relations. Among the new industries I especially have in mind are SYNTHETICS for making artificial products better than the natural; PLASTICS for displacing metals and wood; FERTILIZERS and PHOTOSYNTHESIS to revolutionize agriculture; PHOTO-ELECTRIC CELLS to make machines think; PREFABRICATED houses; AIR-CONDITIONING; RADIO heating which will dispense with all radiators and oil burners; AUTOMATIC TYPING; UNWOVEN TEXTILES; ULTRA - MICRO-SCOP-RY which will greatly help the elimination of disease. NEW ALLOYS with marvelous strength and lightness; HARNESSING THE SUN, TIDES AND WINDS; COSMIC RAYS to supplement our power-houses; ATOMIC POWER; NEW MILITARY ARMAMENTS and COMMERCIAL AVIATION. Big profits are possible for alert businessmen and investors.

During 1943 our wives will begin to use dried eggs, dehydrated vegetables, frozen meats and other innovations. This does not mean that canned goods will be displaced, but I do forecast a revolution in connection with prefabricated houses, using plywood, aluminum, plastics and rubber; the buying, preserving and use of foods. There will be more experiments in national planning with Government guarantees but with the return of the Republicans to power after this Global War, we shall see less, rather than more, rationing, price fixing and regulations. Some time it will dawn upon the American voters that the Government cannot give the people anything that it does not first or last take away from them. There cannot be a leveling of living standards with a lowering of living standards.

FURTHER RATIONING

1943 will see more changes in civilian life than any year sincetheRevolutionary War. Wise are those who are first to prepare for these changes. When one studies the tremendous purchases which the Government is making, they make one shudder. For instance, the army recently purchased 30 million pounds of salt, 4 million pounds of mustard and 2 million lbs. of black pepper, simply to fill a few months' requirements. Dried fruits are bound to be short in 1943, especially prunes and dried apricots; while the kibosh will still be on stoves, bicycles, typewriters, hardware and rubber goods. I should not be surprised to see the rationing of dairy products, certain furniture, paper supplies, manufactured foods, farm equipment and possibly clothing and shoes during 1943. Some of my associates think there will be rationing of meats, eggs and cheese, but present statistics do not indicate the necessity of this. Certainly, there will be no rationing of cereals, citrus products and fresh fruits that cannot be shipped.

What is most needed is the rationing of labor union leaders and a lengthening of the working week as the labor week now averages only 42.5 hours even after over-time payments. Of course, this is a hot potato that the Administration does not like to touch. I forecast, however, that 1943 will see a real step in thisdirection. The power of the War Labor Board will either be curbed or the Board will become much more conservative. Manpower (including women) will be allocated. Private recruiting of labor may be curtailed. Farmers, manufacturers and other employers may be obliged to go to the U. S. Employment Service when desiring additional help while employees may be subject to the same regulations when desiring to change jobs.

POLITICAL SITUATION

Certainly we are entering 1943 with a much better political situation than existed a year ago. This does not mean that the new Congressmen are conservative—some are more radical in certain ways than their predecessors —but they will combine with the conservative Southern Democrats on questions of taxation and war matters. Looking back over 1942, it becomes evident that the tax situation was the most upsetting feature on business and investments. The markets were at their worst directly after the Morganthau recommendation of a 55% normal tax. When the House voted a 45% tax business began to pick up and even security prices had a real move when the Senate dropped the rate to 40%.

Recent visits to Washington convince me that the Treasury has temporarily lost its influence with Congress and that the 1943 tax bill will be written by Congress itself and will be fairly conservative. I am much interested in reports that Honorable James Byrne, the new Economic Dictator, is to be put in charge. For the first time, it is reasonable to hope that a sales tax—perhaps under some other name—will be enacted in 1943. The farmers will continue to have as much influence in the 1943 Congress as heretofore, but the honeymoon of the labor and other blocs is temporarily at an end. 1943 will see very few wage raises and certain labor leaders will be put in the dog-house.

MONEY RATES

There may be a slight increase in short-term money rates during 1943; but there will be little or no change in the rates that banks charge their customers. Money rates are now managed by the Government even more closely than the prices of commodities. The idea, however, that money rates will always continue low is just as foolish as were the forecasts of ten years ago that moneywould permanently remain on a high basis. The penduleum has always swung and it will continue to swing after World War II is over. Whether or not banks should borrow from the Federal Reserve in order to buy Government bonds will be debated during 1943. Banks that do this will temporarily make a profit, but whether this will work out as a profit or loss in the end is questionable. In the long run, very few banks, corporations or individuals make money by borrowing money.

The bonded debt of the Federal Government is now $90 billions, or an increase of $67 billions since the Roosevelt Administration came into power By the end of 1943, this debt may stand at about $150 billions. Some of it, of course, will be raised by selling additional Victory Bonds to the public and institutions. The amount will largely depend upon whether or not compulsory saving is adopted. I forecast, however, that the major portion of this money must be raised from the banks and chiefly from the large banks. This, of course, means inflation sooner or later.

CROP SITUATION

With normal weather conditions there is every reason to believe that more crops will be raised in this country in 1943 than in 1942 and that farmers should benefit accordingly. On the other hand, there always is the possibility of bad weather conditions including droughts and floods. The large amount of wheat, corn and other grains in storage, however, should help offset any crop failure in 1943.

The wheat yield for 1942 will be about one billion bushels, second only to the crop of 1915, while the corn crop for 1942 will break all cerords, amounting to about 3,250,000,000 bushels. The coton crop for 1942 amounts to only 13,400,000 bales, but this is perfectly satisfactory considering the large amount of cotton in storage. Without doubt, the theory of "winning the peace with food" is sound. Farmers have a legitimate reason for expecting good treatment during the remainder of the War. After the War, their celebration will be over.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION

Readers will remember that our war production will not reach its height until well into 1943. The plants manufacturing big bombers are not yet completed, shipbuilding is just getting into its stride and thousands of factores are still re-tooling. 1943, however, should witness a transition from construction to production. I, therefore, visualize a drastic re-shuffle of subcontractors, of labor and of communities in general. This means hardships for management and for men and women workers. Some communities now doing well will become ghost towns; while other sleeping cities will become busy beehives.

Taking all in all, industrial production should climb into the ground during 1943, averaging about 210% of the 1935-39 level. This would leave only about $70 bililons for domestic consumer goods, compared with about $78 billions in 1942. This means that only durable goods industry will be available for civilian use in 1943. This estimate is on a per unit basis with no allowance for price inflation.

FAILURES

Business failures in 1942 amounted to $105 millions and I fear these will be increased during 1943. If so, it will be due to manufacturers being unable to secure necessary raw materials or substitutes and merchants being unable to get a supply of goods. In addition to the normal casualties and those additional ones due to the War, I expect a certain "birth-control movement" in business. The Government may require new businesses, farmers desiring to increase acreage and especially employers desiring to increase their sales forces to get permits. Sales organizations would be the first to be treated to "birth control". We may also expect to see in 1943 experiments in "zoned markets" by limiting the distance that goods can be shipped.

The paid leaders of the farm groups are fighting ceiling prices on farm products, but I believe the farmers would be willing to have a ceiling provided they could also be assured a floor. I am certain that farmers are more reasonable and far more patriotic than the lobbyists in Washington who pretend to represent them. There will be no decline in purchasing power. Men, and especially women, in the farming and munitions districts, will have more money even after the payment of taxes than they have ever had before. The delivery of goods should be easier in 1943 than in 1942 due to an improved tire and gasoline situation.

WAR OUTLOOK

It must be realized that a great improvement in the resources of the Axis powers has taken place during 1942. Where they were short of raw materials they now—with the exception of a very few commodities—have a surplus supply. For instance, in 1939 the Axis powers had no rubber and today they have 90% of the world's supply; in 1925 they had only 25% of the bauxite, 7% of the iron ore, 9% of the tin ore, 10% of the manganese ore, 8% of the lead ore and 6% of the world's flax. Today the Axis powers have 66% of the bauxite, 44% of the iron ore, 73% of the tin, 35% of the manganese, 21% of the lead, 35% of the flax and a large percentage of the world's oil. These figures show that time is not necessarily on our side. The success of the United Nations depends more on making every sacrifice.

The best opinions are that Germany will be brought to her knees, probably through the lack of oil, in late 1943 or early in 1944 and that it will take another year to finish Japan. As Germany does not want to see Japan a world power, she may endeavor to join the United Nations in putting Japan back where she was 40 years ago. This would mean not only cleaning the Japanese out of China, the Phillipines and the Dutch East Indies, but also making them give up Manchukuo, Korea and Formosa. Of course, the present actions of our Navy in the Pacific are merely to keep the Japanese from pouncing on Russia at Vladivostock. They are no part of the coming campaign to clean up Japan. All of this means that the general war news during 1943 will be better than that of 1942.

CONCLUSION

It is probable that 1943 will witness further cuts in civilian business, that victory models and standardization will be compulsory, that manpower will be rationed as well as commodities, that a sales tax will be inaugurated, that subsides will be extended, and that inflation, like a great glacier, will continue slowly to push up prices; but what of it We grow by striving, —not by arriving. Character gains during 1943 will by far offset all losses and inconveniences. This Global War will be a great blessing to all the world by bringing about that spiritual awakening which is the only solution to our troubles.

Vital to Liberty
Conserve its Use

The New Year, 1943, is "the end of the beginning." A greater burden of toil and conflict lies ahead. And while America's sons fight in desert and jungle, telephone communication lines at home will carry an ever-increasing load of calls vital to Victory.

Telephone materials are still going to battle in the form of guns and shells. So, to get the most out of our present equipment, we will continue to need your help in keeping long distance lines clear of all but necessary calls. And remember, the greater the distance you talk, the greater the chance of your call getting in the way of important war calls.

We are most grateful for the patriotic response during 1942, to our requests for voluntary reduction of unnecessary long distance calls. It helped us provide the services so badly needed in those critical times.

For the "duration," we can continue to best serve the telephone needs of all by serving our country first.

WE WILL KEEP THE FAITH... ★★★

TODAY, one year and twenty-four days after Pearl Harbor, 442 former Alabama Power Company employees, three of them women, are in the Army, the Navy and Marines. They are in Alaska, Africa, Australia, England and elsewhere.

All of them were skilled in their respective lines of work; each had a pride in performing his duties well. The satisfaction of being a member of an organization which in peace or war must meet a high standard of excellence was theirs. When they return they'll want to know that the organization of which they were a part, and which they again will want to join, did its part in keeping the wheels of war production turning without pause; that as a group of loyal Americans it cooperated wholeheartedly with other phases of the war effort; that it did not discard its ideal of development of Alabama resources so that opportunity would grow in Alabama; that it maintained its belief in the American tradition of fair reward for honest effort.

We are keeping the faith with them. We will keep the faith.

Mrs. R. M. Tucker :-: Phone 32 or 288-W

Mrs. Erle Ellis has returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bentley in Springfield, Tenn.

Paul Gowan visited in Montgomery last Sunday.

Jimmie Bell made a social and business trip to Atlanta, last week end.

Mrs. L. D. Popwell is still confined to her bed. Her friends hope sincerely that she will soon be up again.

Special notice to all P. T. A. members! The High School P. T. A. will meet next Tuesday afternoon at the High School at 4 o'clock. All members or should be members are urged to be present!

The Jr. G. A. will meet Monday afternoon immediately after school in the Jr. Department of the Baptist church. Mrs. Tucker asks that every Jr. G. A. be present as this is a very important meeting to begin our New Year of G. A. work and also to discuss our promotion program. Please be there.

The Baptist W. M. S. was called to order Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, by the president, Mrs. J. P. Hayes. The meeting opened with the hymn "To The Work" being sung in unison. Final reports, for the past years work were made by the various committee chairmen and all old business completed. After the business session the new officers were installed. The installation services being conducted by Mrs. Hayes who began with prayer, and then gave each new officer her duties for the coming year. The service was closed with prayer by Mrs. W. W. Wingard.

The Circles this year are to be in zones and each zone group was read by a member in each group, after which the meeting was adjourned.

Meeting places of Circles Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Circle 1 Mrs. J. W. Hayes.
Circle 2 Mrs. Percy Minor.
Circle 3 Mrs. Walter Fleck.
Circle 4 Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway.
Circle 6 Mrs. Jimmie Taylor.

Pvt. Carson Williams of the Army Air Base, Jackson, Miss., spent the Christmas holidays with his brother and sister, W. C. Williams and Mrs. G. L. Adams in Selma and his mother, Mrs. W. L. Williams, Maplesville, R-2

The Grammar School P. T. A. convened Tuesday at 4 o'clock with Mrs. Mark Tucker, presiding in the absence of Mrs. Wade, calling the meeting to order. The business session was held after which the meeting was turned over to the program chairman, Mrs. Curry Thomas, who presented Mrs. J. E. Gowan as guest speaker. Mrs. Gowan gave an interesting talk on "What the P. T. A. Means". Mrs. Reedy Taylor conducted the study course in "Foods we should know," Mrs. Tucker gave a report on the accomplishments of the P. T. A. up to date, and Mrs. Porch, music instructor presented members of the School Glee Club in several lovely numbers. Following the program the room count was made and the meeting adjourned.

Friends in Clanton, of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Burgess and family, regret very much their moving away. Our loss is Selma's gain and we sincerely wish for them lots of happiness in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Marcus spent the past Sunday in Maplesville.

We are very happy to report that, Mrs. Lizzie Dennis, who has been very sick is much better and is staying with her granddaughter, Mrs. J. T. Cobb for awhile.

Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Gowan of Huntsville, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Gowan during the holidays.

Miss Marie Bell from Bessemer spent last week with the Reeves family.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton and children visited their parents, in Tuscaloosa, during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. James Parrish were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Jones recently.

Major Herman L. Harris and Norman Harris of Napier Field, spent last week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Harris, of South Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. (Ben) Tucker had as their guests last week end the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilkins of Birmingham.

Corporal Norris A. Lewis, who is at present stationed at Camp Pickett, Virginia, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lewis.

Mrs. Lewis was unable to accompany her husband due to her secretarial position at Camp Pickett, Station Hospital. She will be remembered by many in Clanton as Miss Violet Eastin, one of the teachers at the S. D. A. Church School during the term of 1940-'41.

The young couple were maried on the evening of October 10, 1942, at a church wedding near Ford, Virginia. They are most happy in giving their united efforts to their country.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Klinner and Mr. W. C. Dickerson are spending this week in Chicago attending the Furniture Market.

Pvt. Roland Teel is back in Miami Beach, Fla., after a month's stay in California. He is mighty glad to be back in the east again.

Alabama Mills

There is to be a new U. S. Army base hospital at Tuscaloosa, located between the Forest Lake Road and the Hargrove Road. The city is to construct a water main to the site.

FLOYD NEWS

Sunday was our regular preaching day and there was a large crowd out for Sunday School and church service.

Our pastor Brother Wilkins brought us two mighty fine sermons.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. William had as their dinner guests Sunday Brother Wilkins and Wife and Mrs. O. A. Taylor, Miss Bettie Courtney.

Mrs. Hilton Prickett and Miss Jessie Murl Boyd from Montgomery visited homefolks over the week end.

Mr. Cecil Huett and wife visited Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Huett Sunday.

Mrs. Driver was the guest of Mrs. John Hudman Sunday.

We have on our sick list this week Mr. Willie Patterson. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

The singing at J. M. William's Sunday p.m. was enjoyed by a large crowd. Everyone remember our Singing on the 3rd Sunday afternoon. We invite all that will to come and be with us.

BUT QUICK

The insurance office was rung up in the early hours of the morning by a very excited woman who poured out her frantic story.

"I want to insure my house," she said. "Can I do it over the 'phone?"

"I'm afraid not. Perhaps we'd better send a man along."

"I've got to do it immediately, I tell you," came the frantic voice. "The place is on fire."

Round an' a Round

Harry—I got round shouldered on the job last week.

Carrie—That's terrible. What did you do?

Harry—I opened circular letters.

Sure Sedative

Mr. Brown—If the baby won't sleep, bring her to me and I'll sing to her.

Mrs. Brown—It won't work. I've already threatened her with that.

BEAR MARKET

"Yes, sir, thirty years ago all the land around here sold for five dollars an acre."

"And what does it sell for now?"

"Taxes."

Well You Made It

Wife—I thought the salesman said this was supposed to be a feather bed.

Husband—Well, roll over—it's my turn to sleep on the feather.

Calendar Troubles

Joe—I keep thinking this is Monday.

Moe—Why, it is!

Joe—I know, that's why I keep thinking it is.

INFORMATION PLEASE

Here is an object lesson in the delicate art of evasion. But don't try it, because it doesn't work.

Bill—Say, do you want a job?

Sam—No, I'm working.

Bill—I didn't know that. What are you doing?

Sam—Oh, this and that.

Bill—When?

Sam—Now and then.

Bill—Where?

Sam—Oh, here and there.

Household Casualty

Sam—I saw the doctor going to your house? Who's sick?

Betty—My brother walked through the screen door and strained himself.

Baby Talk

Betty—What did the baby say to the highchair?

Bobby—I give up. What?

Betty—He said: "I'm fed up on you."

Victory Lunches

Mid-day meals with that go-and-get-it spirit are those that are properly balanced, and have plenty of eye-appeal. The days are gone when you can make a quick dash to the corner grocery and bring home lamb chops to broil quickly. Gone, too, are days when you had loads of leftovers from yesterday's roast.

But, homemakers, you need not be foiled, rather let your ingenuity devise new ways of getting nutrition requirements into your menus. Use protein foods like peas, beans, eggs, and vitamin B1 foods like cereals as extenders to make up for meat. Your New Year victory menu parade starts off with a meat loaf "stretched" with oatmeal.

Savory Meat Loaf.
(Serves 8)

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground pork
¾ cup oatmeal
1 egg, beaten
½ onion, grated
¾ cup milk
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons catsup
1½ teaspoons salt

Combine ingredients in order given. Mix lightly until well blended. Place in a greased loaf pan, patting smooth. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) about 1 hour. Makes approximately 2½-pound meat loaf.

Little Luncheons.
(Serves 6)

2 cups sifted enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 to 4 tablespoons shortening
⅔ to ¾ cup milk
¾ cup ground ham
6 poached eggs
Creamy Cheese Sauce

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add milk to form a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Roll dough out into a long rectangle 8 inches wide and ⅛ inch thick. Cut in half lengthwise and spread each half with ham and roll jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges well. Cut rolls into 8-inch pieces. Form each piece into rings on baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors, cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 10 to 12 minutes. Place a poached egg in the center of each ring and serve with Creamy Cheese Sauce.

Creamy Cheese Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup grated cheese

Melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually add milk, stirring constantly. Boil sauce until it thickens. Cook 3 minutes. Add seasonings. Add cheese and stir over low heat until cheese is melted.

Baked Corn and Sausage.
(Serves 6 to 8)

¾ pound link or bulk sausage
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2½ cups whole kernel corn and juice
2½ cups canned tomatoes and juice
1 cup oven-popped rice

If bulk sausage is used, form into shape of link sausages. Brown sausage in heavy frying pan. Remove sausage and brown onions and pepper in fat remaining in pan. Add flour and seasonings and blend. Add corn and tomatoes and simmer until juice has partially evaporated (about ½ hour). Pour into casserole; arrange browned sausages on top like the spokes of a wheel. Sprinkle oven-popped rice on top. Cook in moderate oven (400 degrees) about 15 minutes until oven-popped rice is golden brown.

As golden as sunshine and as welcome is this luncheon souffle. Rich in vitamin A carrots and cheese, this dish will boost your resistance to colds and infection this winter.

Rice-Carrot Souffle.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups of cold cooked rice
2 beaten eggs
2 cups of milk
1 teaspoon of sugar
1 cup of grated cheese
½ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of cooked and riced carrots

Make a thin custard of eggs, milk and salt. Add the cheese and, when melted, add the rice which has been boiled in salted water, drained and shaken dry. Pour into a buttered baking dish, cover with the riced carrots, a fine sprinkling of sugar and grated cheese. Bake over a pan of water about three-quarters of an hour in a slow oven.

Date-Pecan Pie.
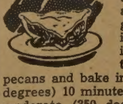
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

Pastry for 1 9-inch pie
1 cup unbroken pecan meats
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
½ cup dates, cut
1 cup dark corn syrup
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt



Line pie plate with pastry. Arrange pecan meats over the pastry. Cream butter and sugar together thoroughly, then add remaining ingredients, beating well. Pour into unbaked pastry shell over the pecans and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool. May be served with whipped cream.

Lynn Says:

Cans and Jars: You will have noticed that your grocery shelves present a different picture than in the past. Instead of all food being put up in cans, some food has been preserved in glass.

In those foods placed in cans, the government has decreed three different sized cans.

A number two sized can, one of the standard sizes yields 2½ cups and will serve four to five people. The number 2½ sized can averages 3½ cups and feeds six people.

Largest food can is number 10, usually used by institutions and restaurants. This large size is not usually practical for a family of less than eight since it yields 12 cups and would last for at least two meals.

A few additional sized cans are allowed in the case of canned meats, fish, baby food, and citrus juices.

BRIGHT blue is the color keynote in this bathroom. Blue is used for towels and bath mat stripes and for a painted box cornice. The curtains are of coarse white muslin tufted with old-fashioned candlewicking in bright blue.

Cut the curtains the length and width desired with ample allowance for shrinkage and baste the hems in. Next place the material flat on a table and mark diagonal lines on the goods with a yardstick and pencil, spacing the lines four inches apart to form the plaid pattern. Now, thread a tufting needle with four strands of candlewick yarn, and work along these ruled lines using the thread double, as at the upper right. Also, sew the hem in this manner; then clip the stitches, as shown at lower right and dip in water. Spread out smooth to dry but do not iron. Finish the tops with a rod casing.

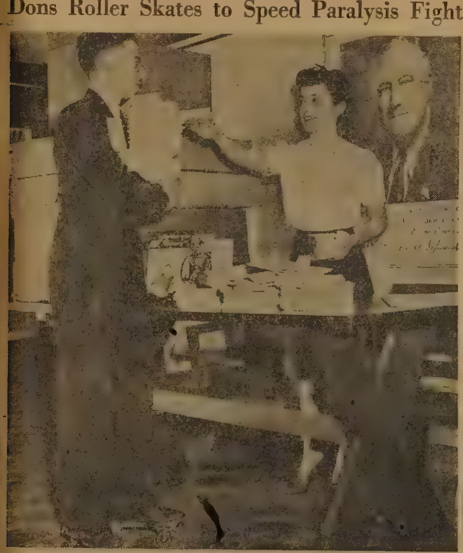
Telling of Britain's Deadly 'Mosquito'

The earl of Athlone, governor general of Canada (left) and the Hon. C. D. Howe, Canadian minister of munitions and supply, listen as Geoffrey de Haviland, test pilot and son of the famed plane designer, tells them of the maneuverability of the "Mosquito" bomber, now in mass production in Canada. The bomber, which is shown below, is said to be the fastest in the world.

Mystery Gun Given Test in Los Angeles

One of America's newest weapons, an automatic, pneumatic gun, capable, its manufacturers claim, of firing 12,000 rounds a minute, was demonstrated before army, navy and marine officials in Los Angeles. No powder is used, there is no noise, no flash, and no recoil. The gun's inventor, W. B. Hale, is shown at the right.

Dons Roller Skates to Speed Paralysis Fight



The quicker these greeting cards for the President's birthday go out the more time people will have to send their contributions to the White House, says the office boy of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. To speed things up he has donned roller skates, which enable him to cover twice as much ground around the office as ordinarily. Celebrations of every kind will be held throughout the country between January 15 and 30, when the President's birthday climaxes the campaign.

Rationing Mixup

The OPA and the customs bureau found themselves at loggerheads over the 195 pounds of green coffee bought by Mrs. Aubrey Ramm at a customs sale in Seattle, for $18. The OPA notified her there was some question whether she could take delivery of the coffee due to rationing regulations against sale of green coffee. The customs office told her to take the coffee. But Mrs. Ramm decided to leave it in the warehouse until she hears from the OPA again. Here she is looking over her coffee purchase.

Hostess Let Herself In For an Awkward Moment

At a Christmas gathering the shy young hostess, in an effort to be genial, led aside the comparative stranger, whose name, somehow, eluded her.

"Look," she said, "I've paired you off with that lady in the corner. Will you take her in to dinner?

"My husband says she's a bit of an old frump, but she's got lots of money, and one of his clever friends has just married her for it, so you can understand we must be nice to her."

"I'm sorry," said the guest, "but I am the clever friend in question."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The average car owner drove 9,000 miles in 1941, clicked off at the rate of about 6,700 miles a year in 1942 before gasoline rationing was nationalized. Essential driving is now pegged at an average of 5,000 miles annually and the "A" rationing book allows for 2,880 miles of driving a year.

Don't always be content with an "on the wheel" inspection. Have your tires removed from the wheels, spread and closely checked. You'll be surprised what this inspection sometimes shows in the way of internal carcass injuries. Catch them in time and save mileage.

In 1941 a total new supply of rubber amounting to 1,441,000 tons, 310,000 or 21% consisted of reclaimed rubber.

O GOD OF LOVE, O KING OF PEACE

O God of love, O King of Peace.
Make Wars throughout the world to cease.
The wrath of sinful man restrain,
Give Peace, O God give peace again

Remember Lord, thy works of old.
The wonders that our fathers told,
Remember not our sin's dark stain,
Give Peace, O God give peace again.

Whom shall we trust but thee, O Lord?
Where rest but on thy faithful word
None ever called on thee in vain,
Give Peace, O God give peace again.

Where Saints and Angels dwell above
All hearts are knit in holy love.
O Bind us in that heavenly chain,
Give Peace, O God give peace again.

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HIGH SCHOOL

By Jesse Culp

News around Isabella this week centers around mid-term tests, because that's what everybody has their minds on (we hope). Anyway, now that we are just in a new year, and are about to enter a new semester, it might be well for all of us to do a little resolving.

The Juniors entertained the Seniors with a campfire party last Thursday night. The party was held around a large bonfire in a nearby pasture. A number of lively games were played, along with a little mentionable fun furnished by Robert Cummings and Jack Mizzell.

Refreshments were served in the form of fruits, candy and cookies. Apparently, everyone had a lot of fun.

In the last meeting, the senior F. F. A. members voted on boys in the Sr. II Class who were to receive the pigs in the pig chain this year. The boys were selected on their interest, ability, and experience. Earl Wright, Erman Cleckler, Jack Mizzell, and Robert Cummings were the boys selected.

As you know, this pig chain was started by the local chapter last year, when two purebred gilts were given to members of the chapter. These members then gave back two pigs each from the first litters, making four pigs to give away this year. In this way, the chain will grow fast, and will continue the efforts of the F. F. A. to put more purebred livestock in the community.

Wednesday morning of last week the bus drivers and their student helpers carried their hill-billy program to Maplesville High School. The program was similar to the chapel program they put on at Isabella recently, only a little better. The programs consist of quite a few songs, string music, and original speeches. This program is entirely original, including one of the songs.

The group taking part consists of H. C. Gray, Melvin Devaughn, Lomer Williams, Harold Scott, Charles Ray Scott, Erman Cleckler, and Jesse Culp.

John Will Owen a member of the Senior class was called to the Army this week. We hate to see him leave, yet we are proud of him. Several boys had to appear for examination the first of the week.

The Isabella School Journal has a policy of sending a paper free to all former I. H. S. students in the service. The list is growing everyday. We might well call that list our honor roll.

Several former students visited school last week. They were: Sara Matthews, Sara Ellen Middlebrooks, Ruby Mae Mizzell, and Naomi Culp. Ruby Mae and Naomi are both graduates of last year. We were glad to see these old schoolmates back . . . The Isabella basketballers again triumphed last Friday when they won a return game with Maplesville 17 to 15 Several weeks ago when we played Maplesville, the score was 29 to 27. That two point leal must be a jinx:

COMPLETION OF REGISTRATION OF EIGHTEEN YEAR OLD MEN

All men who have attained the eighteenth anniversary of the date of their birth must now be reyistered by Selective Service. Those men who have become eighteen since the last registration of June 30, 1942, should be registered before the end of December of this year.

The proclamation of the Sixth Registration which is now in progress requires that all men who become eighteen in the last six months of this year be registered in the corresponding week set aside for that purpose. "Every man who has become eighteen years of age should make sure that he has been properly registered with Selective Service," states Brigadier General Ben M. Smith, Alabama State Director of Selective Service.

Persons who hereafter become eighteen must present themselves to the Selective Service Local Board on the day they become eighteen. The proclamation of the President states that ('during the continuance of the present war, those who were born on or after January 1, 1925, shall be registered on the day they attain the eighteenth anniversary of the day of their birth: provided, that is such anniversary falls on Sunday or a legal holiday, their registration shall take place on the day following that is not a Sunday or a legal holiday."

The law requires that all Selective Service registrants carry their registration certificates with them at all times. It is also required that the registrant have his classification card. This information is reviewed by law enforcement officers and by employers.

All male citizens of the United States and other male persons residing in the United States between the ages of eighteen and sixty-five must now be registered with Selective Service.

Local Board No. 1 and 2.

REVIEWS AND PREVIEWS

I had the opportunity of talking with Mrs. McCormick for thirty minutes. She told me that actually the United States is the only great power on earth fighting a two-front war. "We have bases all over the world," she said. But she made one remark which struck me as more significant than all the others. She repeated the remark in her lecture later that evening. With all the sincerity of a woman who has seen Europe go down the road to destruction, she said, "Hate of Hitler and the Axis won't win this war for us, but love of America will."

He sad that merely to gain attention. Then he delivered his real message. "Don't underestimate the German soldier of today," he said. The boy who was just a few years ago being taught the Nazi principles of race superiority and Nazi domination is now on the battlefield, fighting for Hitler. Germany is not ready to fall apart. The German soldier fears what may happen to him should he lose. He wil not give up easily."

James B. Reston, a foriegn correspondent who was in Great Britain, also says not to underestimate the German will to win. He mentions this example: When German planes were shot down in Britian, the pilots, if they were conscious when they landed, would get to their feet and would greet their captors with the Nazi salute and "Heil Hitler!" This attitude was so common among the pilots that the British Intelligence officers sent to examine the men finally issued an order that the pilots, before being brought in for questioning, remove their boots in order to destroy the effectiveness of the heel-clicking Nazi salute.

That's how badly the Germans want to win. We'll have to want to win even more badly if we are to be victorious. Put that in your memory and don't forget it.

Louis Fischer, the tall, slightly bald, wandering journalist who specializes in Russia and India, was the second speaker n Birmingham's Town Hall Series. Fischer came to Birmingham to speak on the "Riddle of India". But he did not talk vely long about India's troubles. He soon began discussing the next moves of Adolf Hitler. He also told why, in his opinion, Hitler attacked Russia. "Hitler," Fischer said, "realized that, when he could not bomb Britain into submission, ne could not win the war. But, rather than let the British or the Americans win it, he would be content to fight a war of attrition--of fighting back and forth, with neither side winning a decisive victory. Russia was Hit logical choice. There he could f a long, drawn-out war. There could prepare again, while Japan the attention of America."

College students have the habit sleeping through assembly progra Birmingham-Southern students are exceptions. But there was one p gram which they did not sleep throu It was Dr. Ben Wood's discussion "The Airplane and Geography". Wood brought maps and charts w him. And he brought along the lightening, though startling facts.

Dr. Wood is a nadvocate of the p ar-projection type of map-making. does not like the old, commonly-u Mercator projection which you an use to follow the course of the w He says that the maps we use are o of-date. They are inaccurate misleading.

Instead, he suggests that we l at the polar-projection type. brought them along and pointed that, in airplane flying time, there only thirty minutes difference in trip from Tokyo to San Diego, C fornia, and a trip from Tokyo to M neapolis, Minnesota. Likewise, th is only six minutes difference n a from Moscow to New York and a from Moscow to Minneapolis. N from Minneapolis to New York is over a thousand miles on our ma and that is several hours flying ti But when you fly on the arcs o great globe-circle, you have someth else. You have the reason why here in Alabama, hundreds of mi inland, must have blackouts just the people on the coast must blackouts. You have the reason w we are organizing demolition squa You have the reason why we m have Civilian Defense. Don't sn at these efforts. They may save yo life someday. This is war. And are very much in it.

TO PROTECT YOUR RIGHT TO DRIVE

DON'T WAIT
Avoid the Rush
SEE US
AT ONCE

Are YOU risking your right to drive—to get tires, even gasoline? Many local car owners are—by delaying having their tires inspected. You MUST have your tires inspected no later than January 31st. Many will put it off until the last minute—there will be a big rush at the deadline.

To keep your car operating, your government is trying to make it possible for you to get tires, whether you have an A, B or C book. But you must take proper care of your tires, and inspection helps you to do this by IMMEDIATELY showing whether your tires need repairing, or whether you need recapping or NEW TIRES.

It's your duty to get inspection early and to get the repairs, recaps or new tires you need, while recapping and service facilities are not crowded to the limit. So, don't put off inspection another day. Protect your right to drive. Get our inspection NOW!

How The Victory Tax Deductions Are Made

In response to numerous requests for information about the Victory Tax which is now being deducted from all pay rolls, we are printing the following facts about the law. This is a very breif treatment and many details are necessarily omitted. Any one desiring further information can get same from hs employer, but the following tables will show the amount of tax a person will have to pay. It is well to keep in mind that the sole permissable deduction is the $624.00 a year allowance by the law. This does not mean however, that no tax is withheld until after $624.00 has been earned during the year. Taxes are deducted on all incomes which would amount to more than the minimum if that rate of income is paid for the entire year. Briefly this means that tax must be paid on all earnings in excess of $12.00 a week regardless of the period of employment. If a man works three days in a week at $5.00 a day, he would have to pay tax on $3.00. The rate of deduction is approximately 5%, but certain tables of computation are used in figuring the exact tax to be withheld. Below are tables which cover incomes to $100.00 a week.

For weekly pay-roll period

If the wages are over	But not over	The amount of tax to be withheld shall be
$12	$16	$0.10
16	20	.30
20	24	.50
24	28	.70
28	32	.90
32	36	1.10

C. FENN JONES RESIGNS FROM RATIONING BOARD

C. Fenn Jones, who was appointed head of the County Rationing Board when the office was first created and who has served tirelessly since that time, has resigned from the Board.

Mr. Jones has worked day and night for more than a year and thinks that it is time for him to take a rest and let someone else takeover for a while. His successor had not been named at this writing.

Mt. Nebo News

Services were not very well attended Sunday, either Sunday School or night services. Next Sunday will be preaching day at Mt. Nebo, and we wish to urge everyone to attend that possibly can.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Gilliland and son Harold visited Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Culp Sunday.

Mrs. Wilson Atkinson, Marvorene Henley and Jesse Culp were Sunday dinner guests of Alee Culp.

We are happy to welcome Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Foshee into Mt. Nebo Community. Mr. and Mrs. Foshee are former residents of this community, and moved back from Birmingham, Alabama where they haved lived for some time. May their stay here be filled with happiness and prosperity.

Olivia Gilliland and Sam Wilson spent Sunday afternoon with Gertie Mae Culp.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Culp visited Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Smith and Hollis Saturday night.

We regret to announce that Mrs. A. C. Patterson has been operated on for appendicitis at the St. Margaret's Hospital in Montgomery. We hope that she may soon be able to return home, and enjoy good health again.

Mrs. J. D. Culp, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Henley, Hoyt Henley, and Seth Gilliland were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. John Culp.

Alee and Jesse Culp ate supper Sunday night with Marvorene Henley.

What's the matter with the "wood sawing giving" this year. Let's stir up a little of this sociable activity before all of our boys get in the service.

ROCKY MOUNT

Brother Simpson from Birmingham is to be with us Tuesday night, Jan. 19th, for a service. Come and join us for a time of good fellowship. He is a good preacher and singer.

GRAND JURY TO MEET

Grand Judy meets on February 9th. Criminal Court begins March 1st. These dates were announced by Judge Arthur Glover this week.

ODT Representative To Be At City Hall

Truck owners or truck operators in Clanton and vicinity whose trucks are not classified as farm vehichles, can discuss their problems with an examiner from the Office of Defense Transportation who will be at the City Hall next Tuesday and Wednesday, January 19th and 20th."

Those truck operators who feel they are justified in filing an appeal for additional mileage and gasoline should take advantage of this opportunity as tires, parts and gasoline cannot be purchased without a Certificate of War Necessity after January. There may be some few truck owners who have not received their Certificates of War Necessity, and if so they should contact this representative of the O D T at the City Hall next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rationing News

Your local Rationing board now has a telephone for your convenience it is number 114.

Ration Book One

The last day you may apply for and get ration book one is January 15, 1943. Please do not ask for Book 1 after that date. Every one must have this book before they can obtain Book 2. Watch this column next week for instsructions for obtaining Book 2.

Tires

There has been much said and written that every one is now eligible for automobile tires of some type. This is correct, but the local board must consider the part each person is contributing toward the war effort. In granting purchase certificates for tires those who are contributing to the war effort, must have first consideration. Regardless of how many tires are needed, or how many applications are on file, the local board is allowed to issue just so many tires depending upon the quota for that week.

The Board

The board appreciates the cooperation of the public in not contacting its indvidual members other than at regular meetngs. Any time you need anything file an application with the board and it will recieve the very best consideration from the board at its next meeting.

Gasoline

Requests for additional gasoline for specific, or special purposes, are coming before the board at every meeting. Gasoline is issued upon the application for one of the eleven points listed below. In asking for gasoline be sure that your need can be classified under one of the provisions listed below:

1. To obtain necessary medical attention or to procure necessary food or suppliess, when for person who receives no ration.
2. To move a motor vehicle or boat in cases where a bona fide change of residence takes place or to return such vehicle or boat to a place of storage.
3. To move a vehicle or boat to a place of storage upon repossession or seizure by a government authority.
4. To deliver a vehicle or boat after bona fide sale thereof.
5. To move a vehicle or boat from one sales establishment or place of storage to another (no ration may exceed 5 gallons per month, per vehicle for this purpose.)
6. To operate a motor vehicle in course of manufacture or assembly.
7. To transport a scientific expedition.
8. To carry persons to and from the polls for the purpose of voting in public election.
9. To operate a vehicle for the purpose of bona fide tests and experiments contributing to the War Effort.
10. To demonstrate a motor vehicle or boat held for sale or resale (no ration may exceed 5 gallons per month per vehicle or boat.)
11. To provide transportation to another point of employment provided employment has definitely been secured.

Explanation of Point 1:

Under point 1. If you are actually carrying a person to a Doctor or hospital and this person has no ration, rations may be used for this purpose.

Ration Board Service Member

To interpret the price control and rationing programs as they affect every resident of Chilton county and to carry through an information program which will enable them to cooperate with developments in the program, Patterson Hicks, Principal of C. C. H. S., has been appointed Community Service Member of the Chilton County War Price and Rationing Board..

"Only a completely informed public can win the battle on the home front —the battle against inflation and shortages." Mr. Hick's job as community service member of the War Price and Rationing Board will be to give Chilton County residents information to unite them in this vital phase of the war effort.

As liason officer between the War Price and Rationing Board and Office of Civilian Defense block leaders and service corps members, Hicks, who was nominated by Chilton County Defense Council and War Price and Rationing Board will work closely with all community organizations.

Plans have been made by the War Price and Rationing Board for a comprehensive program, headed by Hicks in which schools, civic organizations, trade groups, clubs and other county organizations will be able to secure up-to-the-minute information about the activities of the Office of Price Administration. Posters, car cards, leaflets and other helpful material will explain and clarify the rationing, rent control and price programs.

Mr. Hicks writes the Rationing News Column appearing in the News each week.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazis Face Serious Retreats in Russia Following New Major Gains by Soviet; U. S. Planes Smash Jap Ships at Rabaul; Gen. Clark Commands Africa Fifth Army

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

President Roosevelt examines a huge globe of the world, which was presented to him by the army. The globe, which is 50 inches in diameter, shows in considerable detail strategic areas of the earth's surface. It occupies a prominent place in the President's office in the White House.

SIGNIFICANCE: Of Russia's Drive

While the world marveled at the military might of the Russians which was able to push the Nazis back all along the battle front the full significance of this winter campaign was overlooked by many. Should the offensive maintain its momentum of the early days of the new year Hitler's troops faced the definite prospect of retiring to lines they held in the last World war.

On both ends of the long fighting front the Russians were scoring major triumphs. In the north, the vital German-held supply base and rail center of Velikie Luki had fallen to the Soviet army. (Velikie Luki is only 200 miles from East Prussia.) In this sector the big threat was to the Nazis massed before Leningrad, because if the Russians pushed beyond Velikie Luki toward that stronghold all the Germans in the area would be cut off from supplies. Further extending the picture, military experts foresee the necessary evacuation of Estonia and northern Latvia.

Results

But while much of this campaign in the north was speculation, Russian might had already dealt a series of crushing blows to the Germans massed in front of Stalingrad and in the Caucasus. Success here came as the result of a bold strategic move on the part of Josef Stalin and General Zhukoff. For when these Russian leaders decided that Germany had about spent her might in the all-out effort to capture Stalingrad they unleashed a counter-offensive directly before the city. Soon they learned that the Germans had few reserves between the Volga and the Don rivers. Thus the Russians took heart and pushed westward toward the all-important city of Rostov.

Capture of Rostov would mean the entrapment of a million Nazis in the Caucasus. Hitler realized this and started a general movement of his troops in that sector. But again the Russians attacked and were successful in capturing many important points while driving the Nazis ever backward from their last year's goal —the oil fields of Grozny and Baku.

NEW SPIRIT:
On Capitol Hill

Over were the colorful opening sessions of the new 78th congress and the national legislators had settled down to the tough job ahead. Yet a new spirit—some observers called it a "spirit of Independence" —hung over Capitol Hill.

On the biggest objective of all—the winning of the war—there was unity between the two parties. There, however, unity ended.

Support of the administration in most of its home policies would no doubt be forthcoming from the Democratic side of both houses but there would be no quick "write your own ticket" edicts of power to the executive branch. Like their Republican brethren, the Democrats were in a "show me" mood as far as domestic programs were concerned.

So small was the control of the Democratic party that anything could and more than likely would happen. Republicans had their eyes on 1944 and were pledged to strictly uphold the position of an opposition party on matters affecting the home front.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Allied Successes

Although the Allies won the battle of Buna, clearing that New Guinea area of Jap troops, activities in the South Pacific showed no signs of lessening. Jap resistance continued unabated in other areas.

Later communiques from General MacArthur's headquarters told of a successful heavy bombing attack upon a strong Japanese naval concentration at Rabaul, New Britain. Flying over the target, Flying Fortresses and Liberators scored direct hits with 1,000 pound bombs on eight Jap merchantmen and supply vessels. Another 1,000 pounder smashed into a destroyer tender, alongside which a destroyer was tied. All were left sinking or burning.

A government official in Melbourne, Australia, announced that the largest armada of transports, supply vessels and warships yet sent by Japan into the Southwest Pacific was being assembled at various points under cover of bad weather. The concentration meant one of three things, he said: 1. An attempt to retake Henderson airfield on Guadalcanal. 2. An effort to reinforce Jap units at Sananande point in New Guinea. 3. An effort to strengthen Jap defensive positions in the entire area.

Guadalcanal

Encouraging news came from Guadalcanal island when American troops took from the Japanese important heights flanking the southwestern rim of the United States position in that sector. It was thought the advance may have signalized the beginning of a campaign to drive the enemy out of artillery range of the Solomon island air field. Six Jap counterattacks were repulsed with a loss of 150 enemy dead.

AFRICA FIFTH ARMY:
Gen. Clark in Command

Another step in the organization of huge Allied forces for the assault on Tunis and Bizerte in North Africa was made with the announcement that the United States fifth army has been activated and Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark placed in command of the new force.

General Clark, 46, is the hero who, traveling by submarine to North Africa three weeks before the Allied landings, held a secret rendezvous with French officers.

The announcement indicated that a large United States army of several divisions has been organized through its rank and is ready to fight alongside Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's first army in Tunisia. The size of the army was not indicated. It may mean a force of as few as two or three divisions, although it may reach 10 or 12 divisions.

Meanwhile the United States army air force struck strong blows in support of French and American ground forces in central Tunisia. Railroad yards were bombed at Kairouan and other targets were smashed at Cherichera, five miles northeast of Foundouk.

Bad weather continued to keep the opposing armies comparatively inactive in the north. Observers said that French troops, with a complete disregard for politics and ancient equipment, are fighting with great gallantry in central and southern Tunisia.

FOOD PRICES:
And Subsidies

Householders with low incomes frozen for the duration, looked to Washington for further developments on a reported program to allow food prices to rise rather than to have the government continue subsidies to farmers.

This report indicated that such a policy is gradually being put into effect and that subsidies will be continued only where necessary to keep up farm production. If so, this program represents a change from that carried out under Leon Henderson who even "went around" congress to reach his subsidy goal.

At one time he asked congress for a half billion dollars to carry out a subsidy plan and keep food prices down. This was rejected and the government began to use funds of the Commodity Credit corporation to maintain temporary subsidies.

The new policy would have two main objectives:

1. To keep down the national debt by not allowing further subsidy payments from the federal treasury, and,

2. Would make consumers stand their share in a price raise. (It is argued that there is a great surplus buying power evident among consumers.)

But the householder whose income is not from war work and has not been increased because of the war boom was caught squarely in the middle. He found no comfort in the fact that food prices had risen 16 per cent in the year ending last October and that in November they had risen another 1.2 per cent. Later figures were not available for him to fret about.

CHINESE MISSION:
'Not Recalled'

Chang Tao-fan, Chinese minister of information, has emphatically denied that Lieut. Gen. Hsiung Shih-fei, head of the Chinese military mission to the United States, has been recalled.

After General Hsiung conferred recently with President Roosevelt, it was reported unofficially that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had recalled the military mission because he was dissatisfied with American aid to China.

Chang said that Hsiung's visit to London—and even a trip to Chungking—was merely in the normal course of events. Hsiung will return to the United States, the minister of information said.

VICTORY FLEET:
Production Doubled

More than 16,000,000 tons of merchant shipping—double last year's output—will be produced in 1943, President Roosevelt predicted at a press conference during which U. S. shipyards were praised by the President and by Adm. Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime commission, for their record-breaking performances.

The 1942 goal of 8,000,000 tons was surpassed by 90,000 tons. At the end of December merchant ships were being built at a rate of 14,400,000 tons a year, the President said. This rate will continue to increase until the peak is reached during May, at which time shipyards will be producing five ships a day, compared with a rate of four at present. Totals do not include a number of ships built for the armed forces.

When peak production for 1942 was reached in December, 121 ships, totaling 1,199,300 tons, were built. During all of 1941 only 95 ships, totaling 1,088,000 tons, were produced.

U. S. WAR DEAD:
Listed by OWI

Since Pearl Harbor, 8,531 members of the armed forces of the United States have been killed, the Office of War Information has disclosed. Total casualties have been 61,126, including killed, wounded, missing, interned in neutral countries and prisoners of army, navy, marine corps, coast guard and the Philippine Scouts.

The heaviest loss was reported by the navy, which lost 4,657 officers and men killed. The navy is in the process of reporting 23,254 casualties, excluding prisoners of war. Of this, 1,769 officers and men are reported as wounded and 8,970 missing.

The marine corps has reported 1,201 officers and men as dead; 1,658 as wounded and 1,943 as missing. A total of 50 coast guardsmen have been killed, 19 wounded and 134 are missing. The merchant marine reports 429 dead, 2,428 missing and none wounded.

Of the army's 36,528 casualties, 2,193 were wounded. This total includes 469 Philippine Scouts. Of the 29,265 missing, 11,352 were Philippine Scouts. The army listed 1,016 as prisoners of war and 106 interned in neutral countries.

A total of 4,226 United States civilians are interned by enemy.

BUTTER:

Effective February 1 a new order by Food Administrator Claude Wickard sets aside 30 per cent of the nation's creamery butter production for the military forces and the Lend-Lease program of 1943. This means that a civilian supply averaging 13 pounds of butter per person for the year will be available. This is three pounds less per person than was available last year. If production goals are not met or if military demands increase the available civilian supply may be cut still more.

KIDNEY STONES

A paient consulted a physician for a pain in the region of the appendix. As the appendix had been removed, the physician told the patient that the pain was likely due to adhesions following the appendix operation. However, to the surprise of the physician X-rays showed a large stone in the kidney and that kidney stone was removed.

Dr. Barton

It was because the pain was in the appendix region and there was no pain in the back or pain following the course of the tube carrying urine from kidney to bladder, that caused the physician to mistake kidney stone for adhesions. Thanks to the X-rays the removal of the kidney stone brought complete relief from pain.

The above, however, is an "exceptional" case as most cases of kidney stone that cause symptoms can be recognized.

Dr. Charles Pierre-Mathe, San Francisco, director of the department of urology, St. Mary's hospital in "Clinical Medicine" says:

"A sudden, severe pain in the small of the back or abdomen which radiates to the groin should be looked on with suspicion by the attending physician. All patients suffering from kidney stones have red blood cells in the urine which can be detected by making a microscopic examination. I have never seen a patient suffering with kidney stone whose urine did not show red blood cells under the microscope. In many patients, crystals, usually of the variety found in the stone present, are encountered.

While the family physician with the aid of X-rays, microscopic examination of urine, use of dyes, can locate the position and composition of the stone or stones, Dr. Mathe advises, and most physicians will agree, that a genito-urinary specialist—urologist—should be called into consultation in these cases. The urologist will carry out a complete examination including cystoscopy—instrument with lamps and mirror—use of a catheter up into ureters (the two tubes carrying urine from kidneys to bladder), study of the amount of urine coming from each kidney, and a complete study of the urines collected from kidneys and bladder.

After removal of stone or stones, they are examined to find composition and nature or organisms present so that the proper diet and antiseptics can be used to try to prevent the formation of more stones.

Diabetic Coma And Insulin Shock

Some months ago a moving picture showed the inside of a hospital in which a patient was undergoing diabetic coma. The floor nurse had rushed for the intern on duty, and on arrival the young physician injected insulin and ordered salt solution. The physician in charge of the case when told about the patient's symptoms was furious, and told the young intern that the patient was suffering from insulin shocks, too much insulin, and the patient's life was endangered.

The young intern suggested that they both take a look at the patient and he was found to be in a normal condition.

The point of the story of the picture does not concern us. However, there are now so many diabetics, all of whom know how to treat themselves when at home or at work, who may be placed in strange surroundings when they are suffering with diabetic coma (acidosis) or with insulin shocks. The treatment is very simple in either case, but, as the two conditions are exactly opposite in character, the treatment for each case is different.

What is diabetic coma and what is insulin shock? How can one tell the difference if a known diabetic is found unconscious?

Diabetic coma is a condition brought on by overeating—that is, the patient himself may eat too much food—or the body, due to an overactive thyroid gland or infection which eats or burns up the food too rapidly. Treatment is therefore by insulin injection.

Insulin shock or reaction is due to too much insulin, to taking too little food after insulin has been taken, or taking too much exercise and using up the food eaten too soon. The treatment is to give some starch or sugar at once.

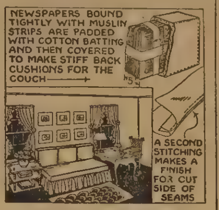
HEALTH BRIEFS

To prevent psittacosis, parrot fever, government authorities in 1932 adopted U. S. Interstate Quarantine Regulations. These regulations recommended that every interstate shipment of parrots, love birds, and parrakeets be accompanied by a certificate from the proper health authorities. This certificate stated that: "The bird or birds in the shipment have come from distributing establishments free from infection."

ON THE HOME FRONT

—with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS is the story of an old couch that became glamorous and played a conspicuous part in a charming sunny living room. The transformation started with a heavy cotton twill fabric in a soft tan tone to match the background color of the hooked rug that you see in front of the couch. It was decided not to use any contrasting trimming but to accent the clean-cut box-like edges outlining the couch pad and cushions with a second seam on the outside.



NEWSPAPERS BOUND TIGHTLY WITH MUSLIN STRIPS ARE PADDED WITH COTTON BATTING AND THEN COVERED TO MAKE STIFF BACK CUSHIONS FOR THE COUCH
A SECOND STITCHING MAKES A FINISH FOR CUT SIDE OF SEAMS

When the smartly tailored cover was completed it was fastened firmly in place with zippers of the type that come apart at the bottom—one side being stitched to the seam allowance of the cover and the other sewn to the couch pad. Next came the stiff cushions to stand up at the back. These were made with an inside core of newspapers tightly bound together with muslin bands and then padded with cotton batting, as shown.

WHO'S NEWS This Week

By
Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Scouting optimists in the news around the New Year, one finds Dr. Thomas Midgley Jr. becoming president of the American Chemical society, after years of hopeful prophecy and dotted-line achievement. Among his prophecies have been his forecast of about three quadrillion dollars' worth of gold to be taken from sea water, inter-planetary travel, age control and the end of indigestion by the use of hormones. His achievements, which are many, include his discovery of tetraethyl lead as a gasoline anti-knock compound, his development of non-toxic and non-inflammable refrigerants and his many contributions to basic research in synthetic rubber processes.

Holds Science Will Clear the Way for Peace, Abundance

As to the mundane outlook in general, Dr. Midgley takes the cheerful view that the potential creativeness and productiveness of science, with its command of new energies and processes, will clear the way for peace and abundance in spite of our collective stupidities and villainies. These alluring, if remote, horizons, Dr. Midgley sees from his wheel chair in Worthington, Ohio, having been stricken with infantile paralysis in 1940. Thus afflicted, he has continued his research, with no slackening of either work or fervor, and a possibly heightened belief in some kind of happy ending, or rather fulfillment for the comedie humaine. His story would be a case in point for Thomas Mann, who says the calmest faith and truest personal integrity is attained through suffering.

In Cornell university, where he was graduated in 1911, it was said that young Midgley would coast along through routine work, but was always busy on something out of the groove—some idea of his own. This inclined him quickly to research and before he had been out of college a year he was threading the subatomic maze of synthetic rubber. It was in the years from 1922 to 1926 that he brought through his knockless gasoline, which bloomed into the impressive ethyl gasoline industry, with headquarters at Detroit, of which industry he is vice president. In his wheel chair, he is a big business executive, with special telephone rigs to make his inter-office communication around the country easy and casual—like everything else about him.

Speaking of attainment through frustration, he worked with tellurium when he was bringing through his non-toxic refrigerants and that permeated his genial person with a powerful odor of garlic. He took scientific measures—something like protective coloring. When he traveled, he found in the smoking car the closest possible concentration of bad cigars. The fragrance of garlic was just a harmless added starter here, and nobody noticed him. He is resourceful, diligent, optimistic.

PERSONS who have been a bit jittery about the government telling us where to work and what to do may be assured by the public record and attitudes of Grenville Clark, the New York lawyer who drafts the quite unprecedented and drastic manpower bill for Paul McNutt. A stanch advocate of compulsory military service, and of any and all methods necessary for national survival, Mr. Clark has been at the same time an alert and outspoken defender of civil liberties. He is a pioneer of the Plattsburg system and chairman of the National Emergency Committee of the Military Training Camps, and an active advocate of a big and strong army, but he is a wary opponent of anything suggesting a military caste. In May, 1931, he said:

He'll Square Our War Manpower With Blackstone

"My experience in the war department has led me to distrust the participation of army or navy experts in affairs of national policy."

Similarly, he has opposed any encroachment on Constitutional safeguards by bureaucrats, or excessive centralization of government which might endanger individual liberties. He may be cited as a conspicuous holdout against both the weakness of a peace-loving democracy and the aggression of militarists and war-planners who might save the country but leave it no longer a democracy.

He thinks we can keep both the Bill of Rights and a strong wallop. That seems to be the nub of the argument, as military urgency closes in on manpower—our most free and footloose zone of casual and migratory tradition. Maybe we never wanted to move to Perth Amboy, but it's tough if anybody says we can't. Mr. Clark knows all about that. He drafted the original selective service act, and kept it legally in bounds. Mr. Clark was born in New York in 1882, was graduated from Harvard in 1903 and practiced law in New York.

JESUS WINNING SOULS

LESSON TEXT—John 4:27-42

GOLDEN TEXT—He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.—John 4:36.

Man's need is the same wherever and whoever he may be. The Christ who met the need of the distinguished religious leader Nicodemus did the same for the poor sinful woman of Samaria.

The incident at Jacob's well in Sychar took place when Jesus, leaving Jerusalem because of increasing hindrance to His work, went up to Galilee. Unlike His Jewish brethren, who detoured around the land of the hated "half-breed" Samaritans, He "must needs go through Samaria," for there was a sin-sick soul that needed Him.

Our lesson abounds with instruction regarding soul-winning, both in principle and in practice. We here find Jesus:

I. Winning a Soul-Winner (vv. 27-30).

The faithful and kindly ministry of Christ led the woman to faith in Him as the Messiah. She left her water pot and ran at once into the city to share her new-found joy with everyone she knew.

Since the first expression of spiritual life is testimony, the one who brings a sinner to Christ not only saves a soul, but also wins a worker for Christ. One fears that we often assume that winning men to Christ is enough. We should expect that the new light should shine forth into the darkness.

So we have a two-fold reason for soul-winning; saving a soul from perdition, and setting a life on fire for testimony. It's a great business. Why don't we do more of it?

II. Instructing Soul-Winners (vv. 31-38).

This work of soul-winning requires a sustaining grace which this world cannot give. Jesus by His own example showed His disciples how that strength comes from above.

He who had seated Himself at the well, tired and hungry, to await the return of the disciples with food, had been refreshed in the doing of the Father's will—in reaching this forlorn woman. "The greatest thing that ever occurs in the world is the transformation of a human soul, and the greatest joy anyone can ever have is to act as the divine agent in bringing about such a transformation" (Douglass).

There is another thing these soul-winners needed to learn—even as we need to learn and re-learn it—that the time to win souls is now. How prone the human being is to procrastinate. Tomorrow—next Sunday—next week, we will speak to someone about his spiritual need. Next year we will give more liberally for missions, or for the work of soul-winning in our local church. But "look on the fields." Do you not see "that they are ripe already unto harvest"?

Again, soul-winners need to remember our Lord's words in verses 36-38. Not only the reapers receive the reward, but also those who sow and those who labor in order that the harvest may come. The man who plows is just as important as the one who reaps—perhaps some would say more important. Some of us who are called to be God's plowmen should remember that and be encouraged in our labors.

Like the perfect leader that He was, Jesus did not require of His disciples what He did not do Himself. So we find Him again in the work of evangelism. He practiced what He preached.

III. Practicing Soul-Winning (vv. 39-42).

There is real danger that those of us who have a measure of leadership in the church may be quick to tell others what they ought to do—and not do it ourselves. This is particularly true in this matter of soul-winning. One is apt to write, preach and teach about it, and then neglect to do it.

The disciples had been to town for bread. One wonders whether they had talked to the store-keeper about Christ. Have you?

Jesus did not theorize about it—He really sought men for God. The testimony of the woman He had won sent a host of people out from the city. He spoke to them the word of life and they believed.

This was evidently "group evangelism" as distinguished from the "personal evangelism" which won the woman. They are both important, and belong together. Some are saying that the days of group evangelism are gone. We doubt that, but certainly the days of personal evangelism are always here. Let us be busy about that kind of soul-winning—and God may so bless that we will have a real revival. Are you ready for it?

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good heath is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

THE PROPAGANDA BURDEN OF NEWSPAPERS

The newspapers of the country are being called on to carry a tremendous propaganda burden from a hundred different directions in all sorts of "print free" space even down to "poorly disguised advertising" for products out of which the manufacturers and dealers get handsome profits.

The general idea appears to be when a bureau is opened or a new angle is developed for putting over an ilea, to immediately get up tablets full of publicity and ask the newspapers to carry it out to the public so that at least the "head folks" will know the "lesser lights" are reporting for duty and pay checks by the publicity.

For instance, The Sentinel editor has kept one average week's receipts of stuff sent us with the request that it be printed as "news and information." The total for the week was seventy requests and we measured the manuscripts and estimated that the material sent us to be put out at our own expense to boost the different "requesters" would total 55 columns of type. This would cost us for actual typesetting labor something like $50 a week, to say nothing of the space cost and other expenses connected with issuing a newspaper.

Of course, in actual war needs, such as bond sales, rationing and other things connected with the war efforts, all newspapers are glad to foot the expense and carry whatever is needed and this newspaper has never yet let anything we deem of importance in this direction hit the waste basket in our office. But every day we open envelope after envelope from the mails and pitch the contents in our waste basket.

All newspapers have been cut on paper allowance and many other things have entered into the difficulty of issuing newspapers. Practically every newspaper in the land will have to make itself smaller in the future instead of larger. And this editor contends a newspaper is not fair to itself or its readers to fill its available space with a lot of propaganda, which probably does not affect ten per cent of the readers, and let news matter and local interest material be crowded out.

Most of this publicity stuff is gotten up and sent out by people who have never been inside a newspaper office and totally lacking, it appars, of any regard for space limitation. They must fill up the mail bags and start it out in every direction and most of it never gets closer to actual publication than the editor's desk—then to the wastebasket.

Even local people, who are requesting free publicity, should try to be considerate in the space they want to use, remembering that their cause or effort is only one of many in a community or county. And, too, one thing is always positive: An editor appreciates brevity and tries to cooperate with those who see things the same way.

—Jackson County Sentinel.

SENIORITY IN THE CONGRESS

The turnover in Congress is remarkable indeed, which enables a Congressional district to gain a position of responsibility and power reasonably quickly. To illustrate, our Congressman Pete Jarman entered the House of Representatives at the bottom of the ladder six years ago, along with 87 others. As the result of changes since, he is now junior to only 150 of the 435 members of the House, enjoys equal rank with 31 and is senior to 252.

Similarly, he was designated by the Ways and Means Committee as the 13th member on the all important Foreign Affairs Committee of the House as he commenced his second term 4 years ago, and has advanced more than half way up this ladder, now being the 6th member of this major committee.

In the meantime, he has also served as Chairman of the Printing Committee, to assume which assignment he relinguished another chairmanship, and as Vice Chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing. Only two Democratic members of major committees also serve on another committee.

Although not quite to such a marked degree, because Alabama does not change its Congressmen as frequently as some other States do, this program also prevails up the ladder of seniority in the Alabama delegation of nine, among whom he now ranks fifth.

This Brooder is big enough to start at one time as many as 50 baby chicks which will grow into eating size in about 11 weeks. It can be built from the sketch shown here by anyone handy with tools. If however, you want more detailed dimensions, large sized plans—drawn by the Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, and from which the sketches shown here are taken—are available free of charge at the offices of county agricultural agents, Alabama Power Company local offices, chick hatcheries and feed stores.

WE DO NOT SELL the materials needed to build the brooder. A list of them appears in this advertisement. You probably already have some of the items. Your county agent or feed dealer can give you feeding and rearing instructions. With close attention to cleanliness, a brooder such as here illustrated makes it possible for you to raise a plentiful supply of meat at moderate cost.

Grow Your Meat in Your Back Yard

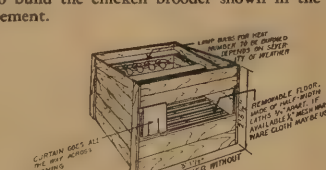
NEW feeding and rearing methods now make it possible to grow day-old chicks into fryers in 77 days. No fancy equipment is needed—no large investment.

A space 3 feet by 12 feet, inside a building or outside, a few boards, two bundles of lath, some wood shavings, saw dust or pine straw, five lamp bulbs, sockets and wire, and a few other odds and ends are all that you need to build the chicken brooder shown in the drawings in this advertisement.

LIST OF MATERIALS

- 160 Lineal ft. 1" x 6", shiplap #2, pine or poplar siding pattern
- 5 Lineal ft. 1" x 6", board #2, pine or poplar
- 100 Lineal ft. 1" x 4", board #2, pine or poplar
- 40 Lineal ft. ¾" net x 1", Plaster Ground (wooden lath can be substituted)
- 2 bundles 48" wooden lath. 18 of these lath should cut 2'-10" long and sawed down the middle for hover floor. (If obtainable, ½" mesh hardware cloth (wire) may be used instead of lath)
- 1 piece 36" roll roofing 8' long (or other available type roofing)
- 5 Porcelain light sockets (rosette, open or covered terminal type)
- 10 No. 8 wood screws, 1" long
- 1 Plug for electric connection
- 14 Lineal ft. (minimum) No. 14 weatherproof electric wire (or whatever is available)
- 5 Electric light bulbs (60-watt size)
- 2 Screen (window) hangers and screws
- 4 Hooks and eyes
- ½ lb. lath nails
- ½ lb. No. 6d common nails
- ¼ lb. No. 6d or 8d finishing nails
- ¼ lb. ¾" flat head nails for roll roofing
- 15 lbs. planing mill shavings, dry sawdust or commercial loosefill insulation (or pine needles)
- 1 piece 3'-0" x 2'-0" mattress ticking, blue denim or muslin.



LAMP BARS FOR HEAT NUMBER TO BE BURNED DEPENDS ON SEVERITY OF WEATHER

The tax paid under this plan is a withholding tax. Part of this money will be repaid to you after the war. The amounts that you will receive after the war are approximately as follows: If you are a single person you will receice about 25% of the Victory Tax paid in. If you are a married person you will receive about 40% of the Victory Tax paid in, plus 2% for each dependent under 18 years of age. You will receive from your employer at the end of each year a written statement showing how much tax you have paid during the year. This receipt will be a basis for your claims for a refund after the war.

Liberty Hill

Next Saturday and Sunday are the regular preaching days and the public has a corial invitation to attend these services. I am sure that all who attend will receive a blessing.

Shiloh

Our church services were well attended Sunday, but we did not have as many present at B.T.U. as we usually do but hope to have better attendance next Sunday night 6:30 o-clock.

Since our Bible Reader's Leader, John Will Owens, is leaving for the Army this week. We elected Evelyn Owens to serve in his place. We also regret that two more of our members, Aubrey Deason and Raymond Mims are leaving for the service of our country. We hope these boys will continue in their service of Our Lord while they are serving our Country.

We are proud that Ruth Evelyn Owens is home from the hospital and is better. We hope she will be able to come back to church soon.

TANKERS THE SUBS CAN'T SINK

MORE than 34 million gallons of oil a day are rolling into the East in tank cars.

That's 70 times the amount the railroads usually have been called upon to transport—well over half the total needs, hauled in tankers the subs can't sink.

To handle this new assignment takes the full time of 1,400 locomotives, when there are a dozen other uses for every locomotive in the war program as a whole. But it's a job that has to be done, so the railroads are doing it as a part of their bigger job of hauling 1¼ million tons of freight a mile every minute round the clock.

Behind this record oil movement is a story of the American brand of cooperation: by the companies that ship the oil —by the companies that own the tank cars—by the Federal Petroleum Coordinator—by the Office of Defense Transportation.

That's why this particular story of what the railroads are doing is a good example of what it takes to keep America working and fighting

Personalities in the News

Shown at left is Gen. Henri Giraud, successor of the slain Adm. Jean Darlan as high commissioner of North Africa, who said he will raise an army of 300,000 Frenchmen in North Africa to fight on the Allied side. Center: Juho Rangell, prime minister of Finland, who, according to reports, attended the Jap "victory party" on December 7 in Helsingfors. Since then the state department has ordered the Finnish information center in New York to cease issuing news releases and pamphlets. Right: William Hodson, New York city commissioner of welfare since 1933, who will undertake a confidential mission for former Governor Herbert Lehman, director of foreign relief.

Kiddie Cooks Learn Value of Vitamins

Children from the age of five at Central school, Long Island, N. Y., are learning the principles of nutrition and the art of preparing and serving well-balanced meals. There was a time when a boy would rather be dead than caught wearing an apron, but the husky young man at the left doesn't mind in the least being helped into a garment by a fellow cook. Center: This pupil has a man-size bowl of cereal before her. She has learned the value of the vitamins and minerals in the whole wheat and in brown sugar. Right: First important step in the cooking of vegetables is the removal of sand. And that's what these kiddy cooks are doing.

FBI Takes Desperate Touhy Gang

The Touhy-Banghart gang of seven prison breakers—one of the most vicious gangs in the history of crime—was rounded up in Chicago by the FBI. Failure to register for the draft provided grounds for intervention of the FBI. Two of the gangsters were killed in the roundup. Photo shows the bodies of James O'Connor and St. Clair McInerney being removed from building in which they were trapped and slain by federal men, who later captured other members of the gang, including Roger Touhy and Basil Banghart.

Social Security Program, Labor Laws Face Congress

Proposed Legislation Would Bring Unions Under Definite Restrictions; New Insurance Plan to 'Out-Beveridge' England's Program.

By BAUKHAGE

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

As the ship of state pulls out of the holiday doldrums, skipper and crew are setting their jaws for rough weather. There are cross currents ahead in the new congress which are going to set the old ship rocking.

Symbolic of conflicting movements, the debate of which will soon be filling the Congressional Record, are these two: A proposed bill to bring labor unions into the restricting pale of legislation such as business has to contend with under the anti-trust laws, and a social security program which some say will out-Beveridge England's new Beveridge plan. That program, its author, Sir William Beveridge says, is "in some ways a revolution."

The "holiday doldrums" I mentioned were not enirely a seasonal affair this year. There was the usual letdown while congress went home and the nation turned to festal thoughts. There was also a premeditated lull which was necessitated by the turnover in the last election. The administration knew that no matter what was done in the interim between November and January, it would, in some measure, be undone when anti-administration Democrats and the inereased Republican minority got together in the new congress.

Stop-Gap Arranged

Since manpower is the prime consideration of the moment, a stop-gap was arranged. With much fanfare Manpower Commissioner McNutt was given new powers and a far-flung program was ballyhooed. But it was mostly ballyhoo and just before Christmas wide publicity was given to a document which was obviously the forewarning that much stricter regimentation of labor was in the wind. The long-postponed, but inevitable, national service act raised its head again.

The document was a draft of a bill made by Grenville Clark, an attorney who suddenly emerged as a presidential advisor. It was announced that he made a special trip to England to study the British manpower setup. Clark remained silent until just before Christmas and after congress had gone home, but every congressman received a copy of the proposed legislation.

About two weeks earlier, shortly after the Beveridge report was made public, a cabinet officer was heard to remark: "We've got to get busy and draw up a program that fits America's needs a little better than the Beveridge plan would."

But the lull was still lulling then and when the President was asked at a press and radio conference if he were preparing a message for congress on the subject—that was about the time of the remark of the cabinet member—he said "no."

The Beveridge plan was the natural result of the Battle of Britain. Then a common danger brought the British people closer together. The underfed, underclothed and underhoused had to be taken care of. Class lines don't exist in the shambles. A bombed-out duchess can be as cold and hungry as a waif. The poor suddenly realized that if they could be taken care of as well or better in an emergency, they ought to have a little better distribution of the ordinary decencies of life in prosperous peace times. Wise leaders didn't wait until the war was over to face angry demands which might turn into real revolution. Sir William Beveridge's committee drew up the blueprint for what they called "a British revolution" in the country's economic setup under which, as one spokesman described it, "the people would contribute by their own preference, to a national insurance fund rather than take a handout from the state."

'Assurance'

The goal of the Beveridge plan is to lay the ghost of insecurity by means of "assurance." Assurance is the British word for what we call "insurance" and which really defines the commodity better than our word—assurance that men and women would have a subsistence through sickness and unemployment and old age; would have money to take the baby through its difficult early stages; enough for a decent burial without burdening friends or relatives; would provide a working woman with a bonus when she married so she wouldn't be penalized for enjoying connubial bliss. All this would be done on the principle of ordinary commercial insurance except that the government would run the machinery, both labor and capital would contribute as such and the people as a whole, in accordance with their income, would pay a share through taxes.

The plan is not new. But it is a considerable extension of the present security laws such as Britain has had for a long time and such as the New Deal brought to America.

No sane American politician, no matter how far he leaned to the conservative side, would suggest repealing America's social security laws. It couldn't be done. But the controversy will arise in congress when attempts are made, as they will be, to extend the benefits, both as to amounts paid and to new categories of workers. Such extensions are contemplated in the plan now cooking in Washington.

Labor Regulation

That is one trend we can look for. Running counter to it on the surface, but really also shooting at the "greatest good for the greatest number" is the trend toward regulation of organized labor. Probably a dozen bills have been drawn up, all of which tend to put the screws on labor unions. Many liberals feel that the unions have it coming. The growing number of strikes in wartime, when maximum production is a matter of patriotism as well as necessity, the existing union rules which tend to interfere with maximum production, the various "restraints" considered as evil as the "restraint of trade" resulting from monopolies, all have been highlighted by war conditions. Bills will be presented to root out these ills. Much of the restriction of unions could be avoided if the unions cleaned their own house.

In America, as in England, when a nation is called upon to make the sacrifices demanded by this war, it can be expected that the people will insist on a democratic distribution of opportunity and reward of effort when peace comes. The war will also have taught that maximum production means maximum prosperity. There are plenty of people to consume peacetime products; there are plenty of natural resources whose development can furnish the jobs for the consumers and provide the pay which makes it possible for them to buy what is produced. Any group or institution—farm, labor, management—which stands in the way of this maximum production is bound to have its wings clipped. Meanwhile, the people will demand and get greater "assurance" against rainy days, which come even when prosperity is with us. And in providing it, if Britain comes along, America cannot be far behind.

Sightless Workers

Lockheed officials report that 13 blind workers who are helping build fighting and bombing planes in the California plant are in some respects better than average and turn out more work than their fellows because of higher concentration. Including two women, these sightless workers passed a month's placement test in the Lockheed factory and are now working as tubing assemblers, burring-roll operators and assemblers of switch boxes. One is a parts handler on a conveyor in the paint shop.

Guide dogs bring the blind employees to the plant each morning and doze all day beneath their masters' benches. Miss Hazel Hurst, sightless president of a foundation for training blind persons, worked at every job before selecting the blind worker to be placed in it. However, the number of jobs they can perform with safety will always be limited, she said. Lockheed hopes to find jobs for more sightless workers.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The use of aerial bombs as air-raid warning devices are frowned upon by the war department in a statement to OCD officials. Not only is the sound of aerial bombs easily confused with that of antiaircraft fire, but "they have doubtful value for warning purposes." Communities now using aerial bombs should discontinue the practice.

Budget That Meat, Serve Delicious Stews
(See Recipes Below)

Stretch That Meat!

Today most of you homemakers find the meat situation actually testing your mettle. In your trips to the butcher's you may find many cuts of meat you haven't used often in the past, and less and less of the cuts you know how to use and that your family has eaten rarely. But those are the meats available for your menus, and thus I'm going to give you some first aid in preparing them.

Fortunately, the cheaper cuts of meat, along with liver and kidneys and the other entrails not included in the meat rationing program are as rich in proteins and minerals as their better known relatives. Cooked correctly, they can become as popular.

"Extend the meat" should become the motto of every family for the duration. The way to do it is to include unrationed cuts plentifully through the menus, use cereals and meat extenders such as oatmeal and bread crumbs on rationed cuts, and substitute fowl and cheese in the menu for steaks and chops as often as possible.

Veal kidneys combine with beef in this especially delightful and nutritious stew—and stretch that beef to serve eight people. It's a colorful main dish with bright carrots and button mushrooms:

*Beef and Kidney Stew.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 veal kidneys
1 pound beef, cut in strips
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup sliced onion
1 cup cubed potatoes
1 cup sliced or button mushrooms
2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Remove skin and fat from kidneys; soak in cold, salted water for 1 hour; cover with cold water; bring slowly to boiling point. Drain; cut into small pieces. Roll beef strips in flour; brown in hot fat. Add 4 cups stock from kidneys and cook 30 minutes. Add kidneys, vegetables, sauce and salt. Cook 30 minutes. Add parsley. Thicken if desired.

Have you done much with liver? Then you know it is a dish of distinction, worthy of being served even on special occasions:

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Citrus fruits, apples, Hubbard squash or acorn squash offer bargains during the cool crisp months. Include them in on your menus.

What to do about those recipes calling for whipped cream? You can use a little of the cream off the top of the bottle, if you chill it well for a day or so, and chill the bowl which you use for whipping . . . and the beaters too. Some of the brands of canned milk will also whip, if they're well chilled, along with the bowl and beaters.

If you're unable to obtain chocolate or cocoa sometimes at the grocer's, use victory type of cookies utilizing honey, corn syrup and the wheat flour for darker cakes.

Inexpensive delicacies to help you on the slender meat-rationed days: boiled, baked tongue with raisin or cranberry sauce; pigs feet; oxtail soup; hocks; brains; tripe with broiled mushrooms.

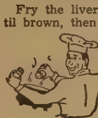
Liver Loaf.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 pound of beef liver
1 onion, chopped
½ pound pork sausage
1 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon celery salt
2 beaten eggs
½ cup liver or chicken stock

Cover liver with hot water and simmer 5 minutes. Drain liquid to use for stock. Force liver and onion through food chopper. Add remaining ingredients. Form into a loaf in a pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Serve with broiled bacon or tomato slices, if desired.

Rice With Pork Liver.
(Serves 6)

1¼ pounds pork liver, sliced
4 strips bacon
¾ cup rice
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 or 3 sliced carrots
2 sliced onions



Fry the liver with the bacon until brown, then add rice which has been soaked in water for a half hour. Cover with hot water or chicken stock, add parsley, carrots, onion, salt and pepper to taste. Simmer slowly until tender, about 40 minutes.

Oatmeal is an excellent source of the B vitamins and proteins and therefore makes an excellent meat extender. Here it's used to make that meat go further:

Meat Loaf.
(Serves 8)

1¼ pounds of beef or beef and pork combined
¼ cup onion, minced
1 cup oatmeal
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup catsup
1 egg, beaten
1 cup water
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning

Combine all ingredients and blend well together. Pack into a loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 45 to 50 minutes. Serve with the following sauce:

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup catsup
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Melt butter in skillet, add remaining ingredients, heat through, and pour over meat loaf when baked.

Some time ago shortening was unintentionally omitted in the list of ingredients for the following cookie. Here is the corrected recipe:

*Oatmeal Drops

2 cups 3-minute oats
½ cup shortening
1 cup corn syrup
½ cup flour
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 4 tablespoons boiling water
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup chopped raisins

Bring to a boil in a saucepan, the corn syrup, shortening, and raisins and cook for 5 minutes, then add soda. Mix in oats, flour and nutmeg. Blend well and drop by spoonfuls on a greased and floured baking sheet 2 inches apart. Bake in a hot (375-400-degree) oven for 10 minutes.

FILM DAILY recently made public the results of its second annual poll of newspaper, magazine and radio motion picture critics, to determine "Filmdom's Famous Fives" for 1942. First place went to Gary Cooper for his work in "The Pride of the Yankees" and to Greer Garson on the strength of her performance in "Mrs. Miniver." Walter Pidgeon got second and third in the masculine line-up, Frederic March fourth and Monty Wooley fifth place. Joan Fontaine came in second among the girls for "Suspicion," Bette Davis followed her with "Now, Voyager," Katharine Hepburn and Teresa Wright finish the list.

ANNE SHIRLEY

Back in 1934, when Anne Shirley was known as Dawn O'Day, she appeared with Ginger Rogers in a picture called "Finishing School." Now she'll work with Ginger again, in "The Gibson Girl," based on the romance of Charles Dana Gibson and his wife. Anne's come along far enough in the meantime to rate a top role in this picture, which will be produced in Technicolor.

Incidentally, Ginger Rogers deserves a few laurels for following in Bette Davis' footsteps and letting herself be photographed as a gawky, unglamorous youngster in "The Major and the Minor." Proved that, though her face may not always be pretty, it can't help being interesting. Which is more than can be said for some of our screen stars, who'd be lost without makeup.

Bill Goodwin's been hot-footing it from stage to stage on the Paramount lot lately; he's playing in his second and third pictures simultaneously. They're "No Time for Love" and "Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour"; not bad for a newcomer!

Three former screen stars—Sally Eilers, Leila Hyams and Eileen Percy—demonstrate approved first aid methods in Metro's new short, "In Which We Serve." They're all qualified Red Cross teachers.

In "A Night to Remember" the cops come into their own. Director Richard Wallace didn't have them wear derby hats or big shoes, or be so dumb that the picture's stars outsmarted them; in fact, Wallace claims that he and the writer had to work hard to keep the officers from solving the crime before Brian Aherne and Loretta Young did. High time the sleuths were made human!

The role in the stage version of "Lady in the Dark" that made Hollywood producers clamor for Victor Mature goes to Jon Hall in the movie version of the play—he won't have to do much but stand around and hear the girls talk about how handsome he is. The leading role is Ginger Rogers' (she seems to bob up all through this column!) and she'll have a chance to sing, dance and act.

This month's March of Time is entitled "The Navy and the Nation." It tells the story of the U. S. Navy and the job it is doing to deliver the fighting goods to the fighting men, and tells, as well, the story of American men and women in war industry, doing their part of the navy's job for victory. Actual battle scenes, taken from a convoy, show an attack on a U-boat.

Wally Brown's first screen assignment for RKO, on his long-term contract, will be "Adventures of a Rookie"; it's the first of a new series of feature-length films dealing with American troops in various battle zones of the present war.

ODDS AND ENDS—John Garfield wins the male lead opposite Maureen O'Hara in "The Fallen Sparrow," screen version of a new novel of romance and espionage . . . Veronica Lake's had to pin up that long hair for her role as an army nurse in "So Proudly We Hail" . . . Bing Crosby smokes six pipes in "Dixie"—and had the new bowls broken in for him on an automatic smoker before he started the picture . . . After wearing the uniform of a British WREN in "Commandos Strike at Dawn" Anna Lee bought it and mailed it to her sister, Ruth Winnifreth, who is a real WREN on duty in an English city not far from London.

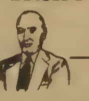
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



In Calcutta wealthy natives with cars invariably paint their tires red because of the superstition that this will obviate motor [illegible]

The rubber tapper, or seringuero, in Brazil lives partly off the forest he ranges in search of wild rubber. A shotgun and machete are his traditional equipment.

Superstitious negroes of Georgia believe that the best cure for rheumatism is to sleep with an old tire around the waist.

When dual tires are mis-mated, the larger tire carries most of the load, wears off its tread abnormally and fails early due to the generation of excess heat in its cord carcass.

It is estimated that the average tire loses 12 per cent of its weight in use and yields about ⅘ of its original weight in reclaimed rubber.

BEER TAXES YIELD ALABAMA
$1,000,000
YEARLY

ALABAMA next year must carry on with considerably less revenues. Gas rationing will reduce sharply state income from gasoline taxes. With this source of income drying up, our state will need every dollar of taxes from the sale of legal beer.

Legal beer has turned more than $4,500,000 into state and city treasuries since its re-legalization in Alabama and in 1942 alone approximately $1,000,000. In addition it has paid more than $7,000,000 to the Federal Government.

To preserve these important benefits of legal beer to Alabama, the Brewing Industry is co-operating with state and local law enforcement officers to maintain wholesome conditions wherever beer is sold.

You can help by reporting — in confidence — violation of the law to law enforcement officers or this Committee.

want to thank you in behalf of our re committee and people of this ty who have cooperated and conted their part to making this paign a success and I feel like we all continue to do our part and we will still subscribe for the ant of bonds that the government est us to take.

would be glad to have any sugions at any time from any person e county that would aid and assist in making this campaign. I will lad to go any place in church or public meeting that you think ld be of benefit to our campaign. pe everybody will feel free to exs themselves becaus this is our and the government needs the help every individual to win this war. ve not let my private business inre with my duties as I have untood them in the campaign for the of stamps and bonds.

want to congratulate every school y teacher, and every pupil in the ty for their cooperation and I feel they have contributed their part his campaign and if any teacher ny school feel lke I can be of any stance to them at anytime do not tate to call on me.

hope each and every individual in county can grasp the meaning of great sacrifice that our boys are ing for us. Can we imagine even rt of what is going on every hour nty-four hours a day, as many of boys at the front are sacrificing r lives. This war is being fought by somebody's son. Somebody's son maybe ours, is battling against great odds, heartsick, lonely, but unflinching, ready to go to the ends of the earth as the order comes to carry the challenge to the enemy's door.

When you complain of the little sacrifice that we are called on to make think of the sacrifice that our boys are making.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH TROUNCES ENSLEY 43 TO 34

James Foshee, Sports Reporter

The Chilton County High Basketball Team defeated Ensley High of Birmingham 43 to 34 last Tuesday night January 19, at the local court. Both teams were evenly matched with plenty of excitment all through the game. Paul Smith, forward, was the high point man for Clanton Cagers with 21 points. Sorrell was the high point man for the losers with 16 points.

The Clanton Cagers were on the road the last week end. They played Isabella High last Friday afternoon January 15. The score was Clanton 27 and Isabella 19.

Clantón played Albert G. Parrish High of Selma, Friday night, January 15 at the Selma Gym. Clanton lost its first defeat of thé season with the score 23 and to 18 in favor of Selma. Again Smith was the high pointman for the Clanton Cagers with 9 points.

Clanton goes to Jemison this Friday January 22, to meet the Jemison High School. The game will start at 7:30 at the Jemison High School. Jemison won over Isabella so it should be a very good game.

Clanton plays Wetumpka on the local court Tuesday night January 26, it has been reported that Wetumpka has one of the strongest teams in Central Alabama.

CHILTON COUNTY REDUCES TRAFFIC DEATHS IN 1942

Chilton is one of the 36 Alabama counties which reduced its traffic death toll in 1942, from 29 lives lost in 1941 to 5 in the year just closed, according to preliminary reports receivedby the State Department of Public Safety. With some accidents still being checked, 1942 closed with some 619 traffic deaths, against 743 officially reported in 1941 to the National Safety Council.

"Increased vigilance will save still more lives in 1943," said Major James F. Brawner, director of the public safety department.

MEN 18 TO 45 MUST CARRY REGISTRATION CARDS AT ALL TIMES

Beginning February 1st, all men in the 18-to-45 age group who have been subject to Selective Service registration for six months or more, must carry their classification cards (Form 57) with them at all times, the Office of War Information announced here this week.

This card, which shows that the registrant is in communication with his draft board and has been classified as to availability for military service, must be carried along with the registration certificate (Form 2). Selective Service officials have formulated this new requirement to check on registrants who willfully or negilgently fail to keep in touch with their boards.

Men who fail to have both cards in their possession after Feb. 1 will be subject to fine or imprisonment, or both. The order does not apply to registrants in the 45-to-65 age group.

It Takes Both, War Bonds and Taxes, to Win—Victory Tax Special Direct Levy Asked to Help Meet Heavy War Costs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Approximately 50,000,000 American workers began to make an added contribution to the War cost this month in the form of a 5% Victory tax.

For many millions of Americans the Victory tax and the 1943 income tax are the first direct levies to be made by the Government to meet the staggering War costs. And it will take both . . . taxes and War bonds . . . to provide the supplies and materials to win the War and the peace afterwards.

The Treasury Department estimates that the Victory tax will raise approximately $2,000,000,000. Every person receiving more than $12 per week must pay the Victory tax upon that part of his income over and above the $12. For example, a married man with a salary of $50 per week, with two dependents, would make only a net payment of $1.06 per week after allowance for post-war credit.

The Government has made every effort to make the impact of the new tax as light as possible. The law, in effect, provides that in the case of married persons whose sole income is from wages or salary, 40 percent of the Victory tax paid (up to a maximum of $1,000) plus 2 percent for each dependent (up to a maximum of $100) may be used as a credit against whatever Federal income taxes the individual may owe at the end of the year—provided he has purchased certain War Bonds, or paid old debts or paid life insurance premiums equal to the amount of this credit. In the case of single persons this credit will be 25 percent of the Victory tax paid (up to a maximum of $500). Should the Victory tax credit exceed the individual's Federal income tax, the unused portion of the credit may be refundable to the taxpayer.

Even with the Victory tax, the 1943 income tax, and all other taxes paid by individuals, the average American will have more money with which to buy War Bonds than he has ever had before. Here are the statistics which explain that statement:

In 1940 the total income payments made to the American people amounted to about 76 billion dollars. In that same year the total personal taxes paid, Federal, State and local, were roughly 2.5 billion dollars, leaving 73.5 billion dollars of disposable income. During 1943 total income payments are expected to rise to 125 billion dollars and total personal taxes under existing revenue legislation will be 15 billion dollars—leaving 110 billion dollars of income at our disposal as against only 73.5 billion dollars in 1940.

In 1943 Mr. Average American will still be carrying a much lighter tax load than his Canadian or English brothers-in-arms. In Great Britain total national and local taxes paid by individuals at present amount to 31 percent of the national income. In Canada, total individual taxes amount to 25 percent of the national income. In the United States, total personal taxes, Federal, state and local, will amount in 1943 to 18 percent of national income. Our English allies invest an additional 10 percent of national income in War savings. Our Canadian allies invest an additional 11 percent of national income in War savings. We Americans, to match the record of our Canadian neighbors, would have to invest this year 20 percent of our national income in War savings. To match the English record we would have to invest 23 percent of national income in War savings.

Attention Merchants (ceiling prices)

Price filing deadline for dry edible beans, canned vegetables, dried fruits new maximum prices must be determined by Jan. 31 and filed with the local rationing board by Feb. 10, according to MPR No. 238. For coffee, coffee substitutes, canned fish, cooking and salad oils, hydrogenated shortening, other shortening, corn meal, pure maple syrup, pure cane syrup, evaporated and condensed milk, flour and flour mixes, caned citrus fruits, and canned citrus juices—new maximum prices must be determined by March 10 and filed with boards by March 20. Wholesalers report new prices to their state or district offices.

The percentage of mark up will be forwarded to retail merchants by the local rationing board.

NEW BOARD MEMBERS

The local rationing board has been increased from three to six members. Three of the new members are: Dr. W. L. Parrish, Mr. Hugh Taylor of Coopers, and Mr. James Dennis of Clanton, these three gentlemen compose the tire and gasoline panel of the six man board. The other three members of th board will comprise the panel to handle food rationing and price ceiling. The sixth member of the board to fill the place vacated by the resignation of Mr. C. Fenn Jones will be announced later. The personnel of the board was increased in an effort to make the board more efficient and to render a higher degree of service to the public.

BOOK NO. 2

Final plans for distribution of rationing book two will be announced through this column later.

Amount of Victory Tax Deductible from Weekly Wages of Selected Amounts and Amount of Net Victory Tax After Deduction of Credits

Weekly wage (gross amount)	Gross Victory tax	Net Victory tax after credits
		Single person—no dependents	Married person—no dependents	Married person—two dependents
$ 12	—	—	—	—

WORKERS NEEDED IN MOBILE SHIP YARDS

Thousands of workers — skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled—are now urgently needed in Alabama Shipyards and any resident of Alabama who wants a part in the war program can be referred to a shipyard job where he can be trained while working and can draw wages while he is in training.

C. F. Anderson, Director for Alabama of the United States Employment Service, today issued an appeal to all persons, regardless of past work experience, who are not employed in war industry and who are available for work in shipyards, to register at the nearest office of the United States Employment Service. He also instructed all local office managers to intensify recruitment efforts. Mr. Anderson likewise pointed out that while for quite a period living conditions were almost impossible to find by new shipyard workers, this condition has been greatly improved. In most instances, he said, persons are told where they can find a place to live at the same time they are referred to jobs.

Mr. Patton announced that a representative of the United States Employment Service will be at the Court House or City Hall Auditorium in Clanton between the hours of 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. January 26 and will interview all persons who are interested in jobs in Alabama shipyards, on that date and each Tuesday thereafter.

CEDAR GROVE CHURCH

Preaching by the pastor, Rev. Reese Farnell, Sunday at 11 a.m. and that night at 7:30 p.m. Let everybody remember these services, and let's make God's house resound with prayer, praise and thanksgiving.

For the production of paper matches, (or 45 per cent of the matches used) 70 or 80 million board feet of lumber are used annually. Also 500 tons of steel go into staples, to fasten the matches into books. Matches should not be wasted, for precious are the labor and material necessary in manufacturing them.

U. S. JOBS OPEN IN ECONOMICS, STATISTICS, TRANSPORTATION, ACCOUNTING

Complex problems connected with the war have created in Federal agencies a heavy demand for economists, statisticians, and transportation specialists, Mr. Reese G. Mullins, Local Secretary for the United States Civil Service Commission announced today. Accountng assistants are also required.

Very much needed are econimists and statisticians to assist Federal agencies conduct studies and analyses relative to commodities, industries, prices, markets, international economics, and many other fields. Men and women with at least 5 years of appropriate college study or experience are sought, Mr. Mullins said.

Transportation specialists are needed to prevent traffic bottlenecks and expedite the flow of passenger and freight traffic throughout the United States as well as around the globe. Persons with at least 3 years of appropriate experience in railroad, highway water, or air transportation will be recruited.

Yearly salaries for these positions range from $2,600 to $6,500 plus overtime compensation. (Granted for the recently lengthened Federal workweek, overtime compensation amounts to approximately 21% of that part of the basic salary not in excess of $2,900, provided the increment does not make the total compensation more than $5,000 a year.)

No written test and no maximum age limit is specified for these positions, Mr. Mullns emphaszed. Persons are selected on the bass of experience.

Assistant's positions pay $2,000 a year plus overtime compensation amounting to approximately 21%. Persons with 2 years of appropriate education or experience in the field of accounting are eligible to take the test. Women particularly are urged to apply.

Complete information and forms for appliyng for all of these positions may be obtained from Mr. Reese G. Mullins at P. O. Clanton, Ala., or from first or second-class post offices.

Applications are not desired from war workers unless they use higher skill in the positions applied for. For War Manpower Commission restructions on Federal appointments, see form 3989, posted in first-or second-class post offices.

Building "Pee" roads in New Guinea is all part of the day's work for American army engineers. This particular road under construction near Port Moresby, main Allied base in New Guinea, is so steep that the men must hold on to ropes to keep from falling backward. The grade drops about 65 degrees behind them.

CORN CEILINGS:
Spur Meat Production

Although Food Administrator Claude Wickard had been steadily urging farmers to increase meat, dairy, poultry and egg production to meet war demands, the price of corn had been rising to a point where farmers found it more profitable to sell than to use the grain to feed cattle, hogs and chickens.

Moving to stabilize corn prices, the OPA under instructions from Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes imposed a ceiling at January 8th to 12th prices for 60 days, promising permanent ceilings later. Declaring that these ceiling prices were in excess of 100 per cent of parity when taking into consideration AAA benefit payments, officials said the ceilings would establish price relationships at which farmers would find it profitable to feed, thus preventing shortages of vitally needed foods.

As observers had expected, the government action produced repercussions. Livestock feeders were pleased, since grain prices were stabilized; corn growers, whose profit incentive for maintaining record production was reduced, expressed displeasure.

CHINESE FREEDOM:
Real but Deferred

China was too busy fighting Japs to take time off to celebrate the treaty by which Great Britain and the United States abolished extraterritorial rights. But this action meant that once the Japs were ousted, China would enjoy real and unqualified freedom for the first time in a century.

The agreements, subject to favorable U. S. senate action will do away with political, military, commercial and judicial preferences under which Britain and America hold jurisdiction over their own shipping in Chinese ports, their own special law courts in Shanghai, their international settlements and their right to maintain troops in China.

Months, and perhaps years remained to complete the readjustments, but the march for Chinese freedom had begun.

NAVAL LOSSES:
U. S. Lists Names

"Reasons of military security" no longer made secrecy necessary, so the navy announced the names of 11 warships previously reported as lost in three battles of the Solomons. The list included the 20,000-ton aircraft carrier Hornet and two of the nation's fastest and newest light cruisers, the Juneau and Atlanta and the heavy cruiser Northampton.

Likewise reported as sunk were seven destroyers, the Cushing, Preston, Benham, Walke, Monssen, Laffey and Barton.

Commanders of five of the ships were listed as missing, while the skippers of the other six, including Rear Adm. Charles P. Mason of the Hornet were reported safe. Greatest losses were in the epic sea battle off Guadalcanal in November when all seven destroyers and both light cruisers were sunk. In this battle 28 Jap ships were destroyed.

BUDGET:
Asks 109 Billion

Plenty of headaches for Hitler and Hirohito were inherent in the epochal $109,000,000,000 total war budget for the 1943-44 fiscal year which congress was scanning studiously. Largest budget in world history, the total would devote $100,000,000,000 to war activities, the remainder to domestic government expense and interest on the national debt which by July, 1944, would reach $210,000,000,000.

Plenty of wrinkles furrowed the brows of fiscal experts as they contemplated the stupendous budget. The mere act of spending such sums meant bringing nearer the specter of inflation. With more money jingling in American pockets because of war-boosted income and fewer goods to buy because of necessary war rationing the nation faced a supreme economic test.

Antidote to the inflation threat was President Roosevelt's dual-purpose recommendation: Syphon off $16,000,000,000 in new taxes or forced savings from national income; add this to the present $35,000,000,000 tax bill and thus provide $51,000,000,000 which would pay about half the war costs and be a potent checkmate to inflation. And to enable wage earners to meet the steadily mounting bill, moves had been speeded to provide pay-as-you-go machinery for collecting the new levies.

RUSSIA:
Decision at Rostov?

Military strategists eyed Rostov, key communications city at the mouth of the Don river. Here, they felt, history would be written in weeks to come that would determine whether Hitler's Russian adventure would be a complete rout or merely disaster deferred.

Toward Rostov converged the retreating Nazi armies from the south, east and north. Toward Rostov, too, moved the advancing Russian armies whose successful winter offensives had badly upset Nazi tactical calculations. Here the struggle would reach decisive stages.

Continued gains of the Russians in the Caucasus south of Rostov—gains which carried them beyond the strategic rail city of Georgievsk in incredibly short periods—suggested to some observers that the German armies were retiring with virtually no resistance to the Rostov area. These observers pointed out that at Rostov the Nazis might make as bitterly stubborn a resistance as the Reds had at Stalingrad northwest on the Volga.

SUPREME COURT:
FDR Sets Record

George Washington had appointed the original six members of the Supreme court and filled seven vacancies during his two terms. Franklin D. Roosevelt set a record for the number named by one President since Washington's time when he selected Judge Wiley B. Rutledge as his eighth appointee to the tribunal.

As the court is now constituted, Owen J. Roberts, appointed by President Hoover, is the only justice on the court not named by Roosevelt.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LONDON: Fresh eggs, as priceless as thick sirloin steaks, returned to the ordinary British consumer's diet on at least a token basis, it was announced officially here. Ordinary consumers were scheduled to get one fresh egg a month. Priority classes, including nursing mothers, invalids and infants will get a dozen a month. Powdered egg rations remained a dozen a person a month.

PARIS: Because he attempted to oppose the Germans when they completed their occupation of France last November, Maj. Gen. De Lattre Tassigny was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment by a special court, the Vichy radio reported. General Tassigny was in command of the Montpelier district and led his men in a short and abortive revolt. At one time he was a Tunisian commander.

NORTH AFRICA:
Mud Enemy No. 1

Mud and recurrent tropical rains had continued to make anything but air activity virtually impossible on the Tunisian North Africa front. While optimistic estimates predicted better weather by early February, other forecasts lengthened the rainy season until March.

But a four-way threat to the narrowing African coastal region still in Axis hands was steadily developing as Allied aircraft attacked German and Italian bases over a 600-mile area.

From Tunisia a French column was reported to have cut across into Tripolitania some 300 miles below Tripoli. Another French column from the Lake Chad area was moving north. On the east the British eighth army under Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery was pressing the remnants of Marshal Rommel's forces, while in Tunisia the American, British and French forces were preparing for the time when the weather would permit them to take the offensive against Bizerte and Tunis, remaining Axis strongholds on the African Mediterranean coast.

SO. WESTERN PACIFIC:
New Guinea Struggle

The Japs were determined to give up their remaining footholds in New Guinea only at the same stubborn cost at which they had yielded the Gona-Buna area. It had taken nearly four months to wipe out the Jap beachhead in this sector. Still in Nipponese hands were Sananada, Lae, Salamaua and Madang. Closest in was Sananada and here a three-pronged Allied drive had hemmed in the last survivors and cut off all hope of reinforcement.

The subjugation of remaining Lae, Salamaua and Madang presented another story. Their successful assault meant overcoming the same complex problems of supply that impeded and delayed the offensive against the Japanese at Buna and Gona. And until these New Guinea positions were wiped out, the United Nations would be unable to launch any offensive to extend Allied control on to New Britain.

Guadalcanal

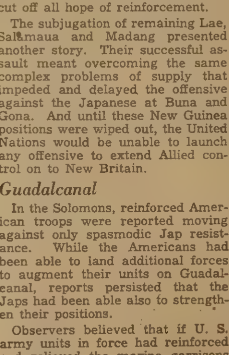
In the Solomons, reinforced American troops were reported moving against only spasmodic Jap resistance. While the Americans had been able to land additional forces to augment their units on Guadalcanal, reports persisted that the Japs had been able also to strengthen their positions.

Observers believed that if U. S. army units in force had reinforced and relieved the marine garrisons on Guadalcanal, the next step would be a concentrated move to push American occupation further to the north in the Solomons with the ultimate goal of completely ejecting the Japs.

RECIPROCAL TRADE:
Hull Girds for Fight

Tennessee-bred Secretary of State Cordell Hull who never backs away from a fight prepared to wage a vigorous battle to preserve his reciprocal trade agreements from the onslaughts of opposing congressmen.

Although the presidential authority over reciprocal trade agreements does not expire until June, a bill to terminate them already had been introduced by Representative Harold Knutson of Minnesota and referred to the house ways and means committee.



CORDELL HULL

In addition to considering this proposal to terminate the agreements now in effect between this country and 25 others, the committee also will have to pass on legislation to extend the President's authority to make such agreements. Congressional observers believe the extension proposal will be bitterly fought by certain groups. Strongly championing the measures will be Secretary Hull, who was their original sponsor.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS:

More than 30 per cent of the nation's war production workers will be women by the end of 1943 and a proportionately larger number will be employed in essential civilian trades and services, it was predicted by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower commission.

Mr. McNutt estimated that 4,000,000 of the present 17,000,000 war workers are women and forecast 6,000,000 by the end of 1943.

Bureau of Budget Assumes New Legislative Importance

Director Harold D. Smith Responsible Only to President; Real Value Lies in Counsel Given to Nation's Lawmakers.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

A budget that bites.

That is what the United States government will have if Harold Dewey Smith, director of the bureau of the budget since April, 1939, when America started its astronomical spending, has his way.

He is not concerned with the size of Uncle Sam's bill alone—his job is to see that the dollars appropriated by the congress go to work, that no dollars are appropriated which aren't needed to do the job the congress wants done, that no two dollars are doing the same job.

I thought it would be interesting to take a look at the man who had just given his okeh to the biggest budget in American history while the ink on the report was still damp. So I wended my way up the curling staircase of the solemn old State Department building to his office (second-floor front) and was ushered into the presence of Mr. Smith, a bland-faced gentleman from Kansas with a middlewestern accent like the one which echoes through my natal corn fields. The last conversations between Mr. Smith and the President were taking place just before the 1943 budget message was completed. Mr. Smith, who budgets his own time as well as the government's money, gave me some fiscal philosophy between pipe-puffs.

"A budget should be an administrative tool," he told me quietly, speaking with a happy combination of the poker-faced accountant and the old-shoe corner-store crony.

Budgeting for governments—municipal, state, nation—were the result of the efforts of the reformers, he explained. But, as usual, when the reformers had the laws passed they ran off and left them to administer themselves. The result was that budgeting dried up into bookkeeping routine.

"I have a new concept of budgeting," he said with a forthright modesty that characterizes his remarks about his work, "any clerk can add up figures." The real job of the budget bureau is to examine the programs of the administrative agencies for which the cash is to be spent, to weigh their significance in terms of economic service—not just publish a report every year as big as a dictionary that serves to confuse the public.

The year before Smith came into office the bureau of the budget had an appropriation of 187 thousand dollars—30 thousand of that went into the publication of the bound report. In other words, the agency which bottlenecks the spending of billions had 150 thousand to spend on itself.

Separate Entity

The bureau by law is a separate entity which is under no department. The director is responsible to the President. The bureau reports to congress.

"It is a staff agency," Smith pointed out, "detached, objective, critical."

Today in Washington there is no doubt that this detached and objective criticism has become a powerful element in the writing of laws of the land. Before a bill is passed it goes under the microscope of the budgeteers. Smith, it is generally admitted, has as much influence on the President, when it comes to the formation of policy which is frozen into law, as any man in Washington. He reviews every bill which is passed and advises whether the President should sign it or veto it.

But the real, constructive value of the bureau of the budget which has been given a dynamic force under Smith's direction, is the advice and counsel it can render in advance of the passage of legislation.

Proponents of a bill ask the budget bureau's advice before they present their testimony to the committees which pass life or death sentences on a measure. And it is Smith's idea to make this an increasingly positive function; to compile frequent important technical reports on proposed programs for the guidance of the committees.

The budget bureau has always consulted with the departments and agencies and the common practice of a department head is to ask for more than he expects in the hope he won't get much less than he wants. Smith's idea is to provide active cooperation by obtaining data on how current programs are functioning before renewing or increasing appropriations. Thus the budget becomes a tool of administration.

Confusion

He gave me an example of one problem he is working on now.

"Today there is confusion and conflict between many government departments and agencies. Examination of their methods is clearing this up. There is even conflict and confusion between agencies and their own field forces. This the budget bureau with a field force of its own can eliminate," Smith believes.

"When an agency doesn't like the way we examine the administration of its program and says, 'you are getting into operation,' I tell them, 'No, we are not. We don't want to operate but we do intend to be constructively critical.' "

Another constructive job that Smith feels is important is reconciliation between the government agency asking congress for money and congress trying to keep down costs on the one hand, or trying to bring new benefits to its constituencies, on the other.

"Congress has a tendency to shy away from bureaucracy, the bureau heads have a distrust of congress. Congress frequently gets facts mixed with policy. But facts are facts. Our job is to get the facts and to present them objectively."

Politics doesn't worry Smith. He served under three governors of Michigan, of highly different temperament, party and policies and he says that politics entered very little into the decisions made by any of them on the recommendations he made.

He said that the same thing applies to his experience with President Roosevelt.

"We may not have made all the recommendations we should," he said, "but 90 per cent of those we have made the President has accepted."

Since his college days, when he specialized in engineering, and later in civil administration, Smith has been engaged in some phase of the work he is doing now: regulating the "ways and means" of government.

"DEAR Mrs. Spears: Recently I sent for your stamping pattern of Mexican figures and used them for two sets of tea towels and pot holders and a pair of curtains for my grand-daughter. Her husband made racks of them that also helped to give the kitchen a gay air.

A triangle shelf to fit in a corner near the sink was put up. It had an ordinary bathroom towel rod screwed to the bottom, and painted, cut-out scallops nailed to the front. For the pot holders, he scalloped both edges of a 4 by ½-inch board; painted it; screwed a brass cup hook in the center of every other scallop and then nailed it up over the stove. G. B. S."

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—John 5:2-17.
GOLDEN TEXT — Wilt thou be made whole?—John 5:6.

Hope of the hopeless, help of the helpless—who would that be, but Jesus? Coming to Jerusalem for the feast He did not seek out the homes of the mighty, the places of learning and culture, but betook Himself to the Pool of Bethesda, where there "lay a multitude of them that were sick, blind, halt, withered." Why did He go to such a place? Because He always had compassion upon those in need.

In this multitude He saw at once the neediest man of all—one without friends or loved ones to care for him, despondent and disheartened. What happened that day may well encourage the heart of every sad, lonely, and discouraged one.

I. Hopeless Infirmity (vv. 1-7).

How weak and helpless is humanity. Oh, yes, we seem to be strong, capable, fearless, but only until we meet some great elemental problem. Then we see that we are indeed a great multitude of impotent folk. The gently falling snow stopped the undefeated Napoleon. The silent fog can paralyze a nation. Sickness, death—who can stay their hand? We need the steady and powerful grip of God upon our lives if we are to go through such experiences. Not only was this man ill and weak, but his long years of suffering had made him so accustomed to weakness that he had reached a state of despair.

Such an attitude invites defeat. It may be the only recourse of the man of the world, but with Jesus standing by to help, there is good reason for assurance of faith in the darkest hour.

In the face of his need—yes, even in the light of Jesus' provision for that need—the leaders of the Jews could only criticize.

II. Heartless Religion (vv. 10-13, 15-16).

Jesus had done for the man what the Jews had not been able to do; in fact, one wonders whether they had so much as lifted a finger to help this poor sufferer. But now that he was able to walk, they were greatly concerned about the violation of their Sabbath day restriction against any work.

Instead of shouting for joy that this man was able to carry not only himself but his bed, they became zealous about maintaining the letter of their law.

Are there not those in our day who would be greatly disturbed if the deathlike quiet and dignity of their church services were to be broken by the cry of a new born babe in Christ? Would a revival be welcomed in the great churches of America which have lost the savor of Christ and the power of the gospel? We think not.

The man who had been healed answered well (v. 11). He did not know who Jesus was, but he knew that if He had authority to heal, He also had the right to tell him to carry his bed. When we meet Jesus we will be healed of our infirmities and, like this man, be delivered from the fear of cold ecclesiasticism.

But let us turn to the heart of our lesson, which is the act of Jesus in giving him

III. Healing of Body and Soul (vv. 8, 9, 14).

The body of this man was miraculously healed. There was no partial improvement, no long drawn out convalescence and regaining of strength. In fact, he was told to do something which called for the full vigor of a healthy body, to show that he was healed.

Even so when we are healed from sin it is not to a half-dead existence, but to the full vigor of spiritual life. We are to arise and walk in the power and grace which Christ has brought into our lives.

Note that the miracle performed here was for the glory of God. The miracles of God are not mere marvels or wonders. They are not for the advancement of the cause of any man or for personal glory. They are the mighty signs of an omnipotent God wrought for the good of men, for their spiritual enlightenment, and as a testimony to the one true God.

So in this case Jesus found the man in the temple to admonish him to continue steadfast in the spiritual liberty which had come to him "lest a worse thing befall" him.

Evidently this man's infirmity had been caused by sin, and even though he had suffered those 38 long years the tendency toward sin was still alive in his heart. Sin dies hard. How often have we not seen those who have cried to God out of their affliction, promising all sorts of spiritual changes if God will deliver them. When He does, they go right back to their old ways. The one who does that may well be looking for the "worse thing" which will surely befall him.

UNTIL the academy awards come through everybody can find food for argument in those voted by the New York film critics. Noel Coward's British navy film, "In Which We Serve," which opened in New York at the end of 1942, was chosen the best picture of the year after stubborn balloting; some of the critics wanted the award for the very stirring "Wake Island." James Cagney was chosen best actor for his work in "Yankee Doodle Dandy"; Agnes Moorhead the best actress for her performance in "The Magnificent Ambersons." Greer Garson and Katharine Hepburn were contenders for that crown for a while, but Miss Moorhead won out.

Jane Randolph is on her way up; she has the feminine lead opposite Tom Conway in "The Falcon Strikes Back," the next of the RKO mystery series based on that detective's exploits, and it's her fourth film since she was discovered last summer in a routine screen test that led to her being given a leading role in "Highways by Night." She'll be a star before you know it.

Incidentally, Greer Garson's engagement to Richard Ney seems to be a thing of the past. It didn't seem like the kind of troth that Hollywood executives approve for their biggest stars—he wasn't important enough in the picture business. On the other hand, she seems to be the kind of person who does as she likes—and with "Mrs. Miniver" to her credit she could do it.

Dorothy Lamour, Veronica Lake and Paulette Goddard just scrambled a few old clothes together when they appeared in Paramount's "Star Spangled Rhythm," the big musical which has 70 stars. For their number, "A Sweater, a Sarong and a Peek-a-boo Bang" Paulette wore a sweater and shorts from "Nothing but the Truth," Veronica the low-cut gown that made audiences gasp when they saw "I Wanted Wings," and Dorothy just got into one of her regular sarongs. For other scenes, as they were supposed to be working in the studio in their own pictures, they wore clothes from "The Road to Morocco," "The Lady Has Plans" and "This Gun for Hire."

You might keep an eye on Ann Savage, if you want to see a star in the making. She made her stage debut in a little theater a few months ago, and Columbia signed her to a contract and gave her a few minor roles to get her used to camera angles. Now they think that she's a potential star, and she's been given the role opposite Chester Morris in "After Midnight With Boston Blackie."

TO YOUR Good Health

FIRST AID

Dr. Barton

One of the good things that comes from the war is the interest in first aid. Everywhere, even in small villages, first aid classes are being formed and the members of the class learn the correct manner of handling the injured.

So widespread is the interest in first aid that our humorists and cartoonists are using it in their strips or columns. I have spoken before of one class in which the young man being treated for a "supposed" broken leg was allowed to fall off the table and really did break his leg. In putting him into the ambulance he was not pushed far enough forward and the door being forcibly closed struck his head and caused concussion. The humorous comment was that with a few more lessons this class could be sent against the enemy.

A daily cartoon about youngsters shows the little heroine trying first aid methods on youngsters whom her boy friend had damaged in order to give her the necessary cases in which to practice.

As a matter of fact, the first lesson taught by the instructor to a first aid class is that they are not learning to be doctors but to do the right thing until the doctor arrives, thereby preventing complications and saving life. Many physicians, including myself, can testify to the skill and judgment of the members of these classes. I have taught first aid classes and have worked with members of the Red Cross and St. John's Ambulance corps.

My point in writing about first aid is to emphasize the importance of the first lesson given by the first aid instructors which is that what not to do is as important as what to do.

Dr. H. E. McDermott, editor of the Canadian Medical Journal, says: "There is great value in a widespread knowledge of first aid methods and there can be nothing but encouragement of the movement. At the same time experience shows that enthusiasm to learn and practice first aid must be kept within proper bounds. The first aider must realize his limits and never exceed them. That is the first and great commandment in his work."

"First aid is largely a combination of physiology and common sense."

Calmness of Mind Great Aid in Colitis

When the four letters "itis" are used, it means "inflammation of." Thus we have appendicitis, pleuritis, sinusitis, mastoiditis, all meaning inflammation of these organs. Following this rule colitis means inflammation of the colon, and there are certain cases where the colon is inflamed and are rightly called colitis. The colon is the large intestine which holds the wastes.

However, what is often called colitis is a spasm of the colon, which is called spastic colitis, but there is no real inflammation of the colon present.

Functional not organic, conditions of the colon are outlined by Dr. J. H. Geddes, London, Ontario, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. These are colitis, spastic colitis, mucous colitis, spastic constipation, tonic hardening of the colon, irritable colon, and having the mind always on the colon—colon conscious.

Dr. Geddes believes that irritable colon and being always conscious of the colon really represent all the above conditions — disturbances in the nervous, muscular and gland control of the colon, or large intestine. As in all functional disturbances or diseases, the fault does not lie in the colon itself, but in the unstable nervous condition of the individual.

Other general types of colitis have a combination of symptoms, the commonest being gas and bloating, and sometimes loss of appetite. Intestinal parasites — worms — have symptoms resembling colitis.

Of course, in all cases where there is gas, bloating, bowel spasm, diarrhea and constipation, the use of the X-rays will greatly help in finding the cause, and it should be used. Naturally in times of strain and stress as at present, the number of cases of colitis greatly increases.

Successful treatment consists in trying to acquire calmness of mind even when the problem is very great, and also to use soft nonirritant foods.

QUESTION BOX

Q. Please suggest a diet for the correction of anemia. What would you suggest that I do about a knot that is behind my ear, which is very annoying?

A. Foods which are rich in iron such as egg yolk, liver, leafy vegetables should prove helpful. You might take a tonic if your physician thinks it is necessary. If the spot behind your ear is painful, you should by all means consult your physician

By Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Effervescent Utopians talk now and then of the day when homes will be traded in as freely as automobiles. Cheap, demountable and having a resale value according to age they will, it has been predicted, be swapped for new and slicker ones as owners tire of them or spurt up the economic ladder from the business coupe to the town sedan rung. When, if and as this happens, happy buyers will do well to toast the memory of John B. Blandford Jr., for it cannot happen without a strong drift away from present-day housing and Blandford is the lad whose bellows is helping that drift nowadays.

Big Drift Away From Orthodox Housing Is Seen

Thirty thousand war workers move into public housing accommodations each month. That's Blandford, the national housing administrator. In the past 12 months 278,000 new war-housing units have flown the green sapling that means "finished" in the symbolism of builders. That's Blandford, too. And if plans now on the griddle cook to the right turn there will be thousands more. And the old-fashioned house that a man bought to raise and marry his children in, and shelter himself in his slippered retirement will have tough competition.

Blandford, only 45, is the graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology, called by President Roosevelt a man of "amazing executive ability." A thick, solid amazer with perky ears he smiles his way along as a man should under such praise.

EVERY home could use a Dr. Walter H. Eddy these none too cheerful days. It is luck that he is only professor emeritus of physiological chemistry at Columbia university. Off the active list, he has time on his hands as well as "a kind and gentle heart—to comfort friends and foes." War rationing will make us all pull in our belts but, Dr. Eddy says, we need not worry because the health of Americans should not suffer. Well! Maybe "foes" carries the comfort farther than even the doctor would have it go. The Nazis won't be comforted. Not much!

Finds a Bright Side to All This War Rationing

A while back Dr. Eddy was comforting a crowd only a little less needy than today's butter-meat-canned-goods-and-sugar-shy nation. He told a conference that both tea and coffee made for vim and vigor and also helped as much toward sleep as counting sheep. Both, he said, were stimulating morning drinks but at night tended to induce sleep, when taken in moderation. These happy conclusions, and his grand one touching on war rationing, are not those of a Johnny-come-lately, but of a fellow whose record in his own field almost matches Babe Ruth's.

Now the newly-appointed chairman of the Institute of Dietetics, Dr. Eddy was a major in the last war and is an expert consultant to the quartermaster general of the army in this one.

COL. MERIAN C. COOPER is back from China, and Washington correspondents are left in no doubt about his admiration for his chief, Brig. Gen. Claire Chennault. Colonel Cooper knows just what he wants to say, and says it. Twenty-odd years ago, while the rest of the newspaper reporters were wavering in front of the steam table at Hannon's restaurant in Minneapolis his mind was always clear. Roast beef! And a good dish, too, for 15 cents.

Name a Place and Col. Cooper Knows Traffic Cop There

He has eaten better, and worse, since, and China, like Minneapolis, is just another way station in a succession of bounces which have taken him around the world and to spare. When he was in Abyssinia, Haile Selassie gave him a palace and wanted to throw a hunting party for him, but Cooper didn't have time. Before that he flew a fighting plane in France with the AEF, and later headed up the barnstorming pilots who rolled across Europe in boxcars to join the Poles, then fighting Red Russia. Afterward he went exploring in Asia and India.

A couple of motion pictures grew out of these treks and so, finally, he landed in Hollywood. There he stayed until this new war, when he again donned a uniform. His wife was easily one of Hollywood's prettiest actresses. Cooper wasn't bad looking himself, while he had hair. They have a couple of sons, small fry, and when one of these wrote to China that he wanted a pig for a pet he got it with no fuss at all. Colonel Cooper is 49 now, and the older he grows the worse tobacco he smokes. General Chennault's fliers named his pipe Auld Reekie.

The problem of what to send a service man has been solved by the men themselves. Tobacco tops the list of gifts service men prefer from the folks back home, according to numerous surveys. If you have a friend or relative in the armed forces—Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard—who smokes a pipe, or rolls-his-own, a pound of his favorite tobacco is very much in order. A big favorite with many service men is Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. Local dealers now are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for the men in the service.—Adv.

We in America call the ground floor of a building the first story. What we call the second story is the first "storey" to the British. The word "story" derives from the past participle of the old French verb "estorer," meaning to build.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

A Letter On Old AGE PENSIONS

By Dr. Gragg

As your Chairman in Chilton County, I want to appeal to all interested in Old Age Pensions, to take active steps to show their interest.

Other states are paying these Old Age Pensions, and the Federal Government is meeting them with an equal appropriation; and our taxpayers here in this state are helping to pay that Federal appropriation. Why not pay the pensions here, at home, in our own state? Certainly it looks like poor business to spend our money to pay it in other states and not pay it at home to our own people; but that is exactly what we are doing now.

If we want to change this to a reasonable, common sense, way of doing things; then we must convince our Governor and Legislature, that we want this and are expecting them to take active steps to pass such measures as may be necessary to secure such laws, at this session, not sometime in the far distant future, but now

How can we so impress them? As I see it; every one who is entitled now, or will be entitled in the near future, to Old Age Pension; should be a member now. If you are not now an active member; go now, or within the next few days, to T. E. Wyatt, Secretary, and file an application for membership If you are sixty-five years of age it costs you nothing.. If younger you will pay a membership fee, but that would be a mighty good way to invest your money.

If we only have a few members, naturally our law makers will conclude that we are an insignificant body, and that "nobody is interested" and therefore, will lose interest themselves.

Later, we will wake up and begin to howl, and blame them after it is too late. In reality, it will be our own fault because of lack of interest.

Now folks, especially the older ones let's get busy. Let's all join the old folks pension move. Let's attend the meeting that will be held shortly at the courthouse. Let's get thoroughly organized and let our lawmakers know what we want. Then if they neglect us, we can rightfully hold them responsible for such act. Don't neglect this important duty, join the organization, come to the meeting, and let the powers that be, know where you stand and what you want. Then, if they give us what we want; there ill be a time that we can return the favor. If they forget us, then maybe, our memories might fail somewhere.

I did not get to the last meeting, but hope to attend the next one, even if I must travel two hundred and fifty miles to get there.

Again reminding you that if you want the Old Age Pension Law you should act now, before it is too late; and come to the meeting, and join the organization, and send a committee to Montgomery, at the proper time, to ask for what we need and want.

Ever at your service,
V. J. Gragg, Chairman.

NEIGHBOR'S SEED PEANUTS ARE GOOD AS CAN BE BOUGHT

Probably the best seed peanuts growers will be able to buy this year will be from their neighbors, J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, points out in encouraging farmers to use this source when ever possible. .

There have been some excellnt peanuts grown in the State the past season, and those may now be sold for planting purposes under recent AAA regulations relaxing excess peanuts provisions.

Farmers may obtain further information on seed peanuts by contacting county agents or local AAA committeemen.

Three Cheers for You from Our Men in Uniform
USA
And Many Thanks from GREYHOUND!
Greyhound Lines

With Your Co-operation Greyhound Got 'Em Home for The Holidays!

Thanks to you, a most critical period in war-time bus transportation has been passed with flying colors.

Just before Christmas, Greyhound asked you to "Give your Holiday trips to men in the service"—and you who have learned to depend upon Greyhound for your travel needs, responded!

As a result of your postponing such trips, thousands of men and women in uniform were able to go home by bus to spend precious hours with loved ones.

While helping members of the armed forces, you also made travel smoother and more convenient for war workers and others whose trips could not wait. It's cooperation like this that makes it possible for Greyhound and other bus lines to carry on the tremendous mass-transportation job that is so completely essential to winning the war.

Now the holiday period is passed, Greyhound will make every effort to see that the service you count on is available when you need it—and with the utmost comfort and convenience that war conditions will permit.

We suggest, however, that you phone or call upon your nearest Greyhound agent well in advance of any trip. He can help you choose days and schedules that will be most convenient for you and best for wartime travel.

Mrs. R. M. Tucker :-: Phone 32 or 178-J

The Baptist W. M. S. met at the church Monday afternoon, for their Mission Program with Circle One giving the program and Mrs. Leonard Farley in charge. The meeting was opened with the hymn "All Hail The Power," Mrs. Jimmie Taylor brought the devotional message, and Mrs. J. P. Hayes gave the opening prayer. Others taking part on the program included, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. Polk, and Mrs. Owens.

Following the most interesting program a very brief business session was conducted bf Mrs. Jack Hayes ,in the absence of the president. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. R. M. Tucker, who presented 14 of her Jr. G. A. girls in a promotion program, asking Mrs. J. P. Hayes former Presilent of W. M. S. to present them with their arm bands, having completed their first "forward steps" in G. A. work. These girls are very proud of their "armbands" and the W. M. S. is very proud of these girls.

Their program was concluded with the girls singing one verse of "Our Best".

The circles will meet next Monday in the following homes at 3 o'clock:

Circle One—Mrs. Ira Crowe.
Circle Two—Mrs. J. T. Ellis.
Circle Three—Mrs. J. R. Hardy.
Circle Four—Mrs. J. E. Gowan.
Circle Five—Mrs. J. W. Yeager.

The Jr. G. A. will hold their final meeting for January next Monday afternoon at 4:15 at the church. All members are urged to be present so that we may begin our new years work. Please be there Girls!

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wade are enjoying the lovely scenery and weather in Los Angeles, California and Hollywood.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Watson of Genoa, Ala., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Blair and left Monday to attend the Governor's inauguration in Montgomery.

We regret very much to report to her many friends that Mrs. Clara Curry fell last Friday and broke her arm .She is confined to her home and we sincerely hope that her injury will heal rapidly.

Mrs. F. N. Scott is home from the hospital and doing fine. Good luck, Mrs. Scott, hope to see you out soon

Mr. L. P. Cagle, who is working in Montgomery, was home for the week end and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cagle and granddaughter, Teena, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Cagle.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Patterson of Enterprise, Ala., were visitors here last Sunday with relatives.

We are sorry to report Mrs. Lizzie Dennis is not doing so well.

Mrs. Lola Dawson of Baton Rouge, La., is visiting her sister, Mrs. L. P. Cagle.

Mr. and Mrs. Evan J. Downs, and Mrs. Mayfield Slaughter and son Billie all of Birmingham, were visiting relatives and friends here last week.

Mrs. John Adams and little son of Homer, La., are here for a while with her mother, Mrs. L. D. Popwell, who is in Central Alabama Hospital.

Miss Francis Bean of Gunters Field, was home for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hammack and children, Bettie Joe, Billie and Jean of Walnut Grove have been the guests of Mrs. Hammack's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds.

Mrs. Percy Pitts, Sr., visited Birmingham this week end, as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Box, and to see Percy, Jr., who was passing through. He is being transferred.

EASTVIEW

The following services will be held at Eastview Congregational Christian Church this week end. —

Sunday:
10:00 Sunday School.
Supt. Mr. Bell Nelson.
11:00 Church Service.
7:00 Church Service.

The time and place for the Women's Missionary Society will be decided upon and announced at the Sunday services.

JEMISON F. H. A. MEETING

The Jemison F.H.A. chapter met January 15, to initiate the new members. There was a large group to be initiated this year. Of course all the girls were very scared but they think being a member is worth all this. All the other members enjoyed many laughs from the initiating of the new members. After the initiation the president called the meeting to order to discuss the annual F. H. A. and F. F. A. banquet. The club decided to have a chicken barbecue on the outside this year instead of the usual banquet. The exact time has not been set. Christine Green then gave a meeting. They then had refreshments and the meeting was adjourned.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Its been only a very few months since they were room mates at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Walker, here in Clanton. As was everyone else's, theirs was an easy life, complete in the friends and loved ones here at home. Then came the war. Both left and were sent to different camps for training. So busy were their days that we suspect little thought was given to the other. Months passed. At the Chicago Sales Company last week a letter was received from William Longshore. He had run into Eugene Erwin in North Africa, some six or seven thousand miles from Clanton. Gene was Ass't manager of the A. & P. Tea Co., and Wiliam was employed at Chicago Sales Company. As we said before, they were room mates at the G. C. Walker's. You can well imagine their feelings at meeting again under such circumstances.

If we sent a copy of the paper to every Public Relation's Office that requested it each week we would have to increase our subscription list about one-third. It isn't enough that we run their stuff, they want a tear-sheet to show the boss "what I did."

Rationing News, War Bond News, War Chest News and the like have first call on our news columns. If it tires you reading it just remember. It's all for a better tomorrow. and a tomorrow that is worth all the sacrifices that we can make, now. Your job is to help. It isn't the Rationing Boards job or the War Bond Committee's job. It's your job and my job what-'da-say? Let's do it. And we mean without bellyaching.

Spent a while Sunday afternoon with the kids out at Joe Minshew's Candy Company. Real interesting and the young one's enjoyed it a lot. Guess that was about the most pretty red stick candy that they had ever seen at one time. There was only one thing that struck me as funny. Joe has yet to say come on all you kids and get yourself a stick of candy. And the kids can't understand it either.

Saw Big Jim Folsom Sunday night at the L & N Station. Jim was headed for Montgomery and the Governors Inauguration. He didn't miss by so many thousand votes of being the one inaugurated and we guess he was going down to see how its done. Might come in handy some four years from this January.

John Mullins says his tires aren't getting thin but it is getting to where you can see the air through them . . . the old gentleman that wanted to buy some gum last week at Upchurch Drug Co. When told there was none he said, "I declare, don't know what things are coming too. This war is getting to be h--- ain't it." . . . probably took some of the old-timers back about 25 years the past week when the little McCain boys drove down the street in their buggy with six or eight boys and girls taking a 'joy ride' . . . Ruth Jones won the Majorette Contest at the High School Friday night, she's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crit Jones, Lay Dam . . . .

MARS HILL

Our Sunday School was small Sunday. Next Saturday night and Sunday is our preaching days. Lets all come and worship together.

Mrs. J. C. Scott visited Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Scott, Sunday.

Mr. Grover Gothard who is working at Montgomery, was home for the week end.

Mr. R. F. Langston and son Orben visited Mr. and Mrs. Claude Edwards at Wilton Sunday.

Our Club meeting at the home of Mrs. Etha Mae Gothard last Monday was well attended. We will meet with Mrs. Thelma Gothard next second Monday. Let's everyone come and make this year one among the best of our meetings.

We had a big crowd at our singing Sunday afternoon. Everyone seemed to enjoy it. We had visitors from Oak Grove, Jemison, Providence, Calera, and Center Hill. We were glad to have every one. We invite you all again.

REA Co-ops Mobilized For War, Says Report

War services of Alabama's 19 REA-efinanced rural electric cooperatives were described by M. A. McWilliams, Director, National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, in a report to A. W. Jones, chairman of the State USDA War Board. The Central Alabama Electric Cooperative, Prattville, Alabama, serving Autauga, Elmore, Coosa, Chilton, Bibb, Dallas, Lowndes, Talladega and Tallapoosa counties joined in the report according to W. C. Wingard, superintendent.

REA systems in Alabama now furnish electricity to 30,861 farms and other rural consumers in 56 counties, according to the report, making it possible for farmers to increase production with less farm labor. The report urged that state and county USDA War Boards and similar groups sponsoring programs devoted to the war effort make use of the services of the REA cooperatives. It said that they can act effectively as units in performing services vital to the winning of the war, especially in support of various campaigns such as the scrap drive, in increasing food production for the Food for Freedom program, and in relieving farm labor shortages. The 797 REA cooperatives in the country have been designated by the War Production Board to cooperate in the scrap collection drive with USDA War Board and other groups.

The Alabama cooperatives are helping to alleviate the farm labor shortage by encouraging their members to make the fullest use of electricity, according to the report. Electric brooders, electric lights in laying houses and electric water warmers are saving labor an dincreasing production of poultry and eggs. Electric milkers, milk coolers and water heaters are enabling dairies to meet new peak demands for milk despite serious farm labor shortages.

The report states that A. E. Jones of Collbran, in a three year demonstration with electric breeding, has shown a substatial decrease in mortality among chicks, extremely low electricity per chick and a saving of fifty per cent in labor. These findings are confirmed by the experience of J. E. Fitzpatrick, Collinsville, in similar demonstrations run in collaboration with the Alabama Extension Service.

W. T. Clemons, president of the Cullman Cooperative, points to important labor and financial savings through the use of electric farm appliances including water heaters, brooders, heaters for potato houses, electric fences and electric refrigerators. The report quotes Mr. Clemons as saying "Never in the history of the Cullman Electric Cooperative has there been such a demand for electric service."

Electric milkers, electric milk coolers, electric water heaters and other dairy appliances are in general use throughout the state according to the report, and are playing an important roll in helping dairy farmers keep up their production despite a shortage of labor. It points to Lloyd's Dairy, in Jackson county near Stevenson, as one of many notable examples.

The REA cooperatives are furnishing power to vital war establishments in their rural areas, among them an Army flying field, air beacons, Navy radio beams, an Army officers' quarters and an Army CCC camp.

PATE'S CHAPEL NEWS

Sunday was our regular preaching day, Bro. A. W. Nix filled his pulpit Sunday and Sunday night with two good sermons. There wasn't as many people out as we would like to see come, so we urge you who are not coming to make an effort to come to church. And the women cordially invite all the ladies and girls and children to come out every 1st Saturday evening to G. A., Sunbeams and W. M. S. We need your help.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. N. Hayes who is in South Highland Infirmary is not doing so well, we hope for her a speedy recovery.

The Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Nix and daughter Elaine took Sunday dinner with Mrs. Martha Gibson.

Mrs. Pearl Cleckler who has been on our sick list for quite a while is reported about the same.

There are a number of boys in our Community, who are leaving for the Army soon. We hope for them all the luck in Uncle Sam's Service.

A wedding of wide interest to their many friends and relatives was that of Miss Gladys Ray, daughter of Mr. N. Ray of this community and Mr. L. H. Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Odis Price of this community. They were quietly married, Saturday P. M. at the home of the Rev. Marion Mims of Mt. Carmel. With only a few friends witnessing the ceremony. Their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy-prosperous life together. They will live in this community this year.

They spent Saturday night with the groom's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Porter of this community.

Mrs. Grady Scott spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Nealie Pate

Mr. and Mrs. Eve Dawson and children and Miss Leona Dawson were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs Lee Hayes.

Miss Pearl Gibson took dinner with Mrs. Odis Price and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Price and family.

Mrs. Leonard Porter and children were spend the day guests of her mother, Mrs. Odis Price Sunday.

Mt. Nebo News

Preaching services were held at Mt. Nebo both Sunday morning and Sunday night, despite the fact that bad weather prohibited many from attending. We invite you to attend every third Sunday for these services.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Mims ate dinner Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Henley.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Henley, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Mims, and Hoyt Henley were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Foshee.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Keen and Louise were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. McKee.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Headley and Alee Culp visited Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Henley, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Culp and family of Bessemer were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John M.Culp.

Several in the community attended preaching services at the Isabella Methodist Church Sunday afternoon.

Miss Naomi Culp from Mt. Nebo community has joined the WAVES Miss Culp, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Culp, graduated from Isabella High School last year, and at the time of her enlistment in the WAVES, was a freshman at Athens College. So far as we know, Naomi is the first Chilton County girl to become a member of this branch of the service. We are proud of the fact that shee is trying to do her part in the battle, and we hope that she will succeed in this undertaking.

Burnice Culp and Marion Headley of this community are leaving for the Army this week.

FARMERS WHO NEED FENCING MAY NOW OBTAIN IT

Farmers who need wire fencing, barbed wire of poultry netting for farm purposes may now obtain it through rationing, the Office of War Information stated here this week.

Ration certificates for fencing of the types now on the market are obtainable through farm implement rationing committees of the United States Department of Agriculture War Boards in the various counties. County agents can fully instruct farmers on how to apply for fencing under the rationing program.

Fencing for poultry raising is also available to city and town dwellers through the rationing committees, but cannot be purchased for any other off the farm purposes without a priority from the War Production Board. Requests for such priorities must be made to the WPB office in Birmingham.

Much of the new war-model fencing and wire is now finding its way into the hands of distributors, the OWI stated. Fencing, the agency added, is subject to price control, and generally should be no higher than prices in effect last March.

In Opelika, city officers, employees and their wives recently enjoyed a big barbecue dinner and social "get-together."

SARDIS

Our Sunday School met Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, with a large crowd present. Still there are others who could come. So we invite all to come to Sunday School next Sunday morning at 10:30.

Our B.Y.P.U. met Sunday night with a small crowd due to bad weather conditions we didn't have a large crowd, but we had a very interesting program, rendered by group one. Then the program was given out by group Captain No. II, Mr. Bill Donovan.

All come back to B.Y.P.U. next Sunday night and make our B.Y.P.U. one of the best.

W.M.U. MEETING

The ladies met Sunday morning with the president, Mrs. Ella Ratliff for a W.M.U. meeting. Parts were given out for the next meeting. Then they adjourned until next meeting.

The people of Sardis Community extend their heart felt sympathy to Mrs. J. P. Adams and family of the death of Mr. J. P. Adams, who died recently of this community.

Miss Sara Traywick of Birmingham was home with her parents all last week because of sickness, but she returned Sunday afternoon.

Miss Billie Ruth Deason was the Sunday dinner guest of Mattie B. White.

Mr. Johnnie Smith was the guest of Miss Ruth Carter, Sunday afternoon

Mr. N. L. Owens of Mobile is spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. White.

We regret to hear that Mrs. Leois Deason fell and hurt herself. We hope she will soon be OK. We sure did miss her at Sunday School and B.Y.P.U.

We are sorry that Mrs. Jeff Deason is ill and has been for sometime. We are hoping she'll soon be well again.

Shiloh

We had a nice crowd out for Sunday School Sunday but did not get to have B. T. U. Sunday night on account of the weather. Let's all come to service next Sunday and try to have an extra large crowd.

Mrs. Carlos Owens and Mrs. C. P. Haggard of Maplesville, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Owens.

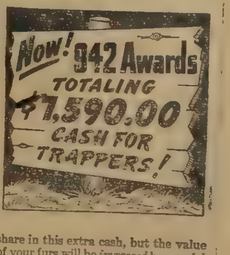
Mr. and Mrs. Leon Minor and son of Cooper visited, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Baker Sunday.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to extend my heart felt gratitude and thanks to Rev. Ocie Payton, Mr. Jack Jones, Mr. Mack Durbin, Mr. John Headley, Mr. Reuben Henley, Mr. Marlow Williams and Mr. Grady Williams for cutting me some wood and to thank Mr. A. D. Headley for donating some wood. May the Lord bless each and everyone is my prayer.

Mrs. Lula Best.

At the Florence curb market, 19 booth operators sold $348.78 in farm products in a week.



CLANTON PELT WINS CASH AWARD

JASPER CLECKLER'S MINK

Earns Award for Careful Handling in Sears 14th National Fur Show

You May Win An Award Too; Read How Easy It Is To Be a Winner

Careful pelt handling and shipping his furs to Sears Raw Fur Marketing Service brought this local trapper an extra $5.00 in cash—one of the Daily Awards in Sears 14th National Fur Show—plus the chance to share in big major awards, besides!

What this trapper did, you too can do! For Sears offer you not just one, but many opportunities to land extra cash for careful handling of your pelts. This season, the awards have been increased to $7,590.00 cash, including the $1,000.00 First Award for the best handled pelt of all.

Don't Miss This Chance!

NINE HUNDRED FORTY-TWO AWARDS IN ALL . . . 942 opportunities for sharing in this big EXTRA CASH FOR FUR SHIPPERS!

Ten Major Cash Awards (from $1,000.00 to $50.00 each). Twelve Sectional Awards for complete shipments (of five or more pelts)—the First Sectional Award being $250.00 cash and the remaining eleven being $50.00 each in cash!

There are 918 Daily Cash Awards of $5.00 each for the best handled pelts received by Sears daily during the period of the Fur Show. 600 added awards—nearly three times as many as before!

Share in These Awards!

Remember! Every award is in addition to the full amount your furs bring through Sears. Not only is it easy to share in this extra cash, but the value of your furs will be improved by careful pelt handling, as better handled pelts command better prices. That is the real purpose of Sears 14th National Fur Show: to encourage careful pelt handling in order to increase the value of America's raw furs and thus boost the income of every trapper!

Go After This Extra Cash!

It's so simple to get in the running. Every pelt you ship to Sears, according to rules of the Fur Show, is automatically considered! You don't even have to sell your furs through Sears. And only the handling of the pelt counts, not kind or value of the fur. So this is really your BIG opportunity to go after some extra money this season!

As soon as your furs are ready, ship them to Sears Raw Fur Marketing Service at the nearest of these points: Chicago, Philadelphia, Memphis, Dallas, Kansas City or Seattle. Thousands of your fellow trappers have earned awards. YOU CAN, too!

Hub—Quite a difference in the weather, eh?

Bub—Yeah, makes me feel like a two-year-old.

Hub—Do you mean a horse or an egg?

DOUBLE TALK

The chief of police of a small town was also an expert veterinary surgeon. One night the telephone bell rang. The chief constable's wife answered.

"Is that Mr. Jenkins?" asked an agitated voice.

"Do you want my husband in his capacity as veterinary or as police chief?"

"Both, madam," came the reply. "We can't get our new bulldog to open his mouth, and there's a burglar in it."

Flair for Salads

Tie a string around your finger and remember that salads belong in wintertime menus, too.

Their cool crispiness will be a tonic to your stove-hot meals, and their vitamin alphabet is one of the longest and most substantial that you can find in any food. Oranges and grapefruit are having a fling in their abundance, and crackly crisp, red, red apples are better now than during warmer months. Use leftover bits of vegetables or just plain greens — lettuce and watercress—and your table will take on a new charm.

A bit of cheese here and there will bring a longed-for sharpness in salads. Here's one that makes use of winter vegetables, and is as pretty as pretty can be:

Bermuda Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 small head cauliflower
1 small head lettuce
½ large peeled Bermuda onion
½ cup stuffed olives, sliced
Watercress, for garnish
2½ ounces Blue cheese, crumbled
French dressing

Separate uncooked cauliflower into flowerets. Break lettuce into pieces. Toss together with cauliflower, lettuce, onion rings, olives, and french dressing into which the blue cheese has been crumbled.

Look to the crisp and juicy apples for real menu inspiration. Apples which provide plenty of vitamin A—to help you resist winter colds and infections—along with sunny carrots make for a nice salad:

Apple-Carrot Salad.

3 large, red apples, coarsely diced
2 cups shredded raw carrots
1 small onion, minced
⅓ cup cream, sweet or soured
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste

Dice apples without peeling and combine with grated carrot and onion. Add cream blended with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Serve in crisp lettuce cups.

A salad that can make you the hit of the party is this grapefruit ring if you fill the center with a waldorf salad made of apples as crisp as the frosty night:

Grapefruit Salad Ring.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2½ tablespoons gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup water
1½ cups sugar
½ cup orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt

Soften gelatin in cold water. Boil water (1 cup with 1½ cups sugar for 3 minutes). Pour over softened gelatin, stir well and cool. Add fruit juices and pour into ring mold. Let cool until firm. Unmold, serve on lettuce with center filled with Waldorf salad:

Waldorf Salad.

2½ cups diced, unpeeled red apples
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup broken nutmeats
¼ cup salad dressing

Combine all ingredients together and fill ring mold or if served separately, fill lettuce cups. If apples are peeled in advance, squeeze juice of one-half lemon to prevent their turning dark.

A salad for every purpose. Here's one for a lovely winter luncheon or bridge refreshments:

Peach Cup Salad.
(Serves 6)

12 halves canned peaches
¼ cup apple butter
3 ounces cream cheese
½ cup celery
¼ cup chopped nutmeats
¼ cup seeded raisins, if desired

Arrange nests of lettuce on platter. Place two peach halves in nest after they have been filled with mixture of apple butter blended with cheese, celery, nuts and raisins. Serve with honey flavored mayonnaise.

Since it's the muffin season, this is a good place to include a muffin—they go so well with salads:

Corn Sticks or Muffins
(Makes 12 medium)

¾ cup yellow corn meal
1 cup sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons shortening, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Combine well-beaten egg and milk and add to dry ingredients. Stir in shortening. Bake in greased muffin tins or in iron corn-stick pans (which have been heated before being greased) in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Ruby red cranberry sauce goes into this delightful bavarian cream dessert that's made with corn syrup if you're short on sugar:

Cranberry Bavarian Cream
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 1-pound can jellied cranberry sauce
¼ cup sugar, or ⅓ cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Mash cranberry sauce and combine with sugar (or corn syrup) and lemon juice. Add gelatin and stir well. Whip egg whites and salt and fold into cranberry mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into large or individual molds which have been rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm, unmold and serve.

Have you a particular household or cooking problem on which you would like expert advice? Write to Miss Lynn Chambers at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois, explaining your problem fully to her. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Your Diet I.Q.: If you're deficient in some vital vitamins and minerals you may have certain physical indications of this lack. Check the following indications:

Frequent ear and sinus troubles, nose, throat and sinus infections? Perhaps you're missing vitamin A—found in meat, eggs, milk, green vegetables, yellow-colored fruits and vegetables.

Is the appetite poor and are you nervous and tired? You may be skipping over lightly vitamin B1—found in whole grain cereals, meats and fish, liver and kidneys.

Can't recover quickly from a cold, from that run-down feeling, or having bleeding gums and a sallow, muddy complexion? Better get more vitamin C—from oranges, grapefruit, green leaves, cabbage, tomatoes and berries.

Anemia? Feel tired and listless? You may need iron—molasses, liver, beans, peas, whole grain cereals, egg yolks and leafy green vegetables.

Poor teeth, brittle bones, excessive bleeding when accidents occur, or weakened heart and muscles? A deficiency of calcium may be responsible. Eat more eggs, cheese, milk and cream—and vegetables.

Outdoors Their Dining Room in Aleutians

Alaskan scouts dine outdoors in season in the Aleutian Islands. "In season" means when it isn't raining there. For a warm current in the Pacific (we used to call it the Japan current) keeps snow and frost from the bleak islands, but it encourages rain—and how! Here one of the scouts passes a piece of cherry pie to his pal.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Driven under 35 miles an hour, properly inflated and on a car with wheels in alignment war tires of reclaimed rubber should return up to 10,000 or more miles of service. Care should be the watchword of the "war tire"

Rubber is considered one of the three most important strategic materials in war by officers in the Army's ordnance department.

Progress in reverse is the reopening of a street car line in Brooklyn, N. Y., that had been converted to motor buses several years ago. A war measure that will save 1,300,000 bus miles a year—and of course a relative amount of rubber.

Caster, camber, toe-in and king-pin inclination are factors in wheel alignment tire users are going to hear about now that periodic tire inspections are mandatory. They mean much to tire conservation.

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HIGH

By Jesse Culp

Oh, twas a sight last week to see all the head-twisting going on around here. And to be more authentical with the report, I might say that part of the head-twisting was due to students looking around at the teacher to see if it would be safe to send a nice juicy spitball merrily on its way to torture the nerves of some unwary victim.

The Parent Teachers Association met Monday night with Prof. Delos Culp, County Supt. of Education as the guest speaker. Although quite a bit of interest is being shown in this work, we need more active participation in these activities.

At the beginning of the school year, the Association set up a main goal which was to furnish the school stage with furniture. This is a very fine goal, and it is reported that much progress is being made along this line.

We regret to announce that Miss Henders, our Home Economics teacher has resigned to accept a position as assistant dietetion in some hospital. Miss Henders came here at the beginning of the year, and has made many friends. We hope that her new work will be pleasant for her.

A large number of students assembled in the auditorium Thursday to hear President Roosevelt speak to the 78th Congress, via a radio which was hooked up in the auditorium . . . Jemison nipped our wings Friday afternoon by a score of 19 to 20. Here's the way we felt, "Hey there, you can't do that to us!" But they did . . . We heard more sighs of relief Thursday and Friday than we have heard in quite a spell. Reason: The students were finishing mid-term tests. . . . Chapel program and society meetings were not held last week, due to tests . . . A bunch of the girls played basketball down in the gym Friday afternoon at Physical Education period, while a masculine audience cheered them on, didn't we? . . . This week, we tackle that old rival, C.C.H.S. Our only comments there will be, may the best team win.

Isabella basketball fans saw some good playing Friday when Clanton came out for a return game. The Isabella boys were intent on checking the pace of those twice state champs, and played with all the skill that they could muster. The scores were right together practically all the way until the third period with Clanton being usually from 1 to 5 points ahead. But lucky for their reputation, the Clanton cagers had two teams which they substituted frequently, thereby keeping their boys rested. So with this odd against them, the Isabella boys began to tire in the third period, thereby giving Clanton a chance to pile up a more comfortable margin. But I am rightfully inclined to believe that our defeat was by the weight of sheer number, rather than by the lack of skill and ability.

Anyway, I take off my hat to an Isabella team who made a very marvelous comeback against overwhelming odds. And we might add that it was a privilege to have Coach Porch and his Clanton team come out and play on our court. We hope that we can see more of them soon. (Oh yes, the score was 27 to 18 in favor of the Tigers).

After the main game, the Isabella B team played the Collins Chapel group, who promptly and neatly handed them a licking. Of course, this game was a little different to the one before it, but we enjoyed it just the same. And we'll have to hand it to Colins Chapel for having an able and fighting little team.

The Parent-Teachers Association met on Monday night of last week with Mr. Delos Culp as the guest speaker. Mr. Culp, it is said made an interesting talk and an encouraging one to the group, and apparently all of them enjoyed it a lot. Again we urge all of you parents that possibly can to attend these meetings for they are essential in the relationship between the faculty, the parents, and th school.

The P.-T. A. is sponsoring a hill billy program at the school next Friday night. You have a special invitation to attend. Admission will be ten cents.

Naomi Culp, a graduate of last year, has joined the WAVES, it was announced last week . . . No classes were held after lunch Friday due to the basketball games . . . The Junior one class had charge of chapel program last week, and gave an interesting amateur program. . . At the game last Friday, some of the students were rude enough to boo the visiting team, especially on free shots. I'm sure those people didn't think of how unsportsman-like that was, but don't let that happen again. I think that is a trait very much desired in any person, being courteous at all times especially to visitors.

MRS. PAULINE FRAULINE MASSEY ROBINSON

Mrs. Pauline Frauline Massey Robinson, age 39, wife of J. Otis Robinson of Clanton, died at the home in Reynolds Addition Wednesday, January 13, at 11:20 a. m. Services were held at Clanton Baptist Church Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Roswell E. Owens, pastor of the church. Martin and Sons were in charge. Pallbearers were: Houston Nivens, G. C. Armstrong, A. L. Robinson, Louie Smith, Fred Buckalew and Walter Robinson. Honorary pallbearers were: H. E. Harris, J. D. Rockett, J. R. Mullins, A. L. Farley, Reedie Taylor, Luther Culpepper, Dr. J. E. Gowan, Frank Callen, M. H. Lane and Luther Bean.

Besides the husband, surviving are the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs B. F. Massey of Mt. Pleasant Community. Step son, Reubin Otis Robinson of Birmingham, three brothers A. J. Massey, Wendell and Wilton Massey, all of Birmingham; three sisters: Mrs. Marvis Kelly, Mrs. J. A. Scroggins anl Mrs. L. J. Patterson, all of Clanton.

Mrs. Robinson was born and reared in the Mt. Pleasant Community, three miles west of Clanton; was married July 1, 1923. Since she was 13 years old she had been identified with the Baptist denomination, and during her mature years had been a consistent worker among the young people of her church. She had lived in this vicinity all her life, except the fourteen years which she and her husband lived in Birmingham. They moved back to Clanton seven years ago.

MORA LECHOES

One day I was startled by the question of a prominent churchman who asked of me, "Do you believe in eternal punishment?" While I waited to think out a reply he shot me with the second question, 'Do you think that God is so unmerciful as to put a soul in darkness and suffering forever?" By that time I had framed my reply and answering to both questions I said "I can not alter the stern fact that the man who misses heaven, must suffer the penalties of a lost soul. My Bible teaches that. But my brother, the fact of punishment in the Word of God can not be regarded as a threat, but as a merciful declaration. If there be reefs and rocks in the ocean, it is not creulty to chart that sea and warn against the danger to ship travel. In fact that is emminent mercy. It is not God's way and will that we plunge ourselves into perdition. It is God's will that we obey Him and thus shun that place where the worm dieth not anl the fire is not quenched. God has never, and He never will, send a soul to hell. The soul goes there in spite of God. God's mercy is revealed in that He warns us against the horrors of hell." A good answer.

After he had been a traitor to his country Benedict Arnold ventured to ask of a loyal captain in the American army, "What do you suppose would be done to me if I were brought to justice in your country?" The captain replied, "Sir, it is my opinion that if you were a captve n our country, first of all the courts would order the amputation of that lame leg of yours that was wounded in defense of the flag at Quebec, and then bury it with the honors of war. After that the remainder of your body would be tried and hung high on a gibbet as a traitor. When a man becomes a traitor to his family, a traitor to his country and a traitor to his God, then he merits a traitors punishment.

On the bloody battlefield a Scotchman lay wounded and bleeding to death. Near him was a wounded German soldier in a like condition. The Highlander from Scotland crawled over to his enemy and asked if he might bund up wound and stop the blood. This was done and then the German soldier did the same act of kindness for the Scotchman. Side by side they waitel and suffered together. Along came the men out to clear the battlefield of the wounded, and as they were being parted the Highlander handed his cap to the German as a tokn and the German passed his helmet over to the scotchman. At the English hospital the soldier was seen to stroke the German helmet with his hand, and a nurse seeing this askel, "Did you kill your man?" "No, I did not kill my man" replied the soldier, "He saved my life and I saved his life," and then he related his story. Love your enemies and do good to all men, commands the Master.

During the Civil War a young man was called out of New York to serve in the Federal army. He left behind him a beautiful girl who loved him devotedly, and she vowed that she would wait for his return. Her soldier lover passed through many battles without a scratch, but at the battle of the Wilderness near the close of the war, a cannon ball removed both ams of the young man. Weeks passed and no letter. One day a letter came to the waiting lover addressed in a strange hand. The young man had gotten a friend to write, and in the letter was relatel the condition of her lover, and he vowed his continued love, but told her that he would never be able to care for her,andthat he released her from her promise. That letter was not answered on paper, but with all possible speed the girl answered it in person. At the hospital she fell upon his bosom and assuered him that her two arms would be strong enough to take care of both of them, and there love claimed its own. Love never faileth. In this world we are not able to take care of ourselves, but Christ loves us and He will take care of us. He supplies what we lack.

POPLAR SPRINGS NEWS

Sunday School was well attended Sunday. The Rev. Eugene Dennis of Mt. Creek will preach at this place the 5th Sunday in January. He is a young preacher, so let's encourage him with our attendance.

Mr. Smolen Thornton has returned home from Central, Ala. Hospital after undergoing an appendicitis operation. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Next Sunday is our regular preaching day we give everybody an invitation to attend.

SPRAY PEACH TREES NOW IS THE TIME TO

By P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Prospects are that peaches will bring a good price again in 43. If we are to get the most from our crop, it is now time to begin arranging for the crop. We are offering a few timely suggestions below:

WINTER SPRAYS: It is now time to apply the winter sprays for the peach scale and the peach leaf curl. Oil emulsion should be applied for the scale only. There was a large amount of peach curl in the orchards in Chilton County last year. Commercial lime-sulphur will control the scale and the peach leaf curl. These sprays should be applied while the trees are stil ldormant. Follow the manufacturers recommendations as to strength spray to use.

PRUNING: Trees should be pruned before the winter spray is applied. This will reduce the amount of spray material needed.

Pruning young trees is to develop strong scaffold or main lateral branches and to thin the fruiting wood. Pruning trees at the end of the second and third growing season is very important. The main lateral branches should be cut back to not over waist high at the end of the second growing season and to not over shoulder high at the end of the third growing season. Cutting heavy these two years will greatly strengthen the tree and will lower the fruit when the trees are older.

In pruning any aged tree, take the rapid growing branches out of the center of the tree. These branches are yellow or brownish in color. Leave a plentiful supply of the blooming twigs. These twigs will be small and reddish in color.

Pruning older trees wll consist mainly of lightly cutting back the terminal branches, thinning the fruiting branches and keeping frut bearng wood distributed over the entire framework of the tree from the ends of the limbs to down along the main branches.

FERTILIZING: Trees should receive an annual application of a complete fertilizer just as the buds begin to swell and just before the tree blooms. This amount should be about one and one-half pounds for each year of the trees age until they reach full production. Trees in full production should receive 800 to 1000 pounds of a complete fertilizer per acre. The best mixture this year will be 4-10-7. Some growers have found that adding additional potash to the above mixture improves the color of their fruit.

If trees are not growing properly, a light application of Nitrate of Soda should be made late in June. This will help stimulate fruit bud formation for the next years crop and will stimulate the vegetative growth for this summer.

With the present prospects for a good price fo rpeaches in 1943, it is felt that the peach orchard should be given special attention this year. For further information on the above, contact your County Agent's Office.

In Axis nations, collection of waste household grease for use in making explosives is enforced by Gestapo threats to "take it out of the hides" of non-contributors; in America, the volunteer system of grease salvage—in the American way — gets results.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

'ou know how 'tis, some weeks /s itims just fall in your lap and ie weeks they just can't be found ıll. Well, this one didn't fall in our —thank goodness—but its an item way. It's abaut an egg that Mrs. B. Stroud of Verbena, Route 1, ught in to us Saturday. The egg ıere at the News office in case would like a peek. The yolk is in hell to its self and the white is in ıuch larger shell to itsself. These shells are joined together with a ıll eggshell tube aproximately half ı in diameter and about two inches z. We don't know what the old had in mind when she produced odd egg formation but its a cinch train of thought wasn't running the regular channels.

has. and Minnie Wade are home in. They have been in Los Angeles Hollywood, California. Of course ıy other interesting points were ted during their two weeks so-rn through the west, And sure ugh we were at the show Sunday ht and they'er still speaking to mortals.

omebody really went to town on iecorations with the seed and ns in the windows at Southern d and Plant Company. We under-nd that the artist was Mr. Ransom. er studying the pattern for a few ıutes we begun to wonder if a fel-ever did have the patience to ke a thing like that. Almost make ellow like beans . . . . .Why are many drivers so thoughtless about ıng their car parked parrellel with ir bumper jammed against the car front or behind. Common sense uld teach them that the fellow who ıs the car that is jammed is not ng to be in the best of humor and t he isn't going to take any great ns in taking care of the other fel-s car who has done the jamming, ile he trying to get out. It is a eless habit, indulged in by many. ıen backing up three or four feet ıld help a lot in preserving tires l tempers, brakes and bumbers.

ıd some more about window dec-tions. This is National Newspaper ek. J. T. King at Elmore's is the y one in town, we believe, that is erving the Week with proper win-decorations. He has ump-steen usands of peanuts nicely displayed his 2nd Avenue window. J. T. sel-ı misses a bet when it comes to dow decorating or to joining in progressive movement for his ımunity.

Our sister Nellie Ruth who resides Birmingham among some 185 other lies of the Magic City received her den Wings for service as an air-ıe spotter at the Secret Filter Cen-there, the past week. She, with other housewives, co-eds, secre-es and the like have been on active y as guardians of Birmingham a-nst suprise air raids attack con-ıtly since last April.

What with all the young married ı gong into service now, wonder y some of the ambitious young wiv-do not start a War Widows Club. tainly they have enough in com-ı to make good company for one other and it might help relieve the eliness of said War Widow also. K., O. K. it was just a suggestion.

Not too long ago we run a picture some Yanks in South Africa. The owing week Mr. J. B. Franklin of nison came in to see us an was rly positive it was his boy Asa, had been reported missing and had been last heard from on Ba-n. But Mr. Franklin wouldn't e up. He refused to believe that son was dead. Of course we tried do all we could but pictures from eign Battle Fields that come ough the censor do not carry the nes of the boys pictured. That was May 9th when the War Department notified him that his boy was lost. Last week the same Department notified him that Asa was alive on Bataan, a prisoner of the Japs. But the good news to the sorrowing parents was that their boy was well and getting along fine.

E. G. [illegible]well, from our neighboring village of Pletcher, was in to pay his respects last of the week. Mr. E.G. has a record that would be hard to equal, much less beat. Here's a sample of what a guy would be up against who even tried. He has been with the Railroad for 43 years. He served as postmaster for 27 years. He has operated a mercantile establishment for 37 years. Now according to our figuring that adds up to 107 years and Mr. Caldwell being a little more than half that age, means he has worked 24 months out of every twelve since the day he was born. Can you beat it?

Concert Presented By Happy Hitters

The Happy Hitters Quartet will put on a concert program at the Court House on Friday night February 5th at 8 o'clock. Admission is 15c and 25c.

This program is being sponsored by the Thomas Jr. Hi School P.-T. A. We are sure that the many people of Chilton County who listen to the Happy Hitters Radio Program over W. B. R. C. every Sunday morning will be glad of the opportunity to see and hear them in Clanton.

Everybody is invited.

TIRES

See special article elsewhere in this issue of paper regarding the present tire situation in Chilton County. Applcations exceed the quota by 484 to 1. The local board cannot issue tires unless they have them on the quota for that month. If you are not in direct war work, do all you can to make your tires last as long as possible so you will not have to apply for tires when there are not enough to go around.

BOARD MEMBERS

The new board got underway last week and appreciates the cooperation of the public in not contacting the individual members personally. The members are doing everything possible to give just and fair consideration to applications that come before them.

GASOLINE

Please refer to last week's paper for provisions whereby special gasoline may be issued. There are too many applications coming before the board for extra gasoline. The board does not want to say no to these applications, but it must carry out the law to the best of its ability. If the public knew the laws regulating the sale of gasoline, many of these applications would not be submitted.

TIRE INSPECTION

It is necessary for all passenger cars to have had their compulsory inspection made and submit it with each application for tires the part "B" of their application for "A" ration book. An application will not be received unless this inspection is complete and the above form attached to the application when it is submitted. In the case of trucks, the inspection must be made on the back of the Certificate of War Necessity which must be attached to the application.

BIG JOB CONFRONTS FARMERS DURING 1943

Take a look at some of the 1943 Food For Victory goals.

Nearly 5 billion eggs, enough to make 308,000 stacks of egg cases each as high as the Washington monument.

Nearly 57 billion quarts of milk. With that much milk, every bathtub owner in the United States could take a milk bath 5 times a day for a year and use ten gallons each time.

Thirty and a half million cattle and calves for slaughter, enough to make a double line around the globe at the equator.

Close to four billion pounds of peanuts, enough to fill more than 14,000 tank cars with peanut oil.

Seventeen billion pounds of pork and lard, enough to fill a procession of boxcars reaching from New York to San Francisco, back to New York—and back to San Francisco.

If the United States farm plant operated on the assembly line principle, a Niagara of farm products would come tumbling off the production line all through the year. Every 60 seconds in 1943, the assembly line would produce 360 bushels of soybeans; 7,000 pounds of peanuts; two tons of dry beans; 743 bushels of potatoes; more than ten tons of beef and veal; 13 tons of pork; 108,000 guarts of milk; 9,000 doz eggs; two and a half tons of chicken, and lots more. One minute later, the same fabulous outpouring would be repeated.

Cadet Guy Windall McKee

Completes Course At Pre-Flight School

Naval Aviation Cadet Guy Windall McKee, has recently completed his course at the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School at Athens, Ga. He has been ordered to the Naval Air Station at Robertson, Missouri, for primary training.

McKee, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. McKee, completed CAA Secondary training at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Since entering the Navy Pre-Flight School here three months ago, McKee has had ground school work in military and academic subjects, and has undergone a rigorous physical conditioning program which is designed to make Uncle Sam's Naval aviators the fittest and best trained in the world.

At his new base he will have more ground school instruction and begin to fly. From there he will move on to three months of intermediate and advanced flying, and, if successful, will be graduated from the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Florida, or Corpus Christi, Texas, and win his commission and Navy wings.

After graduaton comes Operational Training, with carrier - based planes or multi-engined bombers, the final lap of a 12-month training period. Completing this, McKee will be a full-fledged fighter Pilot—ready to join the fleet.

Methodist School Of Missions

The People of the United States and our Government are developing an increasing interest in our Neighbors to the South of us, Latin-America. Surely it is important for North America to be aroused to the importance of our dealings and relationships to Latin Americans. What might have befallen us in this war if South America had joined with the forces of Germany and Japan?

The Christian missionaries from the United States have long been at work in Latin America. Methodist churches throughout the United States are at this time studying Latin-America

Beginning next Tuesday night, Feb 2nd. and continuing each Tuesday night in February the Methodist Church in Clanton will study "Latin-America." This study will be under the supervision of the pastor, Rev. O C. Lloyd. All organizations of the church are asked to co-operate. The first meeting will be held next Tuesday night at the church at 7:30 o'clock, featuring Mexico and Puerto Rico. Mr. D. P. Culp, County Supt. of education will give the devotional using as his subject, "Our Neighbors." Rev O. C. Lloyd will make an introductory talk. "Methodism in Mexico." will be given by Mrs. Geo. Kilgore and Mrs. Horton Walker who has lived in Puerto Rico will speak on "Puerto Rico."

Mrs. Percy Pitts and Mrs. Raymond Mims will prsent during the program, South American music.

A social period will be enjoyed at the close, at which time Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Society of Christian Service will serve light refreshments Everyone is invited.

PRIVATE HOWARD REPORTED BETTER

Pvt. Andrew Lawrence Howord, 21 one of 7 Camp Bowie soldiers reported last week to have been burned when cleaning fluid used for cleaning machine guns caught fire, is in an improved condition already and should be released from the hospital in a short time, according to word received from the Station Hospital.

The burns on Pvt. Howard's hands and face will heal shortly, the report said.

The fire took place in a recreation hall while the men were attending a lection.

None of the men are in critical condition. Damage to the building was slight. Pvt. Howard is the son of Mrs Vallie Howard, Route 2, Verbena Alabama.

DEPARTMENT RECOMMENDS ONE-PRICE PROGRAM FOR PEANUTS IN 1943

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has recommended a one-price program for peanuts in 1943 and this has been approved by James F. Byrnes, Director of Economic Stabilization, P. H. Smith, County Agent, said he had been informed this week.

I. W. Duggan, Director of the southern division, AAA, in recently discussing the program, said it would require some legislative action by Congress and that he believed Congress would give approval to the one-price program.

Under the program, prices would be supported at 85 per cent of the parity price for peanuts. With the present parity price of $148.80 per ton and an average quality crop, the support prices for Southeastern Spanish peanuts would average in the neighborhood of $130 per ton, with normal relationships for other types of peanuts, including runners. The proposed program would be substituted for the two-price system in effect in 1942, and would be more comparable to the price supports afforded by the cotton program.

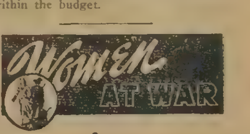
Mr. Duggan said he was giving farmers information on the proposed one-price program before the enabling legislation has actually passed Congress so that farmers may make their plans for meeting their full peanut goals in 1943, with its full assurance that they will have price protection and are not being asked to produce peanuts at a loss.

TOO MANY APPLICATIONS FOR AUTOMOBILE TIRES SAYS RATIONING BOARD

The newspapers and radio have advertised the fact extensively that everyone is eligible for tires. This is correct insofar as eligibility is concerned, but there are many hundreds of people in Chilton County eligible for tires, but when there are only a few tires available it is easily seen why every one who wants tires cannot get them. The number of applications for automobile tires far exceeds the supply. The supply is determined by the quota, and the quota for each county is fixed by the central board in Washington, D. C. When your local board has 300 applications for tires and thirty tires on hand for the month, naturally the board is going to approve those applications that seem to be most essential to the war effort. At the close of business Saturday January 23rd, Chilton County Rationing Board had applications for 483 tires and not one tire on the quota for this month with which to fill these applications for the remainder of this month.

This is written for the purpose of making the public acquainted with the facts as to why you cannot always get tires, even though you are fully eligible. You are eligible for coffee, and for sugar, but if there is no coffee or sugar available, then you simply cannot get it. Please do not feel hard toward your local rationing board when you do not get an automobile tire. The board knows you are eligible for tires, but when there are not enough tires to go around, naturally some one is going to have to go without.

Last fiscal year receipts for the town of Haleyville (Winston County) were $43,053.91, including the opening balance. Expenditures $31,233.76—well within the budget.



Bessie

"All right, Bessie," said the boss of the little factory which was making jackets for soldiers. "Did you want to see me about something?"

The thin middle-aged woman stood up from the chair in the outer office and looked earnestly at the boss with her huge, grave gray eyes.

"It's about this ten percent pledge," she began.

"Oh, that's all right, Bessie," the boss said. "I'd been meaning to speak to you about that. We don't expect you to pledge ten percent of your pay for War Bonds like the others are doing. We know you have a hard time making ends meet since Jake died. Eleven kids, isn't it? That's quite a lot of mouths to feed. Let's see, you make $25.50 a week including overtime, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, but . . ."

The boss smiled.

"Don't give it another thought, Bessie. You've got your hands full now. Uncle Sam knows you haven't got a penny to spare. Don't let it worry you. We understand."

The boss turned to go back into his private office.

"But what I wanted to say was . . ." Bessie raised her voice and the boss looked around. "I wanted to say, would a dollar a week be too little? You see, after we get the living expenses paid, there's just about a dollar a week left. Would they be willing to accept a dollar a week?"

"They'd be more than willing," the boss said quietly. "They'd be proud."

Bessie looked relieved.

"All we have to do is scrimp a little," she said. "I'd feel just terrible if we couldn't give something."

Back in the boss' office a representative of the Treasury Department was waiting. The boss shut the door and sat down.

"I've just seen the greatest single sacrifice I know of," the boss said. "Listen, if you want to hear what American women are made of . . ."

Victorious Russian Drive Sweeps On As German Army Faces New Threats; Political Situation in North Africa Inflamed by Peyrouton Appointment

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MALTA.—After beating off Axis attacks, a convoy laden with the necessary sinews of war drops anchor in harbor at Malta. The Axis does everything possible to halt the stream of supplies pouring into this vitally important British island base, but the convoys are getting through. This photograph was made from on board an accompanying British six-inch gun cruiser which helped escort the ships through the Mediterranean.

INSPIRATION:

For the Russians

There were reports of later Russian successes following the breaking of the siege of Leningrad but that story carried more drama for the Russian people themselves than the reports of all the rest. For Leningrad is Russia's second city and it had been almost a year and a half since there had been any land communication between it and the rest of the country.

As the Red army battled to widen the five-mile corridor through which the siege was first broken there were dispatches from all along the 1,200-mile front reporting new losses for the Nazis. At all points the German lines were sagging before the newly found power of the Russians. Inspired by the news from Leningrad, named for their revolutionary leader and considered the home of the revolution itself, Red soldiers received a real boost in morale which aided in maintaining a high degree of momentum in their offensives.

Immediate objectives that loomed closer now were the Latvian border, southwest of Velikie Luki, Rostov on the lower Don, complete annihilation of the armies before Stalingrad and added progress in the direction of Kharkov, the Pittsburgh of the Ukraine.

NORTH AFRICA:

DeGaullists Object

New flames were ignited under the bubbling cauldron of political dissatisfaction in North Africa when Marcel Peyrouton, veteran French politician and former Vichy minister of the interior, was named governor general of Algeria.

The appointment rekindled the popular alarm which was felt when Darlan first took office. The Fighting French at once jumped on the appointment, terming Peyrouton a former Fascist sympathizer. Headquarters of the DeGaulle forces recalled that in April, 1941, Peyrouton said that "Only madmen believe in a British victory." The London Daily Herald called it a "political blunder of the first water. Peyrouton is distrusted by Frenchmen of all parties . . ."

Added to this confusion was the fact that the Allies soon must decide on a supreme commander for the showdown with the Axis in North Africa. The decision probably will be hastened by the rapid telescoping of the Tunisian and Libyan fronts.

NEW LEADER:

For Democrats

While congress was huddling over Edward J. Flynn's qualifications to represent the United States and President Roosevelt in the South Pacific diplomatic front, Democratic party chieftains assembled in Chicago to select Postmaster General Frank C. Walker to be his successor as chairman of the Democratic national committee. In his acceptance speech Walker expressed a "distaste for oratory as a substitute for action" and further avowed that he was a "firm advocate of the two-party system."

NEW GUINEA:

Victory in Papua

Climaxing a series of attacking movements by American and Australian infantry units, Allied ground forces captured Sananada Point and Sananada Village on the northeastern coast of New Guinea.

The capture of Sananada Point—between previously captured Gona and Buna—took the last remaining strong Japanese point in that area. The remaining Japs were left in pockets about a mile west of Sananada, faced with nothing more than suicide action.

Aerial action saw Allied bombers sink an 8,000-ton Japanese cargo ship in the Bismarck sea and blast enemy airports and installations over a wide area of the Southwest Pacific.

Jap forces were cut into bits by Australian and American patrols reaching almost every corner of the swampy area. Japan's last remaining strength in Papua had been decimated. Enemy outposts were little more than handfuls of troops, waiting an almost certain end.

LIBYAN DRIVE:

Attack Tempo Increased

As aerial activity flared over a wide area of the Tripolitanian front the British eighth army continued its headlong assault against Field Marshal Rommel's fleeing but still intact forces.

An early British advance carried one of two attacking columns to within less than 50 miles of Tripoli—closer than Rommel came to Alexandria last summer.

Gen. B. L. Montgomery's most advanced column had driven Axis forces from Beni Ulid and was in contact with the enemy near Tarhuna, only 40 miles southeast of Tripoli. The second British column drove along the coastal road, reaching a spot 90 miles east of Tripoli.

Even as the British pushed on, many observers were of the opinion that Rommel had decided or had been ordered, to forget Tripoli and attempt to get into Tunisia to join Col. Gen. Juergen von Arnim in a stand against the Allied assault from both sides.

ARGENTINA:

Stands Alone

After Chile's senate had voted 30 to 10 to break off diplomatic ties with the Axis, Argentina remained the only American country retaining relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Chile's action came after weeks of wrangling over the issue and following the vote, Foreign Minister Joaquin Fernadez left immediately to notify President Juan Antonio Rios of the action. President Rios followed this with a radio broadcast to his people.

Chile's army and navy had earlier taken over control of strategic areas which had been colonized by the Germans. These were mostly in the southern part of the country and included ports, mining centers and other vital areas.

ELIGIBLE: Washington officials revealed that boys who have reached the age of 17 are eligible to enlist in the army enlisted reserve corps and air corps enlisted reserve—providing they have the consent of their parents. Not until they are 18, however, will the 17-year-old enlistees be called to active duty. Until this new ruling boys were not accepted in the army until they were 18.

PROBE: Among other subjects being reviewed by the new congress is the matter of war contracts and the house rules committee has decided to call before it high army and navy officials to explain why some such contracts were authorized. Those in question are contracts, which, it is charged by the house naval and military affairs committee, permitted huge fees and profits.

FARM LABOR:

And the Draft

In an effort designed to keep more workers on the nation's farms the War Manpower commission has put into effect a broad liberalization of agricultural deferment requirements. Draft boards are now to be guided by a "new criteria" including liberalized application of the war unit production standard and the addition to the list of essential crops for which workers may be deferred.

Heretofore farmers have usually been required to be responsible for 16 "farm units." Now as few as eight "units" could result in holding off induction. (A unit, for example, is one dairy cow, or 20 acres of wheat, or 20 feed lot cattle, among other items deemed essential in the war food program.)

BIRTH-TO-GRAVE:

Social Security

President Roosevelt is scheduled to receive from the department of labor a greatly broadened—birth-to-grave—social security plan. This was revealed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins at a New York Town Hall meeting. She said adoption of such a plan would provide larger benefits including greater old age pensions, payments for all employment interruptions and maternity and funeral benefits.

Premiums would increase progressively to an amount equal to 10 per cent of the worker's paycheck. During the first stages of the plan's operation these premiums would be paid jointly by the employer and employee, much like the present social security program. Then as the number of old age benefit recipients increased beyond the amount collected the government would step in to pay a share of the benefits.

POINT RATIONING:

System Explained

When Office of Price Administration officials began explaining the system of point rationing it became immediately evident that points will vie in importance with dollars and cents in the minds of the nation's housewives.

Here is how the system will work: The sale of processed foods in cans and bottles will be stopped in retail stores a week before the rationing begins—some time in February. This will allow grocers to fill their shelves. On registration day, housewives will take the family's No. 1 war ration books to their local boards and apply for book No. 2.

The consumer will have to declare the actual number of cans, bottles and jars of eight ounces or more of the rationed foods on hand. Home canned foods are exempt. Each person will be allowed to have a certain number—probably between 8 and 12—on hand without penalty. For more than that, stamps will be removed.

Each consumer will be allowed 48 points during each rationing period, which will probably be one month.

RATION DATES

Feb. 7—Period 4 fuel-oil coupons, good to March 26, become valid.

Feb. 8—Final date on which No. 28 coffee coupon is valid.

Feb. 20—Expiration date for Period 3 fuel-oil coupons which became valid Dec. 23.

Feb. 28—Final date for first inspection of tires for "B" or "C" passenger car card holders and for commercial vehicles.

March 13—Period 5 fuel-oil coupons, good to Sept. 30, become valid.

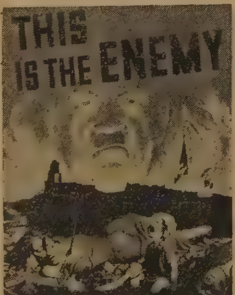
New War Poster



This dramatic poster depicting the enemy's ruthless intention, was entered in the national war poster competition conducted by the New Museum of Modern Art and was chosen as the best. Duane Breyers, artist, who drew the winning entry is currently awaiting induction into the army.

MORE ACTION:

Striking at Japanese shipping in the Pacific and Far East, U. S. submarines have sunk 112 enemy ships since Pearl Harbor. The latest communique issued on this subject by the navy department showed the sinking of one destroyer, one large cargo ship, one medium sized transport, one medium sized cargo ship and one small patrol vessel sunk to reach this 112 total. Twenty-two other ships are listed as probably sunk and 29 others are reported as "damaged."

Opinions Vary on Success Of Mexican Labor Plans

West, Southwest Farmers Reported Objecting to Minimum Wage Clause; Many Prefer Familiar 'Padrone' System.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

What has happened to the scheme for bringing Mexican labor into the United States to help fill the gap left by the drain which industry and the draft have made on the farm?

In trying to get an answer to that question I turned up some rather interesting data which I wish to submit as an answer to that slur on our fair city that you hear frequently these days: "Washington is a mad house." It may at least explain what makes the wild cat wild.

I first went to an official in one of the war agencies with my query about Mexican labor. He is a very energetic, sincere worker, an anti-New Dealer, who is here trying to do his share to win the war. I am not permitted to use his name. He said:

"Somebody in our government with a lot of high ideals went to the Mexican government and made an agreement to send Mexican laborers to the United States. They arranged to have a contract which would deal with each laborer as a free agent and put in all sorts of conditions which the farmer who had to hire him had to agree to, including housing, transportation, and a minimum per diem rate.

"But instead of sending over experienced farm laborers the Mexican government gathered together a lot of ne'er-do-wells and hoboes. It didn't work. In fact, the farmers got less help than usual. The trouble was that before the social-conscious officials took a hand the American farmers had been making contracts with padrones (bosses) who got the money and the workers, established the working conditions and paid the workers as they saw fit. They brought in trained workers and they made them work. But the starry-eyed members of the Mexican and American governments wouldn't hear of making use of the padrone system."

That sounded very bad to me, so I called up the offices of Senator Downey of California and Senator McFarland of Arizona, who are members of a special committee holding hearings in California and New Mexico on this question of imported farm labor.

Success Reported

Senator Downey was still in California but his office was enthusiastic. I was told about how successful the use of this imported Mexican labor had been under the government's plan, in the beet industry, how it worked in the great guayle rubber fields of which 500,000 acres have been planted as part of our home-grown rubber program. How the senator was arranging with the state department for the admission of more foreign labor.

Then I talked with Senator McFarland. He said he would go along with Senator Downey in some of the things but not all. He said the farmers' complaint in Arizona was that they got neither the quantity nor the quality of workers they wanted. Cotton and dairy workers are their chief needs. He said that some of the farmers wouldn't sign a contract which the American government required. All protested against it. The objection was to the clause which established a minimum daily wage. The farmers said that the worker came out to the field in the morning, picked until he wanted to quit and then weighed in. But in order to be sure he had worked his minimum hours it was necessary to have a timekeeper and a bookkeeper to check on his time and the whole process was too expensive.

Long-Staple Cotton

He said, on the whole, that the Arizona farmer didn't get as many workers as needed and didn't get as good ones as he had expected.

On the department of agriculture's program for the next year there is a quota of 160,000 acres of long-staple cotton. One hundred thousand acres are allotted to Arizona. Normally, we import most of our long-staple cotton from abroad.

Senator McFarland said that unless some solution of the farm labor problem was reached, unless the present contract was modified and the Arizona farmers were assured more and better hands at a lower cost, they wouldn't be able to invest their money in planting the long-staple cotton the government wants.

Neither Senator Downey's office nor Senator McFarland's had any comments on the padrone system.

Then I talked with a department of agriculture official. He was of the opinion that the contracts had worked out fairly well, and he pointed out that there was an "ideological" as well as a practical objection on the part of the farmers to the contract—the objection to establishing a minimum wage for farm labor.

Here are three quite different viewpoints. They represent a tiny fraction of the tangle which Washington has to untangle, has to reconcile.

If Washington is a madhouse, who made it mad?

MacArthur Lauded For Leadership

When the chapter of war history dealing with the Battle of New Guinea is written, it will be one of the most important in the whole book. That is what military men here tell me.

They began telling me that bit by bit just before the second front in Africa opened. Then the African story wiped everything else off the first pages. Recently they have been talking about New Guinea again. They keep saying to me a little reproachfully, "the American people don't realize what MacArthur has achieved down in that jungle country."

These aren't the "MacArthur men"—there are such in the army, a little group of hero worshipers who perhaps worship a bit more fervently than logically. But the men who have watched the New Guinea campaign from Moresby straight up over the Owen Stanley range and down the other side and up to the eastern coast of the island tell me that MacArthur and the leaders he has about him have done a great and a significant job.

It is great because he has accomplished what it was freely predicted the Japs could not do (and didn't). It is significant because it has proved that Australians and Americans, given the training, can beat the Jap at his own game. They can (and have) beaten him with less training, without the fatalistic quality of the Jap, whose religion is to die rather than surrender even when dying isn't a military necessity.

There are two reasons, which military men put forward why the battle of New Guinea has not been painted in its true colors—represented in its true importance. One is the fact that MacArthur leans backward in his communiques. Another is a peculiar copy-desk prejudice of American newspapers, which causes them to play down reports from the distance and play up the reports from the war department in Washington.

There are two reasons why MacArthur's reports are given out from his headquarters in Australia instead of by the war department in Washington. One is that the Australians (and perhaps MacArthur) want it that way, and another is because American newspapers, who pay a lot of money to keep correspondents in that area, don't like to have their men scooped by Washington.

Why He Is Winning

MacArthur may have another reason for not ballyhooing his achievements. He was beaten in Bataan. He may feel that until he has a complete victory to his credit, he doesn't want to sing too loudly.

But MacArthur has won so far in New Guinea because the men under his command were able to do what they never had a chance to do on Bataan because of lack of numbers, supplies and food.

On New Guinea they were able to do better than the Japs could, the very things which the Japs could do best. And they did it in the kind of jungle country in which that "best" was even better. They were able to adapt themselves to the environment which required a kind of fighting and a kind of endurance for which the Japanese had spent years in preparing. The kind of fighting that resulted in the fall of Singapore and the kind which the conventional British soldiers—even the [illegible] Eastern experts—said was impossible.

Officers of ships sailing the inland waters of the United States are licensed to sail their ships on a river where no ships sail—the Red River of the North.

The ships being built in American shipyards today have more speed, greater fuel economy than the ships built in the First World war. The speed increase means that three of these will "outrun" four old ones.

Before Senate Agricultural Committee

Top ranking officials of three government agencies are shown as they appeared before the senate agricultural committee to answer charges that the army's system of draft deferment is interfering with farm production. They are, left to right, Paul V. McNutt, director of war manpower; Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, draft director, and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

U. S.-China Pact Signed in Washington

A treaty has been signed between the United States and China for the relinquishment of extraterritorial rights in China, and for the regulation of related matters. The treaty was signed in Secretary of State Cordell Hull's office. The Chinese ambassador, Dr. Wei Taoming, is using a brush pen. This is the first time that the language of the Chinese has been used in signing a treaty. Secretary Hull is shown at the right.

JESUS THE BREAD OF LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 6:8-14, 30-35
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life.—John 6:35

Spiritual truth becomes understandable to us as it is put in the language of our daily life. Jesus was the Master Teacher of all times, and made use of graphic figures to present the message of salvation.

He spoke of the wind, of water, and in this lesson of bread. Even a child knows about such things and understands the good news. Bread is still the staff of life. It speaks of life and health, of satisfaction and strength.

Beginning with the five small barley cakes (and two fishes) which a provident little boy had taken with him into the wilderness, Jesus preaches by miracle and by precept of eternal things. One is glad that a bright lad was more thoughtful than all the adults that day, for he provided the occasion for the miracle and the message.

I. Daily Bread (vv. 8-13).

The great multitude had followed Jesus to the other side of Galilee where He had gone to rest. They sought Him out and He had compassion on them—these sheep without a shepherd (Matt. 9:36). That interest was first spiritual, for "he began to teach them many things," but it was also practical in the realm of daily life, for He saw that they were physically hungry.

His appeal to Philip revealed the lack of faith which at times afflicted the disciples. They knew they had the Son of God in their midst, and yet they were bound by the matter of dollars and cents, of portions and —well, they just wished Jesus would send these people away. That would solve the problem. Oh, yes, "there is a lad here," but what he has amounts to nothing.

All this was perfectly natural. They talked just like most of us do when we are up against a similar problem. But the point is that they (and we too!) ought to realize that "little is much when God is in it." If we let Christ have all that we have and are, it will be adequate for every need.

Are you worrying about your lack of money; your inability to do things for Him? Are you limiting God when He would like to take what you have and multiply it by His blessing?

Notice that though there was plenty, there was none to waste. What was over was gathered up. God never encourages waste. Perhaps we in America may learn that lesson the hard way in these days—but having learned it let us not forget it.

II. Heavenly Bread (vv. 14, 30, 31).

The people (probably incited by the religious leaders) after their first surprise at the miracle, sought Him out in the temple and demanded a greater miracle. Jesus never put much dependence on those whose faith rested on miracles, and we do well to be careful of those who must have something spectacular going on all the time if they are to be interested.

They contrasted His miracle of one meal with the repeated miracle of the daily manna—the bread from heaven—under Moses. Jesus makes it clear that He is not in competition with Moses, for the manna came not from Moses but from God. Those who seek signs and wonders had better get their eyes off such things and get them on God who is the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Their plea for heavenly bread gave Jesus the opportunity to tell them about the true bread from heaven.

III. The Bread of Life (vv. 32-35).

Feeding the body is important, but the real need of men is for spiritual food. Daily bread is a food that perisheth (see v. 27), but the "meat that endureth unto eternal life" is received by faith in Christ (v. 29).

Instead of a sign, or the passing blessing of daily sustenance, Jesus presents Himself as the bread of life which will eternally satisfy the deepest hunger and thirst of the human soul.

Those who teach that Christ is but our example, giving Himself as the spiritual bread to those who by development of character are seeking to be like Him, should read verses 47 to 51 of this same chapter. Here He makes clear that by the giving of His flesh in the death of the cross everlasting life comes to the believer.

It is only the man who eats of this bread, who by faith makes himself partaker of the death of our Lord, that can have eternal life.

This must be done in the right way—the way of faith. The people said, "Lord, evermore give us this bread" (v. 34). One wonders whether some of them did not say it scoffingly, and others perhaps still with the thought of daily bread for their bodies. Among them, however, were surely some earnest souls who that day saw the light of eternity through His wonderful words about the bread of life.

WHO'S NEWS This Week

By Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Big shots galore are headquartering in Washington now, but of all the gathering Eric A. Johnson is probably the only one who was actually born there. He is thumping for United States world-leadership when peace is won. He is from the other side of the continent where he heads the biggest electrical manufacturing company in the Northwest. He speaks, however, as president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and with Bryanesque eloquence.

Comes Long Way To Beat Drum for U. S. Leadership

President Johnson quit Washington when he was a nipper, because his family quit it. By the time he was six he was selling papers on Spokane's streets. By the time he had got to high school he was reporting the school news. He yielded then, however, to a crass love of money and through his four years in college he cleaned up as a longshoreman. His notion was to study law and cash in on his oratorical gift, but the first World war shunted him off to the marines.

When the war was over he turned salesman. That led onward and upward to electrical manufacturing. Forty-five now, he is, as they used to say when Cluett and Peabody set the standard of manly beauty, handsome enough for a collar-ad. He is friendly, too. He hasn't yet been listed among the country's 12 best-dressed men, but when he gets into a modestly striped suit he doesn't need to keep to the side streets.

THE pretty matron decided that the photograph suggested Charles Boyer quite a lot. Not Valentino? Well, Yes! Around the mouth there was a definite suggestion of Valentino, his tender, sensitive . . . Whoa-a-a-a!

An Air of Romance About Our Chief of Chemical Warfare

The photograph was an old, old one of Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, chief of chemical warfare service. But even though it wouldn't have been cricket to spread that tender and sensitive salve any thicker the pretty matron was on the beam when she perceived an aura of romance around the general's phiz. The general is a romantic man.

Commissioned as ensign at Annapolis 1909, married 1910, transferred to the army as a second lieutenant the same year, the general was no Ulysses to go rowing off while his Penelope sat alone ashore. Of course the general's wife rates an assist, a couple. She was the apple of the general's eye, but she was also a naval officer's daughter. She knew, as well as the general knew from his one year at sea, what sort of lives navy couples lived. She knows now the sort of life an army couple can live. Very pleasant!

The general hustled along the promotion files past enough more stationary officers to staff a corps and by 1941 he had his two stars. Now he has the tired face of a man who works too hard, but the benevolent face of a man who wishes others as much good in this world as he has had. The only ones who lack his good wishes are the Nazis and the Nips. Alert against the thinnest hint of gas attacks, the general says his service is primed to give back a double dose.

THE surge of women into all sorts of positions of authority in this wartime economy adds pepper to the challenge which Mrs. Alfred J. Mathebat, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, throws out to her sex. She says the women are the only ones who can put an end to hoarding; there will be none if they do not tolerate it.

Legion Aux. Head Challenges Women To Stop Hoarding

Auxiliary presidents used to be just presidents of the Legion's tag-alongs. But nowadays, when any of the tag-alongs may turn up in congress or better, their president isn't to be quieted with a box of candy or a couple of matinee tickets. Mrs. Mathebat ought to have a wide audience. Legion members have been listening to her these years with profit.

Her husband fought with the AEF and the Fourth division and as soon as they had settled down she got the presidency of the Auxiliary unit in Alameda, Calif. By steady steps, she moved up through committee chairmanships, area and state presidencies to a seat in the national executive committee. She became national president this year.

Her eyes are warm and engaging, her chin soft, forehead high and mighty, upper lip straight, school ma'amish! Housewives who overlook her words on hoarding had best 'ware their knuckles.

Moral Echoes

By D. W. Haskew, D. D.

And it came to pass that a despondent man laid himself down to midnight dreams and behold he saw all of his parts as they jerked themselves away from his body, and journeyed into a conference room. There he saw his brain as it presided over the conference. The brain addressed the gathering in this language, "Comrades, our man is despondent and gloomy, and we must investigate the cause and locate the trouble." No sooner had the brain sat down than the eyes arose to say, We are certain that we are not to blame, for we see the glory of the mountains, and the blooming of the flowers, but it matters not what we see, our man is gloomy." Then the ears spoke of how they delighted the man with music and the laugh of rolicking children, and to be sure they were not to blame. The hands spoke of their dilligent toil the feet had much to say about the loads they had caried for hte man, in fact each part of the man's body refused to accept the blame for his gloom. Finally the heart spoke as follows: "Comrades, it may be that I am to blame for the man's despondency. I have not done my best to pump red blood into all parts of him and I am resolved to go back to my old place an do better than I have ever done." Then the eyes, the ears, and all the other parts responded "We too may have been to blame for we have not done our best, and now we are going back with you and we are going to do better than ever before." Then the slumbering man dreamed that he saw all of his parts come running back and snap themselves back into position. The next morning the heart was doing its best and red blood went streaming into every vein and the man arose in great spirit His food never tasted better, smiles were never more cheering and on the way to his office the world was just clapping its hands in gladness. Overnight he had lost his gloomy spirit. Every part of his body was at its best, and the man lost his gloomy outlook on life. Complete cooperation drove the shadows away Oh what a parable fr you and for me

The king had three daughters and one day they came before him and his heart was filled with pride. He asked of them the question, "How much do each of you love me?" Two of them replied, "Daddy, we love you more than all the silver and gold of the world." Then the youngest daughter timidly replied for herself, "Daddy, I love you more than salt." The king was not pleased with her answer, as he thought that salt was not palatable at all. The cook overheard what the youngest daughter had said and saw how disappointed the king was at her answer, on the following day she left the salt out of the king's food. The king could not eat the food and he informed his cook that nothing was good without salt. Then it was the time for the cook to take the part of the discounted daughter and she replied, "Your magesty, that is what your youngest daughter was telling you on yesterday when she said that she loved you better than salt. She loves you so much that nothing is good without you.

Arnot, the great missionary to Africa, was passing through the grass and undergrowth, with a number of black lads, when a huge lion sprang out toward the last lad in the line. Arnot seeing what was about to take place he leaped between the lion and the lad and drew his own body about the black boy to protect him from danger. The natives fled in confusion and the lion seeing so much action became frightened and he also ran away. The story was soon being told to the old chief and he hastened to Arnot to say, "I will go anywhere with a white man who will throw his own body between a lion and a worthless black lad and save his life." The heart of Arnon had been filled with the love of Jesus Christ and he knew no color or class. He was ready to die for any one of God's children.

NO BORROWERS ELIGIBLE FOR $1000 CLUB

Marvin Durbin, RR Supervisor, FSA announced today that Chilton County would not have any Tenant Purchase borrowers who would be eligible for membership in the $1000 club. Members of the $1000 Club are former tenants and share-croppers who have paid $1,000 or more on their tenant purchase farms since June 30, 1942. Those receiving honorable mention are tenant purchase families who have paid less than $1,000 but more than $500 on their farms since June 30, 1942. County FSA Supervisor Durbin pointed out that these payments were far in excess of the amounts due. The amount due for 1942 by those receiving honorable mention is $536.94.

The amount paid by the Honorable Mention Clubs in this county is $1,440.82.

Those certified for membership and honorable mention to the regional office will be checked and the full list published by the Farm Security Administration in the respective States in the region—Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina. Supervisor Durbin pointed out that some of these families in purchasing farms under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act really started from scratch. Since that time, as the records will show, they have accumulated increased purchasing power by the diversified and year around FSA farming program recognized as the spearhead in the attack against the single cash crop system and as a check upon the continued spread of tenancy and share-cropping.

Mr. Durbin declared that the increased purchasing power meant more money in the cash registers of merchants in the community, and had been reflected in the increased bank deposits. Moreover, he said, the benefits were shown in increased state and county and federal tax receipts, which in turn contribute to the operation of the public school, public health, and other public service systems.

"In short", said Durbin, 'these families by and large are now better able to educate their children, to provide an adequate diet for their families, and are enjoying better living standards generally."

Those certified for honorable mention from Chilton County are:

Otho McKinney, Clanton, Ala., R-4
W. H. Tucker, Maplesville, R-1.
Davis Missildine, Clanton, R-3.

HHEALTH COMMENTS

By Dr. G. E. Newton, Co. Health Officer

TRICHINOSIS

Trichinisis is wide spread throughout the world and is more abundant in the United States than the reported cases of human infection lead one to expect. It is caused by eating insufficiently cooked pork infected with the organisms. Ordinarily curing of the pork does not kill them. Meat inspected is of little value unless every part of the carcass is examined. It is capable of living in many animals but most common in pigs and rats. Rats when once infected, continue the infection through cannibalism. The most common way that hogs become infected is through the feeding of garbage.

The diagnosis of thichinosis is many times overlooked as the symptoms so closely resemble a number of diseases. Among the symptoms are nausea, vomiting, diahrrhea, cramps, fever, general muscular pains in shoulders and back of neck and muscles of legs. Since these symptoms are confused with other diseases nobody is in a position to say how many have it at a particular time or how many have had it during their life. The United States Public Health Service declared a short time ago that there was very good reason to believe that at least 17% of all people in the United States have or have had trichinosis.

It should be emphasized that it is not a catching disease but that it can be contracted only by infected pork or pork products. Fortunately it is easy for us to avoid trichinosis. All one has to do is not to eat pork or pork products that have not been thoroughly cooked. You can play safe by cooking pork until it loses its pink color and turns gray.

You may be under the impression that meat products sold to the public have been carefully inspected for trichinosis or at least treated to destroy these parasites, but, if so, you are under a false impression. It is true that the United States Department of Agriculture requires the processing of pork products sold in interstate commerce which are usually eaten in the raw state. However, it is estimated that one-third of all meat consumed in this country does not come under Federal supervision or inspection. That dangerious third includes the pork products which you make from your own hogs, that which your neighbors give you when they kill hogs, all the "home-made" sausage sold in the neighborhood store, and that large quantity of packing house pork and pork products which are supposed to be eaten in a cooked state but are not. It's been estimated that from one to five per cent of all hogs, depending upon the locality and what they have been fed, harbor live trichinae.

It is most important, therefore, that every pork consumer become his own protector by eating no pork or pork products that has not been thoroughly cooked. In view of the fact that medical science has produced no dependable cure for this condition, all of us should develop an awareness of this danger and also a determination to do something about it.

VERBENA YOUTH BADLY BURNED

Pvt. Andrew Howard, 21, son of Mrs. Vallie Howard, of Verbena was seriously burned at Camp Bowie, Tex. where he is stationed, last week. It is reported that some fluid exploded that was being used to clean a machine gun burning three of the soldiers badly enough to require hospitalization.

The Jasper Lions Club recently presented a beautiful U. S. flag to the Walker County High School.

NOW IS TIME TO ATTEND YOUR STRAWBERRIES

The strawberry is one of the surest and best money crops that can be grown in Chilton County. Many farmers are now planning to set new fields of strawberries. Some timely suggestions on strawberry growing are given below:

NEW FIELDS

SOILS: Fairly light, well drained medium fertile soils with good moisture holding capacity are best for strawberries. Some people prefer a southern slope. This type slope will produce ripe berries earlier in the spring than other slopes but the plants bloom more abundantly during mild winters. Plants bloom less during the winter on Northen slopes but they are usually later in the spring.

The soil should be broken thoroughly and laid off in 3 1-2 to 4 1-2 feet rows and allowed to settle thoroughly before the plants are set.

VARIETY: Under growing conditions and with the present markets available to Chilton County growers, the Blakemore is probably the best variety to plant. Get only strong, healthy, "yellows" free Blakemore plants with a strong root-system.

FERTILIZING: About two weeks before setting plants, work 200 to 400 pounds of a 4-10-4 fertilizer into the row where the plants are to be set This will be sufficient to produce enough plants to "mat" the row by early fall.

PLANTING: Plants should be set about 24 to 30 inches apart in the rows in late February or early March. This will require from 4,500 to 7,500 plants per acre. They should be set with roots spread in the soil so that after rain has settled and leveled the soil they will be setting with their crowns just above the level of the surface. Too deep setting will cause the crowns to be covered and killed, while if too shallow, they will suffer from exposure.

CULTIVATION: In order that plants be permitted to develop as they should, the competition of weeds and grass must be kept down. This means hoeing and weed pulling throughout the growing season, as well as cultivating the sides of the row as the runner develop.

FERTILIZING: It is now time to apply the mid-winter application of fertilizer. This should be worked around the plants so that the fertilizer can get down to the roots. This may be done with a rake or by plowing.

THINNING: Strawberries are on individual plants. If these berries are to be very large, they must have room to develop. This means that some thinning should be done. Individual plants should be thinned to 4 to 6 inches apart in the row so that the plants left will have room to develop large berries. Now is a good time to thin out the small, unhealthy plants at the time the fertilizer is being applied.

MULCHING: Sraw should be well worked down around the plants and the middles before growth begins in the spring.

LEAF SPOT: Spraying with Bordeaux mixture or dusting with a copper dust just as the spring growth begins, once when the first berries are about half grown and once in the late growing season should check the leaf spot.

JACK HAYES' LUCK CHANGES AT LONG LAST

(EDITORS NOTE:—Here is a story clipped from the Chicago Daily News issue of January 19, 1943. about our recently appointed Tax Collector, that will be of interest to his many friends in Chilton County.)

BY HAL TOTTEN

Maybe Dame Fortune is about to smile on Jackie Hayes, instead of turning the frigid shoulder as she has so often in the past. And to tell the truth, it's about time.

Just a week ago Jackie—his name now has gone back to the "Minter C." that he was christened, but it's still Jackie to White Sox fans—just a week ago, he took over the job of tax collector of Chilton County, Alabama wherein his home town of Clanton is located.

Of course Hayes would have become tax collector there on Oct. 1, anyway. He was elected to that post for a four year period recently, and that was when it was to start. But T. M. Taylor, the incumbent, was killed in an automobile accident and Gov. Dixon of Alabama appointed Jackie to fill the unexpired term, starting him nine months ahead of schedule.

Was Great Second Baseman

That will be mightygood news to the thousands of fans who remembed Hayes' magic around second base for the Sox during the years 1932 to 39, inclusive. Termed by such highly capable observers as Jimmie Dykes, "Muddy" Ruel, and the late Billy Webb as the greatest pivot man in major league history, the rangy Southernor with the piping voice, the broad grin, and the ready humor rated as one of the finest fielding keystone guardians who ever drew on spikes.

Jackie had begun to make strides as a hitter, too. After a rather slow start with the willow, he had finished with a .312 average in 1936 and an even better .328 in 1938. But Hayes was dogged with a streak of the toughest luck any ball player ever encountered over a period of years. In fact he was signed for the Washington Senators in 1927 when he performed for owner Clark Griffith and Scout Joe Engel while hobbling painfully around with a badly twisted knee.

When Hayes first came to the Sox, it began to look as though his bad luck had left him. He played as a regular in 1932 and '33 and the Pale Hose second basing worries seemed to be taken care of for years to come. But on May 10th, 1934, something happened to his elbow, and he had to undergo an operation for removal of a bone chip. It was July before he got back into the lineup. And then, on July 4, after only four games, and while hitting like a champion, he broke his thumb.

Next It's The Knee

His hand and arm bothered him for the next year, but in 1936 and '37 he seemed to have found the groove. He hit well, and played brilliantly afield. On July 13,1938, he twisted his knee in a game in Philadelphia and was out for weeks. An operation that winter left the knee weak and uncertain and he had played only a few games in 1939, after a late start, when he again went down as his knee failed him.

Another operation followed the next winter, and in the spring of 1940, everything was rosy again. The knee was strong and reliable. Starting sl wly, he took part in 14 games during spring training, making 15 hits in 42 times at bat for an average of .357.

Then disaster overtook him again—the disaster, it turned out, that ended his playing career. He began to suffer eye trouble. At first it was diagnosed as a cinder aggravating the pupil. But X rays showed something different. It was an infection. Fever treatments were tried but before long, a cataract formed over the eye.

Jackie tried to play a few games that year, protected with a fiber skull cap, but was no use. On Dec. 4, 1940 Jackie—at his own request—was granted his unconditional release.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By JESSE CULP

The Isabella Mustangs chalked up another basketball win last Friday afternoon when they held the Maplesville cagers for a 40 to 29 victory.

Maplesville set the pace by sacking the ball in the first few plays. Isabella answered by the same sign, then again and again (etc) with Maplesville getting only one other goal in the first quarter, making the score at the end of that period 11-4 in our favor.

Both teams played hard all the way through, but Isabella was still leading at the half 16-11. Maplesville did well in the third quarter but couldn't seem to hold the Mustangs quite long enough to catch them, because the score then read, Isabella 26; Maplesville 18. As indicated by the score both teams scored quite a bit in the last period, for the final scores for the game were Isabella 40; Maplesville 29.

Isabella—Williams (11) and J. Cummings (8), forwards; R. Cummings (10), center; Kincaid (6) and Conway (4), guards; Ousley (1) and Henderson, subs.

Maplesville—Smith (15) and Golson (2), forwards; Ousley (7), center; Glass and Hicks (5), guards; Mitchell and McKee, subs.

Next Friday afternoon at 1:30, the Mustangs play a return game with Jemison on the local court. A few weeks ago, Jemison edged by us for a one point win. This time we don't intend to let that happen if we can help it. This should be a good game. Don't miss it.

The assistant county agent, Mr. Glasscock and the home agent, Miss Barber came out to Isabella last Wed. to organize a 4-H Club, for everyone who wanted to join, in the 5th to the 8th grades.

We understand that no officers were elected, but the group was organized for other action. I hope that this club will be successful, because the 4-H Cub is a very worthy organization for rural youth.

The bus drivers presented their hill-billy show in the school auditorium last Friday night. The program was sponsored by the Isabella P.-T. A.

A comparatively large crowd was present to watch the group in their selection of sacred songs, hill-billy tunes, comical speeches, and string music. Among the comic songs was their version of the "1943 Little Brown Jug."

The Isabella cagers held the Jemison Independents for a 30 to 18 win in a basketball game played after school Monday of last week .... I guess it's kind of convenient to have some students at Isabella who insist on getting into mischief sometimes because it offers a solution to the problem of keeping the paper picked up on the campus. Floor sweeping is sometimes included in the penalty too, eh boys? .... We now have two students who are studying typing. They are Faye Bonds and Marvorene Henley .... James Owens says he hopes the first grade at Baker school will organize a basketball team, because he wants the Isabella B team to win one game this year.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK FOR FEED IN 1943

The feed outlook for 1943 production of meats, milk, eggs and poultry is indicated as favorable to livestock feeders. Large supplies of feed grains and hay were brought forward into the New Year from the fall of 1942.

Economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture report feed grain supplies for 1943, which were available in the fall, are 12 per cent larger than a year ago, hay suplies are 9 per cent larger and supplies per animal unit on farms are somewhat larger for both grain and hay. The economists also expect prices of feeds in relation to prices of livestock and livestock products will prove favorable to livestock production in the first half of this year.

Johnston—Driver

Mrs. D. Y. Johnston of Clanton, Ala., announces the marriage of her daughter, Janie Beth to Corp. Henry Cleveland Driver of Clanton and Seymour Johnson Field, N. C., on Dec. 16, 1943, at the Clanton Baptist Church.

Poplar Springs Church News

Sunday was our regular preaching day. There was a nice congregation present. Our pastor Rev. J. D. Hughes delivered a wonderful sermon.

Bro. Eugene Dennis of Mountain Creek will preach for us next Sunday, Jan. 31. Bro. Dennis is a young preacher so let's all encourage him with our attendance.

We welcome you to attend Poplar Springs if you attend no other church We invite you to attend often.

LIBERTY HILL

There will be preaching here next Sunday A. M. at 11:00 oclock by the pastor Rev. G. H. Carroll. The B. T. U. will meet at 6:30 o'clock Sunday night. Rev. Charlie Haggard will show religious pictures at 8:00 o'clock Sunday night. The public has a cordial invitation to attend.

Teacher—I see you are still at the bottom of the class, Henry. Can't you get any other place?

Long Tough Trip

Did you hear the one about Pat getting kicked by a mule? He was picked up unconscious and rushed to the hospital. As he was being carried into the building, feeling the swaying motion, Pat started to come to and moaned. "Oh-h-h, and I ain't landed yet."

It's the Same

Sergeant—Private, is that your cigar butt on the floor?

Private—Naw, you can have it. You saw it first

No Indication

An Irishman, driving a donkey-cart in the middle of a narrow road, heard continuous hooting behind him. He looked round and saw a powerful car following in his wake.

He continued on his way, and the car behind continued to hoot. After a mile or so the road widened sufficiently for the big car to draw level.

"Why didn't you make room for me to pass?" asked the infuriated driver.

"How should I know you wanted to pass? You weren't going any faster than I was," was the reply.

You're Still Out

Mrs.—Didn't I hear the clock strike three when you fell in over the door mat last night?

Mr.—Oh, no. You see, it started to strike eleven but I stopped it so you wouldn't be disturbed, dear.

Poor Mirror

Lady—My greatest sin is vanity. Only this morning I looked into the mirror and thought, "How pretty I am."

St. Peter—Pass in peace. To be mistaken is not a sin!

Smart—Sure. A man walking a mile and moving only two feet.

Officer—The detectives got the woman's fingerprints from her husband.

Second Ditto—How could they do that?

Officer—Easy, she'd kept him under her thumb for years.

Applicant—Diamond cutter.

Boss—Jewelry business, eh?

Applicant—No, I cut the grass in a ball park.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS . . . by Lynn Chambers

Wake Up and Shine . . . for a Hearty Breakfast!
(See Recipes Below)

Winter Breakfasts

Though the wind may howl moanfully and the icicles crackle coldly at your window these mornings when you arise to meet the day and all its tasks, a hot, well-balanced breakfast is bound to bring you to the alert in double quick time. Fruit or fruit juice will wake you first, then eggs, hot cereal, rolls or flapjacks will do the rest toward getting you on your way.

Citrus fruit crops are especially good this winter and will be at your breakfast service with all their rich vitamins, minerals and health-giving qualities. Their sparkle and freshness will give you a new start these busy mornings.

Vitamin Cereals.

It's a wonderful idea to follow up the fruit course with one of those quickly prepared hot cereals which are so rich in vitamin B1—that important vitamin you need daily for preventing nervousness, fatigue and restlessness.

There are several ways of doing up the hot cereals. The quick-cooking wheat and oat cereals may be readily prepared along with the rest of breakfast—in just a few minutes' time. If you have a deep-well cooker on an electric range you can place the cereal in glass jars along with dried fruits you are able to obtain, turn on the unit overnight, and have fruit and cereal ready-to-eat.

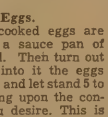
Don't hesitate at cooking the quick-cooking cereals longer—they are improved in flavor and more palatable if you give them a few extra minutes.

Coddled Eggs.

Coddled or soft cooked eggs are made by bringing a sauce pan of water to a good boil. Then turn out the heat, transfer into it the eggs with a spoon. Cover and let stand 5 to 10 minutes depending upon the consistency of egg you desire. This is a good way to fix eggs—you can place them in the water while you're getting the rest of the breakfast.

Change Your Breakfasts.

Fried mush is a wonderful breakfast food; serve it with syrup, butter and honey, and even fried apple rings—for a late Sunday morning feast.



Toasted English muffins teamed with poached eggs—and a piece of broiled ham in-between will work wonders toward getting the family on its way out of bed.

Packaged pancake mixtures will speed up the tempo at breakfast time. Serve them with butter or vitaminized margarine—honey and butter syrup, melted together, or dark corn syrup flavored with a maple extract are all that could be desired, luscious indeed.

No, I haven't forgotten omelets! For a fluffy omelet allow 3 eggs for 2 people. Separate eggs, and beat each separately. Add ½ tablespoon cream to yolks, salt and pepper, then fold in stiffly beaten whites. Heat butter in skillet, pour in eggs, cover and cook over low heat until mixture puffs, about 8 minutes. Uncover and finish cooking in slow oven (325 degrees) about 20 minutes. Fold over and serve on warm platter.

Omelet Variations.

If you have leftover ham, sprinkle a few tablespoons of minced ham over omelet while it is cooking. For a jelly omelet, spread a tablespoon of jelly over surface of omelet before folding it over—after it has finished cooking completely. For special occasions, spread sauteed chicken livers before folding omelet.

Freshly baked rolls with swirls of brown syrup and whole pecans on top are bound to make your breakfast a real pleasure. Make the rolls in the afternoon—reheat for breakfast, for these won't dry out:

Butterscotch Pecan Rolls.
(Makes 3 dozen)

- 1 package yeast, compressed or granular
- ¼ cup warm water
- ¾ cup milk, scalded, cooled to lukewarm
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅓ cup sugar
- ¼ cup melted shortening
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- About 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup butter, softened
- 1 cup brown sugar, packed firmly
- 1 cup pecan meats

Pour ¼ cup lukewarm water over yeast, add 1 tablespoon sugar, stir, let stand about 5 minutes.

Dissolve salt and remaining sugar in milk. When lukewarm add yeast and blend with 2 cups flour. Beat very thoroughly. Next, add eggs and shortening. Mix well and beat three minutes. Add remaining flour enough to make a smooth dough. Knead lightly on board about 5 minutes. Use only enough flour to keep dough from sticking. Dough should be kept as soft as possible. Grease top and let rise until doubled. Fold dough down again and let rise again until doubled.

To shape: roll dough into oblong pieces until ¼ inch thick. Spread with butter, brown sugar and nuts. Roll as for jelly roll. Cut into 1 to 1½ inch slices. Use muffin tins, add ½ spoonful of butter, and a few nutmeats to each pan. Place rolls of dough, cut side down on each pan. Let rise again until double. Bake about 12 to 15 minutes in a hot (400 to 425-degree) oven. Remove from pans immediately.

Quick Coffee Cake.

- ⅓ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1¾ cups flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and beat until light. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and beat for several minutes. Add vanilla and pour into a greased, shallow pan. Spread with topping and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 25 to 30 minutes.

Topping.

- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup brown sugar
- Nutmeats

Beat egg whites stiff. Fold in sugar. Spread on batter and sprinkle with chopped nutmeats.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CBS' Stage Door Canteen will be the vehicle through which Bert Lytell, once a movie idol, will return to films. The movie version, produced for United Artists by Sol Lesser, will bring us a host of celebrities, including Katharine Cornell, who's shunned the films so far, and Lunt and Fontanne, Taliulah Bankhead, and scores of others. Lytell has been so busy with stage and radio engagements of recent years that he's had no time for pictures.

Orson Welles isn't trying to set a new fad with that shock of long hair that he's wearing at "Ceiling Unlimited" rehearsals. He's letting his hair grow at the request of 20th Century-Fox for his role of "Rochester" in their version of "Jane Eyre."

George Montgomery will do one more picture before he goes into the service; it's in "Bomber's Moon," opposite Annabella—the story of an American pilot who's shot down in Germany. Do you wonder that Hollywood's wondering what to use for leading men?

GEORGE MONTGOMERY

Maybe Bob Hope's a prophet; he hopes so. His "The Road to Morocco" was filmed six months before the Allied invasion of that territory, and released right on the dot. Recently he interrupted his tour of the army camps for 48 hours to do a scene for "They Got Me Covered" which depicts a deflated Mussolini escaping from the nation he led into its present predicament—it's being filmed with the blessing of the Office of War Information. Bob's got his fingers crossed, hoping that this scene, too, will come true.

Alan Ladd's date with Uncle Sam upset the apple cart so far as Paramount's "Incendiary Blonde" was concerned. He was to have starred in this screen version of Texas Guinan's life with Betty Hutton, but his prospective induction into the army wrecked that plan. At present the film has been shelved; Miss Hutton gets the feminine lead in "Let's Face It," and Betty Rhodes gets a supporting role.

They could hardly believe it at Metro when they got two new lads at once. Tommy Dix and Gil Stratton were brought frpm the New York stage for "Best Foot Forward"—and at once Stratton was assigned to "Girl Crazy" and Dix will win Lucille Ball in "Best Foot Forward."

If the actors on your favorite radio program sound pretty exhilirated, it's practically certain to be due to just one thing—the return of a former member of the group in uniform. "Pepper Young's Family" was almost disrupted when Larry Woodleaf appeared recently. Larry's a handsome lad who joined up before Pearl Harbor, after doing publicity for the program; he'd spent eight months in the Far East.

Eddie Cantor's explanation for substituting for Phil Baker on "Take It or Leave It"—"Last April, Phil Baker took my place when I was in the hospital. So I took his place when he was in the hospital. Next time we'll both be on the program—the audience will go to the hospital!"

William L. Shirer, the news commentator, is planning a series of talks at service camps throughout the country in the near future. He has already given numerous talks at camps in the eastern area. Ed Murrow, the London newscaster, reports that he's expecting to solve the no-gas problem soon; he has his eye on an elderly horse, but is still dickering over the prioe.

ODDS AND ENDS—Radio's Tim and Irene are among the featured players in Columbia's picture, "Reveille With Beverly" . . . Joe Schilling, Edward G. Robinson's stand-in in "Destroyer," wears a naval lieutenant's uniform—the best his boss can do is a chief boatswain's mate outfit . . . Thomas Mitchell's been added to the cast of Metro's "Bataan Patrol" . . . Nelson Eddy, who hasn't made a picture since "I Married an Angel," will return to the screen in Universal's remake of "The Phantom of the Opera"; Deanna Durbin, originally scheduled for the picture when it was planned for years ago, probably won't appear in it.

Thoughtful of Him

"My dear, a great doctor says women require more sleep than men."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, dear, so—er—perhaps you'd better not wait up for me tonight."

Man, they say, is made of dust. But some women think it is gold dust.

He Got It

He—My train gees in fifteen minutes. Can you not give me one ray of hope before I leave you forever?

She—Er—that clock is half an hour fast.

Time for It

"George looks worried today. What's wrong with him?"

"Oh, he's been contesting his wife's will."

"His wife's will? I didn't know she was dead."

"She isn't."

His Lot

"How many times shall I bow?" said the novice entertainer at the battalion variety show.

"Bow?" said the stage manager. "No bowing for you, you'll have to duck."

Handicapped

A company of recruits, having been issued with new boots, went for a route march to "run them in." At the end of the march, one man was missing.

When eventually rounded up and asked where he had been he replied:

"My boots were tied together, sergeant, so I couldn't get along as fast as the other chaps."

Next, Please

The oldest barber gag in history was found on the walls of an ancient Egyptian tomb. It concerned a barber and a customer. The barber asked the customer: "How do you want your hair cut?" And the reply was: "In silence."

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in Army men's favor since '18 is Camel Cigarettes. (Based on actual sales records from Post Exchanges and Sales Commissaries.) It's the gift they prefer from the home folks. If you have a relative or friend in the service, send him a carton of Camels. Your dealer is featuring Camel cartons to send to service men.—Adv.

Sequoia Trees

Of the Sequoia trees there are two species, the redwood and the Big-Tree (Giant Sequoia). The redwood will reproduce itself from the stump, and has been known to grow to a height of 80 feet and a diameter of 16 inches in 30 years. The wood contains no pitch and much water, and in a green condition will not burn. Thus while surrounding forests may be destroyed by forest fires, the redwoods remain unscathed.

The Giant Sequoia grow to greater height and diameter than the redwood. One tree is 32[illegible] feet tall, and measures 35.7 feet four feet above the ground.

Many of the trees are estimated to be 2,500 years old, trees which were already growing while the Egyptians were building the Pyramids.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first known rubber hose was manufactured in England in 1827.

Collapsible rubber boats equipped with paddles, bullet-hole plugs, sea-anchor, water, etc., are being produced for fighting U. S. airmen. Inflated in 10 seconds, this boat forms part of the pilot's seat and stays with him when he hits the water.

An Omaha, Neb., tire salesman hauled into court before rationing for parking his car near a hydrant first talked himself out of the $2 fine, then sold two new tires to the judge, two to the cop who arrested him and two to the court attendant.

Production of War tires is definitely tied to the production of reclaimed rubber. It is estimated that the country has refining capacity to process 360,000 tons of reclaimed a year.

Rubber authorities estimate that 900 million tires have been scrapped since World War 1.

A PRACTICAL SYSTEM FOR PRODUCING PORK AND BUILDING LAND

By M. R. Glasscock, Ass't. Co. Agent

The hog ceiling price is very good compared to the price of feedstuff and beef. Let us urge you to take advantage of this fact. Act now! Plan your acts!

The Alambama Experiment Station has been able to sell $1500.00 worth of pork from 27 acres and has built land while doing it.

The system sketched and explained below tells the story of how they have been able to do this. Study this system. Can it be made a part of your farming operation?

As shown above Field No. 1 is planted to oats, Field No. 2 to kudzu, Field No. 3 to improved pasture, Fields four and five to peanuts, and Field No. 6 to corn. The twenty-seven acres, well established, will produce sufficent green feed and fattening crops to support four sows and one boar and to finish the pigs produced by all sows.

Good quality sows will produce an average of between six and seven pigs per litter. Breed all sows to farrow two litters per year. This will produce an average of fifty pigs per year.

Considering the labor and expense of both crops, compare this income to that of any other project on your farm. Also consider the fact that hogging off peanuts is one of our fastest methods of improving our land and the oat, kudzu, and permanent pasture fields shown above, properly handled will annually become more productive.

To successfully operate the project outlined above, a very carefully planned planting and breeding plan must be followed. The spring litters of pigs are fattened on peanuts and follow the following grazing programs. They should be farrowed in Field No. 3, in March. When the dry season reduces pasture grass in mid-summer move them to Field No. 2 where they are kept until the Spanish peanuts are ready to be hogged. From the Spanish Peanuts, move them to the Runner peanuts and finish them there Move fattening hogs across peanut fields hurriedly. They should reach market by February.

The fall litters should be farrowed in Field No. 3 in September. They make their living cleaning up the scattered peanuts that the spring pigs have left. When they have finished cleaning the peanut fields they are moved to Field No. 1 to be finished on green oats, and corn from Field No. 6.

For further information on this plan, stop by your County Agent's office.

IN MEMORIAM

In lovng memory of our husband and father, Wesley Williams, who passed away two years ago today.

"He lived, that when the summons came to join The innumerable caravan which moves to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death, he went, not like the quarry-slave at night, scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, approached the grave like the one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

DEMAND FOR POULTRY TO BE LARGE IN 1943

With red meats getting scarcer for the American family table, economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture say supplies of chickens in the coming months will be much larger than in the corresponding period last year. Although supplies are at seasonally low levels, storage stocks of chickens are the largest on record for this time of the year, and the out put of chickens in specialized poultry areas will be much larger this winter than last.

Heavy operations by commercial hatcheries in the last few months point to a new high output of chickens in 1943, in line with the 1943 production goal. The goal for chickens is 4,000,000,000 pounds, dressed weight basis, more than one-fourth higher than 1942 output. The economists further say the supply of poultry meats will be bolstered by all-out production of turkeys. The 1943 goal for turkeys is 560,000,000 pounds, about 15 per cent above 1942 production.

All Winston County Schools are run eight months and one week.

Mrs. M. H. Brown, Tallapoosa County, has five sons in U. S. Service—two in the Navy, two in the Marines and one in the Air Force.

No Penalties On Failure To Plant Crop Allotment

Chilton County farmers were told his week by C. C. Cofer, Chairman, hilton County Committee, that the gricultural Adjustment Agency had one away with deductions for failure o plant 90 per cent of special crop llotments.

"This allows farmers to concentrate pon growing war crops—peanuts and oybeans for oil—and not worry about enalty for failing to plant 90 percent f special allotment crops. This change hould encourage the shifting from otton to peanuts and soybeans for il," he said.

'Prior regulations made it necessary or farmers in 1943 to plant 90 per ent of his special allotment crops cotton, edible peanuts, wheat, tobaco) or be penalized at the rate of 5 imes the commodity payment for ach acre by which 90 per cent of the llotment crops were under planted. Overplanting of allotment crops is till to be penalized ten times the rate f payment.

"The change," said Mr. Cofer, "does ot effect the $15 an acre penalty gainst a farmer who plants less than 0 per cent of his War crop goals. ndividual farm war crop goals will e set by County and Community AAA Committeemen. In setting peaut war goals, edible and oil nuts will e lumped together."

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH LOSES TO LANIER POETS 28-31

The Clanton Cagers were defeated y the Lanier Poets last Friday night y a score of 31-28. It was the second efeat of the season for the locals having been defeated earlier in the eason by Selma. The Friday night game was played at Montgomery. It was an exciting game with plenty of fast breaks and hard fought basketball all through the game.

The Clanton team plays Ramsey High School of Birmingham next Tuesday night. This promises to be one of the best games of the the season. The game will be played at the local gym.

RED CROSS LADIES DOING FINE JOB

The Chilton County Chapter of the American Red Cross work is being carried on by very effecient people. People who are ready and anxious to do everything in their power to help do the work most needed at this time. Those who are in charge of the various departments of work are certainly doing a fine job and those who have been helping have done well An average of ten ladies a day have been working in the Red Cross Room making surgical dressings. They have already folded, wrapped, packed and prepared 34,200 surgical sponges ready to ship. They have the material on hand to make 102,700 more of these surgical dressings which is the allotment to be prepared by Chilton County through January. These ladies have worked faithfully and have accomplished much, but much more is to be done and they need help and lots of it. If you other folks in the county will please notice these figures you can see just how bad they do need help. We can all fold surgical dressings and Mrs. Mary Will Browder asks if you are sixteen yrs. old or over, that you please come by the Red Cross Room, next to Broadhead's Market, and she will be more than glad to explain just what you have to do. Helping in this work at home is dong such a "small bit" considering what a "big bit" our boys are doing away from home.

Mrs. Grady Heflin, who is in charge of the sewing unit reports that they have 708 garments being made and anyone having any of these to please finish them as quickly as possible and bring them to her.

Mrs. N. S. Johnson, who has charge of the knitting unit reports that they have completed their quota of sweaters for the War Relief and shipped them and that they have the wool and material on hand to begin the allotment assigned that is to be made for the United States Armed Forces She asks that anyone who can knit to please get in touch with her at once.

Everyone can help do something in this Red Cross work for there is so much to be done. It cannot be left

Navy Needs Negro Men For Training

MONTGOMERY—The Navy needs upright negro men 17 years old for special training and service at the Naval Air Training Station in Pensacola at once. Men selected for this assignment will be enlisted as Mess Attendent 2-C, and immediately transferred to Pensacola for duty at that station. Interested parties should contact the Navy Recruiting Station Post Office Building, Montgomery at once. Only men with grammar school educations or better, who are free from any arrests or convictions for crimes involving moral turpitude need apply.

Rationing News

Today it was announced from the local rationing office that the personnel of the office is now complete. The gasoline, tire, and tube panel is composed of Dr. W. L. Parrish, Mr. Hugh Taylor and James Dennis. The War Price and Price Ceiling panel is composed of Mr. A. A. Bazzell, James Q. Wade, J. W. Hayes, S. C. Porch and Mrs. F. J Callen. All these people are well known to the citizens of Chilton County and it goes without saying that they have the confidence and cooperation of the public in directing the war effort.

It was explained by the rationing office spokesman that the primary purpose of the price panel members would be to actively enlist and stimulate countywide support of price control measures instituted by the Government to control commodity costs, and there prevent inflation.

Panel members will also provide information on price regulations to persons and firms requesting it. This informaton will be given out from the ratoning office by Miss Patterson the price control clerk. This panel will also aid State OPA officials in conducting price compliance surveys accept local reports on non-compliance and forward them to the OPA stimulate understanding of the price control program, and guide and direct the board price clerk in performing office duties.

These panel members are making a patriotic sacrifice in serving on this board. They, like other members of the board, will receive no compensation for the time they devote to board work.

With the completion of these two panels, this puts the local board in position to render the best service to date for the public in general. If you will follow the suggestions made in this column from week to week and give the board your full cooperation a difficult, yet highly necessary job can be well done.

EXTRA TIRES & TUBES

Through the special effort of the board to relieve the shortage of tires and tubes for the county, the state office was able last week to make a special allotment of auto tires and tubes to this county. This was done to supply the deserving demand made by workers engaged in essential war work. The board was most happy to receive these much needed supplies and the applications on file have received, due consideration.

It is still important to observe caution in submitting applications for tires not essential to the war effort.

All special allotments referred to above have been issued on a tremendous amount of applications that were on file. The board now has only the usual low monthly quota of tires with which to work.

BOOK NO. 1

People are coming to the office every week to register for Book ONE for babies that have arrived since the regular date of registration for this book. The office asks that these babies be registered within the first thirty days of their lives. The office is placed in an awkward position when it is asked to issue a ration book for a baby over thirty days old. Your cooperation in this will be most appreciated.

War Conditions To Effect Fertilizers

Many farmers are having to rearrange their methods of fertilizing due to the War Emergency restrictions. Since many farmers are now making arrangements for their fertilizers we are offering the suggestions below in using fertilizer under War conditions.

Grades and materials authorized for sale in Alabama by Food Production Order No. 5, Januarv 18th, 1943:

a. 4-10-7
b. 4-10-4
c. 4-12-4, "Floriculturist Special."
d. 3-8-7, "Victory Garden Special.'
e. 0-14-10
f. Murate of Potash containing a minimum of 60 per cent K20.
g. Superphosphate containing a minimum of 18 per cent P205.
h. Nitrogen materials for side and top dressing.

Cotton: As a general rule, 4-10-7 is well adapted to all soils in Chilton County. The amount applied per acre before planting should be the same as the amount of 6-8-4 or 3-8-5 that the farmer has been accustomed to using (300 to 600 pounds per acre) If nitrate of soda is available, the cotton should be side-dressed at the first cultivation after shopping with 10 to 15 pounds for each 100 pounds of 4-10-7 or 4-10-4 put under the cotton.

If as much as 500 to 600 pounds per acre of 4-10-7 or 4-10-4 are used, it should be bedded on about 10 days ahead of planting.

Where cotton is planted after a good crop of peanuts that have been hogged-off, or a good crop of winter legumes that have been turned under apply about 30 to 400 pounds of 0-14-10 per acre before planting.

Corn: When corn is planted after a well fertilized crop of cotton the only plant food needed is nitrogen. About thirty five days after planting the corn it should be side dressed with nitrogen. The amount to apply will depend on the supply but up to 225 lbs of nitrate of soda should be used if available.

Corn that does not follow well-fertilized cotton, winter legumes, or hogged-off peanuts should receive an application of 200 pounds of 0-14-10 ahead of planting. It should then be side dressed with nitrate of soda as described above.

When corn follows hogged off peanuts or a good crop of winter legume that is turned under, no fertilizer will be needed.

Peanuts: Fertilizers containing nitrogen should not be applied to peanuts, especially during this period of nitrogen shortage. Ordinarily, nitrogen applied to peanuts will not return a profit. The farmers of Alabama could assist the War effort materially if no nitrogen whatsoever was applied to peanuts in 1943.

It is recommended that peanuts receive 200 to 300 pounds of 0-14-10, or 200 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of muriate of potash, or 400 pounds of basic slag and 50 pounds of muriate of potash per acre.

Soybeans, Cowpeas Velvet Beans or other summer legumes: Fertilize the crops in the same manner described for peanuts. Nitrogen should not be applied to these crops.

Pastures: Lime should be applied to all pastures at a rate of 1 to 2 tons per acre. In addition apply 300 to 400 pounds of 0-14-10, or 200 to 300 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of muriate of potash, or 400 to 600 pound of basic slag and 50 pounds of muriate of potash per acre. Apply no nitrogen to pastures.

Small Grains Planted for Grain: If such crops as oats, barley, and rye are to be harvested for grain this spring they should receive a top-dressing of nitrogen about March 1. An application of about 100 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda is usually sufficient for average soils, but small grains on very productive soils should respond profitably to even larger applications of nitrogen.

Fertilizers Recommendations for Commercial Truck Crops and Gardens on Farms:

(Farmers may use 4-10-7 and 4-10-4 on their gardens.)

Irish Potatoes: 1000 to 1500 pounds per acre of a 4-10-7.

Sweet Potatoes: 600 to 800 pounds per acre of a 4-10-7.

Other Root Crops: Such as beets carrots, turnips, etc.—800 to 1200 lbs. per acre of a 4-10-7 plus side applications equivalent to 100 to 150 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

Pod-bearing or Fruit-bearing Vegetables such as tomatoes, beans, etc.—800 to 1200 pounds per acre of a 4-10-4 plus side application equivalent to 150 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre or plus 8 to 10 tons of stable manure.

Leafy Crops such as cabbage, lettuce, etc.—1000 to 1500 pounds per acre of 4-10-4 plus a side application equivalent to 200 to 300 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda or plus 12 tons per acre of fine stable manure.

Chilton County Owes The International Red Cross Much

Of all the agencies of the world engaged in rlieving the suffering of humanity the International Red Cross is the only one left that is still in operation in all the countries that are now at war. The American Red Cross is a chapter of the international organization and as such is the only organization through which the people of the united nations may get in touch with the members of their families now being held prisoners in the consentration camps of the Axis powers. The international organization has been busy trying to work out plans whereby these contacts can be made. As the war progresses we may expect to see these plans completed. The International Red Cross is the only group of people left that can gather a representative body from all nations of the world and sit down around a table and discuss world problems in an understanding manner.

During the year 1942 the American Red Cross did not ask for a dollar in funds from the people, but it had the most active year of service it has had since its beginning. It is the only agency that the government employs to secure accurate information regarding the home conditions of the men and boys in the armed services of the United States. Through the Home Service division of the loyal Red Cross chapter hundreds of boys from Chilton County and their homes have been served during the last eighteen months.

Chilton County will always owe a debt of gratitude to the American Red Cross for the aid rendered after the disasterous tornadoes of 1932 when the Red Cross spent $40,273.00 in helping to relieve the suffering, and to restore the people of the county to a normal state of living after that disaster.

"C" CLUB TO GIVE DANCE FRIDAY NIGHT

The "C" Club of the Chilton County High School are giving a dance Friday night. The dance will start at 8 o'cock and end at 11:30 at the High School Gym. The admission is 25c per person. Everyone is invited to attend the dance.

Meet To Study Uses Of Sweet Potatoes

To discuss fully the sweet potato as food and feed, a Southern Conference on sweet potatoe research problems will be held at Auburn, February 3-4. The conference will be attended by research horticulturists, animal husbandmen, and agricultural engineers from various Southern states.

The production and utilization of sweet potatoes for feed will be considered the first day of the conference, with attention centering on production methods, machinery, natural drying, dehydration machinery an dthe feeding of potatoes to cattle and hogs.

Sweet potatoes for food will be discussed in all phases during the second day, with special attention to production problems, dehydration, and dehydration plants.

NEW SCHEDULE IS NOW BEING WORKED OUT

Superintendent Culp's New Schedule Ready By March 1st.

Chilton County School Authorities have received orders from the Office of Defense Transportation to make a detailed study of every school bus route in Chilton County for the purpose of reducing miles to the lowest possbile number. This step is being taken by ODT to stretch the life of school bus equipment, with the expressed hope that busses can be kept in operation over the shortest routes possible until the war ends. Many repair parts for busses are very hard to get now and they will become increasingly scarce as existing parts stocks are used up. In brief, ODT plans to stretch bus life by attention to the following points:

1. Elimination of spur routes where children would have to walk less than 1 and 1-2 miles to meet a bus on a main road to school.
2. Elimination of bus stops on hills.
3. Eliminating the transportation of children who live within two miles of school, if the transporting of these children uses additional equipment.
4. Combining bus stops that are close together; in other words, children may be asked to gather in groups along the bus routes to board the bus.
5. Move drivers as near the starting point of the route as is possible
6. Training bus drivers to take the best possible care of their busses.
7. Combining bus routes where possible.
8. Transporting children to the nearest school only.

Teachers, principals, parents, children, and bus drivers are asked to help work out every possible saving that can be made. Detailed maps are being prepared of every route in the county so that comparisons of distances may be made. You can help in this war emergency by offering any suggestion you have that will enable your school bus to go fewer miles and make fewer stops.

Chilton County is getting along better than most counties are, but every broken or worn out part is harder to replace. Some counties have had busses to give out completely and children have been left without any means of riding to school. The prevention of a complete breakdown in the school transportation system is the goal of ODT and you can do your part by telling your bus drivers or school principal of any saving that can be made on your route.

Next week we will publish questions for you to answer about your route. These questions will enable you to survey your own bus route and they may help discover ways of saving miles and stops for the busses. Look for the survey questions next week.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH WINS OVER PRATTVILLE 87-9

The Chilton County High Basketball team won an easy victory from Prattville here Tuesday night, Feb.2 The score was 87 to 9. The Clanton cagers were led by Paul Smith, forward, with 28 points.

In Lauderdale County the Cloverdale School building burned recently The estimated loss $10,000.

Chilton County Mother of 7 Heroes Offers Silent Prayer For Sons At Ship Launching At Houston, Tex.

"EVERY MEMBER OF EVERY FAMILY OUGHT TO BE DOING SOMETHING TO WIN THE WAR," SAYS MRS. DEASON

Mrs. Charity M. Deason, 60, who left her Clanton, Alo., farm to christen the U. S. S. Sloat at the Brown Shipbuilding Company yards Thursday whispered a silent prayer for her six sons now in the armed services and a seventh who was killed in the Solomons last September as she sent the destroyer escort sliding down the ways.

Generations of the Deasons have farmed in Alabama. Only during war times have they put aside their plows and shouldered muskets. In Alabama they are known as the "fighting Deasons.'

Members of her family—she is the mother of 13 children—who are not in the armed forces, are working in war plants. That includes her husband 63 year old J. B. Deason and a son, Van Poe Deason, 32.

While her six sons are helping win the war in a military way and her husband and another son are doing their bit in a shell loading plant, Mrs. Deason, a 16 year old son, and a 17 year old daughter run the farm.

Mrs. Deasons trip reached a thrilling climax soon before noon Thursday when one of her sons, Staff Sgt. James Deason, arrived from New Orleans.

Hearing that his mother was to christen a ship here, he asked for leave and came to Houston in a Bus. Sgt. Deason accompanied his mother to the launching.

Mrs. Deason has never been in Texas before. She rarely ever leaves her farm. Her trip to Houston and the honor of christening a warship is an event she will never forget.

The destroyer escort is named for Rear Adm. John Drake Sloat, hero of the war of 1812 and later commander of the Pacific Fleet.

"I still can't understand why this honor has been given to me," Mrs. Deason said Thursday. "Members of our family have always felt it an honor to fight for our country. My grand father, Calvil Perry, died in the Civil war. Other members of our family died in World War I. I have already lost one son in this war."

A typical war mother, Mrs. Deason takes the loss of her son, George Warren Deason, 21, who went down with the carrier Wasp, with the expected philosophy of the mother of a fighting family. "Two of my boys were on the carrier Wasp. One died. the other survived. You just can't expect happy endings when there is a war being fought."

Mrs. Deason left for Clanton late Thursday. "I had better get back and roll up my sleeves. You can't win a war sitting around a lovely hotel room and riding around town in fancy automobiles."

In her room at the Rice Hotel was a large bouquet of roses. They were sent her by officials of the Brown Shipbuilding Company.

"Goodness gracious," she said wouldn't those boys of mine be proud to see their mother getting all of this attention." —From Houston Post.

Give Cupid a Break . . . Bake Him a Cake
(See Recipes Below)

Valentine Notes

Along about this time, even though it isn't spring, there's a note of precious sentiment that gets into the atmosphere. Perhaps it's those bits of bright red and lacy paper the children have been pasting into heart shapes, the rhymes they've been making. Yes! Valentines!

Cupid has a way of darting into this season and winning us over—even if only with a cardboard arrow springing out of a froth of red and white paper cutouts of hearts. Why not plan to give yourself up to a party with a Valentine theme?

Let's make it simple but festive for even simple gayety will do loads for your morale. Except for the cake in today's column which is a wee bit party-ish, the rest of ingredients in the party are streamlined to save your time.

Our color scheme for the holiday runs into red-and-white, so our main dish is going to be a variation of the old favorite chicken and cranberries.

Jellied Chicken and Cranberry Loaf.
(Serves 6)

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 cups well seasoned chicken broth
6 small thin slices chicken
2 cups minced chicken
Cranberry mixture

Soften gelatin in a little broth, add remaining broth and heat until gelatin is dissolved. Pour a little into the bottom of an oiled 1-quart loaf pan. Divide remaining gelatin between 1 cup dark and 1 cup light meat of chicken. Add alternating layers of chicken and cranberry, chilling each layer thoroughly until set before adding the next.

Cranberry Mixture.
(For Chicken Loaf)

1 pint cranberry juice
1½ tablespoons gelatin
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne
Juice of ½ lemon
1 cup minced celery

Soften gelatin in a little cranberry sauce; dissolve over hot water. Add remaining juice and seasonings. Cool and add celery.

Since the main dish is a combination salad and main dish—if served with a lettuce or watercress garnish and mayonnaise if you want it, balance the menu with some attractive assorted sandwiches. Sandwiches should be light snacks for this type of party, so we'll fall back on the old standby, cream cheese.

Cream Cheese Rolls.

Mix 1 package of softened cream cheese with 1 tablespoon of mayonnaise and a dash of worcestershire sauce. Blend thoroughly. Take thinly sliced white bread, trim off crusts, and spread with cream cheese mixture. Roll, cut in half and brush with melted butter. Toast in broiler until evenly browned.

Valentine Party.
*Chicken Cranberry Loaf
*Assorted Sandwiches or
*Graham Gems
*Cupid's Cake
Tea Hot Chocolate
*Recipe Given

Other good cream cheese combinations, using heart or diamond-shaped bread slices, include cream cheese and apple butter or cream cheese and currant jelly or raspberry jam.

Hot muffins that pull no nutritional punches would be good foil for the cool, smooth jellied chicken and cranberry loaf. Try these:

Graham Gems.

½ cup flour
1 cup graham flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg, well beaten
¾ cup milk

Sift the flour. Sift again with salt and baking powder. Add egg and milk and beat only until mixed with dry ingredients. Bake in small, buttered muffin tins in a hot (400-degree) oven for 20 minutes.

A delicious mouth-watering cake to top off the party is just the thing you need to make it a success:

Cupid's Cake.

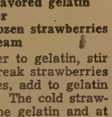
1¼ cups egg whites (about 10)
1¼ cups sifted sugar
⅞ cup sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla



Measure egg whites and place in a bowl. Sift and measure sugar and add flour. Add half of sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt to flour. Sift 5 or 6 times. Beat egg whites until frothy, add cream of tartar, beat until egg whites are slightly stiff but still glossy. Fold in sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time. Fold in sifted flour a little at a time. Fold in vanilla and pour into a hot pan that has been set in a hot oven, 425 degrees, while cake is being mixed. Bake in a hot oven 20 to 23 minutes or until cake springs back when touched; invert pan to cool cake.

Frozen Strawberry Filling.

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 package fresh-frozen strawberries
1 cup whipping cream

Add boiling water to gelatin, stir until dissolved. Break strawberries into separate pieces, add to gelatin and stir carefully. The cold strawberries will cool the gelatin and at the same time thaw the syrup around the berries. If strawberries are thawed, cool gelatin before adding strawberry mixture. Whip cream and fold in ½ cup of whipped cream into strawberry mixture.

With a sharp knife cut out center of cake with a sawing motion, leaving a 1-inch shell around top of cake. Lift out center of cake and tear off pieces of center to fill hole at bottom of cake left by tube. Use this extra cake and put into filling or frost small pieces and roll in coconut. Pour strawberry filling into cake. Frost outside of cake with remaining cream. Part of this frosting may be used through a cake decorator tube to add valentines to sides and swirls to top of cake as shown in picture above. Put cake in refrigerator for ½ hour or long enough to set filling. Serves 10.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: It looks very much as though you will cook what you can find with more foods announced as to become rationed. Canned and frozen foods along with meats will be less easily available.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are to be unrationed so keep your budgetwise and marketwise eyes cocked for bargains. Turnips, carrots, beets, citrus fruits and apples will appeal to wise menu makers.

Canned soups which you obtain and pay more for now are usually more concentrated and you can get more food value from them. You'll like using dehydrated soups, too, the chicken-noodle combinations being winners.

Plan to pack whole wheat flours and dehydrated pancake mixes into your shopping bags. The former will help you get vitamin B in the diet, while the latter is a fine time-saver.

IT IS difficult to know just which bouquet to toss at "In Which We Serve"; people agree that it is a really great picture, but they praise it for different reasons — for its direction, the excellence of the production, the remarkably good acting, by a cast in which Noel Coward's is the only well-known name. I think that it is great because of its sincerity—watching it, you don't think "That's a good performance"; you feel that you are actually watching real people, taking part in their lives.

Signs of the times: An announcement from Metro's New York office that the theater where "Tennessee Johnson" is being shown is heated with coal, so patrons will be assured of comfort while viewing this picture about the 17th President of the United States.

The glamour girls who are sweethearts of the armed forces have nothing on Baby Snooks; she's the land-based mascot of the officers and men of the submarine U.S.S. And Fanny Brice, Baby Snooks' originator on the "Coffee Time" program, has a standing invitation to dine aboard the Snooks the day the war's over.

Don't blame the navy for the shortage of zippers; they don't use 'em. Glenn Ford found that out when he arrived on the set of "Destroyer" at Columbia in a brand new sailor's uniform equipped with zippers. Lieut. Com. Donald Smith ruled the uniform out; he's technical adviser. Seems they don't use zippers in the navy because, if a gob has to go over the side in an emergency and must get rid of his pants so that he can swim, buttons are much easier to open in the water than zippers are to un-zip.

Dorothy Lamour's first male protege has red hair and freckles and is 6½ years old. He's the son of Dorothy's secretary, and Dorothy's grooming him for important child roles. You'll see him making his film debut with her in "Dixie."

A screen role became a real one for Fay Bainter the other day, when her only son, Reginald S. H. Venable Jr., announced that he had enlisted in the army and was about to begin officers' training. In "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" she portrayed the mother of a boy who enlisted in the armed forces. She's working now in "Salute to the Marines."

Whoever gets the rights to film Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's life will know that he's won out over stern competition; even before Captain Rickenbacker's recent and famous adventure in the Pacific the major studios were interested in his life story.

Dick Martin, the young RKO actor, was discussing "Bombardier" with photographer Ernie Bachrach. "I sure hope I can get a part in that picture," said Martin. "It's going to be terrific." "I understand that Walter Reed has a good role," said Bachrach. "Good role!" exploded Martin. "Why, he kills off Randy Scott, bombs Tokyo, and gets Anne Shirley—what more could an actor ask?"

Henry Travers, who played the rose-growing station master in "Mrs. Miniver," has been cast to portray Dr. Eugene Curie, father of Pierre Curie, in Metro's "Madame Curie," starring Greer Garson. It's the third consecutive film in which Travers has appeared with her—he played the country doctor in "Random Harvest."

ODDS AND ENDS—Dinah Shore's been signed to appear with Danny Kaye in Samuel Goldwyn's "With Flying Colors" . . . Lesley Woods of the "Joyce Jordan, M. D." air show has been dashing about New York during the cold weather in sequin trimmed ear muffs . . . Sheldon Leonard plays a racketeer in "Lucky Jordan" because Hollywood thought him the ideal gangster type—but when he appeared in "Margin for Error" on the New York stage the minions of the law voted him the ideal policeman . . . Alice Weaver's the fastest-moving waitress on the screen, as shown in "Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour"—but she's had actual experience as one, so why not?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To clean a soiled felt hat rub it with a very fine grade of sandpaper.

• • •

When clothing is spotted by rain, place a clean damp cloth on the material and press it with a moderately warm iron.

• • •

Draperies that shrink may be remedied this way: Add a fold of contrasting color to the bottom of the old curtain, using a harmonizing color or cording between the two materials, and the effect will be very pleasing.

• • •

Furniture for a man's room is appearing in bleached and limed finishes rather than in the dark oak which used to hold sway.

The first time the cork is taken out of a glue bottle, dip it in melted paraffin and allow it to dry before replacing—it will never be sticky and hard to remove.

• • •

When using an aluminum saucepan for boiling eggs, add a few drops of vinegar to prevent the pan from discoloring.

• • •

The popular wrap around turbans should be washed frequently because they are handled so much. Those made of silk, rayon or knit wool can be laundered with lukewarm water and mild soap if the color is fast.

• • •

The secrets of washing woolens successfully are: (1) plenty of suds; (2) luke-warm water throughout the washing and rinsing; (3) no rubbing or twisting; (4) drying at moderate temperature, avoiding both heat and intense cold.

Wives Want Rivals

Among the peoples who practice polygamy, especially the Mohammedans, women sometimes ask their husbands to marry a second wife when they are overburdened with housework and childbearing, says Collier's. If such a request is denied, the wife can take the matter to court and usually make her husband comply with the demand.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Between 28 and 33 per cent of the road service calls answered by AAA clubs are in response to tire trouble—flats. Battery problems cause the second largest number of road calls for help.

American synthetic rubber will fill 90 per cent of the country's rubber needs, within two years of Pearl Harbor, according to a rubber chemist. This will be a speedy transition from natural rubber. Germany which started synthetic rubber development prior to 1914 can now only take care of 75 per cent of its rubber needs with synthetic.

Rubber tired trucks have been hauling about 18 per cent as many ton-miles as the railroads, ODT officials say.

Until gasoline rationing was applied as a brake, the car owners of the country were wearing off 750,000 pounds of tread rubber from their tires every day, a government statistician asserts.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

WHY BUY A BOND

The average man or woman who buys a war bond or the child which buys a war stamp feels patriotic pride in doing so. Each knows that the money so invested helps to win the war and to support the vast Army, Navy and air armadas that we have in the field. There has just appeared a story giving various reasons why a certain man bought a war bond. It was related by Harlan Eugene Read, a CBS news analyst who told the story over station WBBM, Chicago as follows:

"I want to read you a note that a good American attached to his first war savings bond:

"This war makes me feel older than I am, because I know that I may be dead before it is over. I may never know definitely whether the freedom that I have believed in and fought for, all my life, will continue in the world or whether my own sons and grandsons will be slaves. But I have faith, and this is an expression of it.

"I buy this bond for the same reason that my grandfather planted the trees beneath whose shade I sit on Summer days. He knew that he would not live to see them, but he also knew that they would grow, and that they would shelter those he loved. He knew that his memory would be a benediction, his last days useful, his life a success, partly because of the labor of his declining years.

"I know that what I do now will help to save the lives of millions of younger men who are fighting for me.

"I know that what I do now will make the world a lovelier place for my sons and daughters and for their children.

"I know that what I do now will strike shackles from the limbs of men and women in conquered countries the world over.

"I know that songs and laughter will be heard again throughout the earth partly because of what I do now.

"I know that merry children will be more merry because they will be well fed and well clothed; that lovers will whisper their secrets to each other more tenderly and will love more deeply because they know that their future together will be secure; that those in middle life will be more confident and the aged wiser when fear, hate and horror are no longer the masters of mankind—and that when at last there shall come a just and lasting peace, I shall have helped to make it possible.

"I know that men and women in all lands, and forever, will be free to speak, write, think and worship as they please, and to assemble when and where they will, in part because of what I have done, and that liberty will be possible in my country because the rest of the world is free.

I know that I, myself, will be happier as long as I live, because I have done something to increase my own hope for the the future and to express my own confidence in the continued upward march of man."

I think something like that should be attached to the war bonds and written upon the hearts of a million Americans."

A. B. (Windy) Windham, out at Windham's Smokehouse in West Clanton, has one of the neatest signs on his register that we have seen lately. Says he, "Please Present Tokens With Each Purchase. BE FAIR. I Can't Pay My Taxes And Yours Too.' He says the sign really gets results.

Judge J. Lee Smith was telling us Tuesday that Chilton County, for the month of January, received 44 percent less revenue from gasoline sales than it did for a like period a year ago. Says Judge Smith, "It's Hitler, Hiro Hito and Mussolini thats to blame in case anyone wants to blame anyone.'

Which reminds us that in the Magazine "Alabama," this week is a picture of Judge Smith and Judge L. H. Reynolds along with the new Governor Sparks. Seems that the Chilton County citizens were just getting ready to shake hands with the Governor when the photographer let go.

Overheard somewhere: A small boy-"I'm not afraid of going to the hospital mother. I'll be brave and take my medicine, but I ain't going to let them palm off a baby on me like they did on you. I want a pup."

Congratulations to Grace Golder and the Doctor. We mean Dr. W. C. the Dady, not the Physician in charge Their bundle of happiness arrived Tuesday morning at 3 a. m., which is entirely too early for anyone to get up these cold mornings. At this writing we hadn't learned the young lady's name. Yes it was a girl and she tipped the scales at SEVEN pounds.

What's Doing At Isabella High

The F. F. A. held its chapter public speaking contest Friday morning with two members competing. They were C. F. Gandy, whose subject was "Soil Conservation," and Jesse Culp, whose subject was "The Future of Farming.' The audience, acting as judges declared Jesse the winner by a smal margin. Jesse will represent the Isabella chapter in the next contest.

Isabella basketball fans will remember that not long ago, Jemison nipped us for a one point victory. Last Friday they came down for a return game.

The game was plenty fast all the way, both teams maintaining a strong defense. Fouls were plentiful. In fact a big part of Isabella's score came from free shots.

At the beginning of the game, Jemison took over for the first scoring. But the Mustangs stopped them in their tracks, leading the Jemison boys 7-3 at the end of the first half. In the second half it was nip and tuck. But we finally managed to turn the tables on them with a final score of Isabella 14, Jemison 13.

Mr. C. W. Williams, the Math teacher and assistant principal at Isabella was absent all last week on account of illness. Mr. Haggard, the grammar school principal did a good job of pinch hitting for him .... Mr. Camp the Agrcultural teacher and Hudson Calfee, state F. F. A. reporter attended a meeting at Auburn last Friday and Saturday.

The Jr. II's presented a very interesting one-act play in chapel Wednesday morning .... Fresh sweetmilk is now being made available for students at Isabella. I understand that this is part of a program that has been started by the government. It is certainly a beneficial one, and boy, do the students stampede for that milk

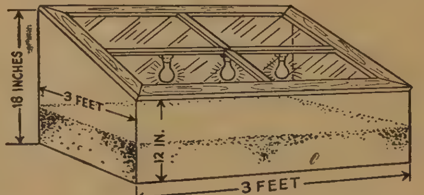
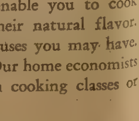
How Electricity Can Help Your VICTORY GARDEN



Soil inside the frame should be 5 inches deep, composed of ½ sand and ½ rich loam. The 60-watt lamp bulbs, in porcelain receptacles, should be mounted on a wood strip screwed to under side of sash. Soil or ashes, hilled up around the outside of the frame, will help retain warmth.

ELECTRICITY can help in several ways. Three or four 60-watt lamp bulbs, placed in a cold frame as here illustrated, will give ample heat on cold, cloudy days and nights to transform the cold frame into a mild hotbed, in which the seeds of more tender plants can be started for transplanting later.

Later in the season, when warm weather comes and insects begin hatching, a pan of water, covered with a film of kerosene or oil of any kind, suspended below an outdoor lamp similar to the method shown in the sketch, will catch and kill many a destructive insect, particularly moths which lay the eggs which make the worms. Certain beetles will also be destroyed. This is not an insect kill-all, but will help lessen the insect population if the light is near the garden spot.



As your vegetables mature, your electric range will enable you to cook them, fresh out of the garden, in a way which retains their natural flavor. Your electric refrigerator will keep fresh temporary surpluses you may have. Supplies greater than for immediate use may be canned. Our home economists will gladly give you the benefit of their training either in cooking classes or when they visit your home.

Don't give up your flowers entirely, but try some vegetables. Raise them as you would flowers and you should be successful.

But—Sacrificing Non-Essential Calls Helps Clear Lines for Vital War Calls

You bet it's pleasant to talk with friends over the telephone, just as it was pleasant to take those long Sunday afternoon rides when we had plenty of tires and gasoline.

But social calls must be handled over the same local telephone facilities as war calls. There is a definite limit to the number of calls these facilities can handle at the same time, and when more calls are made, some must wait.

With telephone equipment already burdened with war calls, non-essential calls may delay necessary calls, so we are requesting your voluntary co-operation to reduce unnecessary calling.

Under normal conditions we would expand our facilities to care for the increased volume of calls, but we cannot do that now because the needed materials are going into war weapons.

So won't you help by making fewer local calls? And when you must make a call, won't you please try to make it as short as possible?

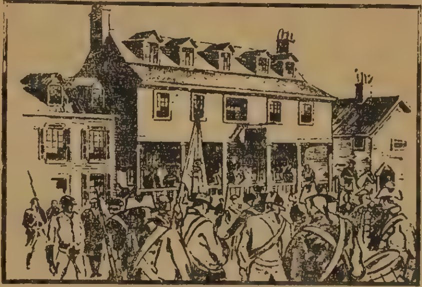
U. S. Marines Set Sail 167 Years Ago On First Overseas "Commando" Raid



Tun Tavern in Philadelphia, first recruiting place of Continental Marines.

ONE hundred and sixty-seven years ago the United States Marines began their first overseas expedition and under command of their leader, Captain Samuel Nicholas, promptly brought it to a successful finish. It was the 1776 version of a commando raid but ended with the bloodless surrender by a small British garrison in the Bahama Islands of a great store of supplies including 71 cannons, 15 mortars and a quantity of gun powder.

The Continental Congress authorized the recruiting of a force of Marines on November 10, 1775 after it became apparent that defensive warfare by the revolting American colonies was not enough. It was decided to form a small well-trained fighting force for foreign landing operations.

The Marines were recruited at the famous Tun's Tavern in Philadelphia during November and December 1775, and Robert Mullan, the [illegible]ghty innkeeper, was commissioned a Captain and served as Recruiting Officer and as Commander of one of the companies. He was both a famous host and an outstanding patriot and the foaming mugs of beer and ale which he dispensed to wash down the bounteous rations of the recruits quickly filled the ranks of the first force of 250 men who were organized and trained so rapidly that they were rarin' to go by New Year's Day, 177[illegible].

Esek Hopkins, commissioned as the Naval commander, had meanwhile outfitted a squadron of two ships, two brigs, two sloops and two schooners at Philadelphia. The Marines were put aboard and the expedition set forth with secret orders on January 17, 1776.

They were joined by two ships from Baltimore and on March 3rd, eight of the ships arrived at New Providence in the Bahama Islands, fired a few broadsides, loaded all of the marines into the sloop Cabot, and the first commando raid in our history was under way. Captain Nicholas put 220 marines ashore assisted by 50 sailors under Lieutenant Weaver. He offered honorable terms, was invited to a parley, and the surrender was accomplished without bloodshed on the following day. The captured guns and stores were loaded, the Governor and a number of other British officials were taken aboard as captives and the raiding force departed for home on March 17th.

There is no exact record of the first Marines' authorized daily rations, though it is believed they included — when obtainable — a pound of beef or three-fourth pound of pork or one pound of salt fish; one pound of bread or flour; vegetables; milk; beer and cider; butter; vinegar and rice or meal. But when they were in Philadelphia doughty old Robert Mullan always saw to it that they had the best of fare that Tun's Tavern could provide them from its bounteous table —and a foamy draught to wash it down.

New United Nations Attacks Predicted As Leaders Determine Grand Strategy; Frenchmen Reach 'Military Agreement'; 'Push Germans Out of Russia': Stalin

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL

"The President, Prime Minister and the combined staffs having completed their plans for the offensive campaigns of 1943, have now separated in order to put them into active and concerted execution." Official communique at Casablanca.

STRATEGY:
On a High Plane

When the initial surprise of one of the war's greatest stories — the Roosevelt - Churchill "unconditional surrender" meeting at Casablanca in French Morocco—had died away, the world waited expectantly for the carrying out of the principles of grand strategy laid down by Allied military leaders.

The Roosevelt-Churchill rendezvous was the definite tip-off of big things to come. The Allied leaders made it clear that their countries would dig to the bottom of their resources—if necessary—in order to carry out the extermination of Axis war power as quickly as possible.

From a gleaming white villa near Casablanca came the great news. But only after complete secrecy had officially ended. Correspondents regarded the meeting as one of the best kept secrets of all time. Virtually the entire war staffs of both nations participated in the dramatic 10-day discussions which ended with a press conference. But the presidential air voyage was shrouded in such secrecy that even some cabinet members did not know Mr. Roosevelt was out of town.

No one doubted but that further important developments would stem from the meeting. One of the most widespread predictions is that the North Africa-Mediterranean area will soon be organized into a separate theater of operations. Thus far the United States forces in that area have been part of the European theater. Separation of Africa and the Mediterranean Basin from the European theater might well be an important factor in the Allied offensive campaigns of the year.

Frenchmen Meet

One of the most important achievements of the conference was the bringing about of a meeting between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud. Those leaders of the Fighting French and French Africa announced that they were in complete agreement regarding the liberation of their homeland. But it was regrettably clear that any merging of the two movements or any political alliance between them was far from being realized.

Offensives Will Tell

While the decisions made by military leaders are secret, observers indicated that concrete results would become apparent with new Allied offensives this spring.

The basic questions settled appeared to be these:

1. The first great effort must be to drive the Axis entirely from North Africa and free the Mediterranean supply line.
2. If he has not been chosen already, a supreme Allied commander in Europe will be named.
3. The anti-submarine warfare and air war against Europe will be stepped up.
4. Europe will be invaded in one of three ways: Across the Mediterranean, a frontal attack on the channel coast, or a conquest of Norway.
5. Aid to Russia and China will be stepped up as much as possible.

Of immediate interest to the United Nations is the naming of a supreme military commander. The name of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the American army, is most frequently mentioned. Many observers believed he had already been decided upon to head the command.

RALLYING CRY:
For Russians

"I declare my appreciation to the command and to the gallant troops. Forward to the routing of the German invaders and their expulsion over the boundaries of our motherland." So declared Josef Stalin in an order of the day broadcast by the Moscow radio.

His words, urging the Russians to throw the Nazis out of their country, became the rallying cry of the Red army as it pushed forward in the big offensives aimed at Kursk, Kharkov and Rostov. After the fall of these strategic points there were still miles of hard battling ahead, but for the first time since the Nazis started their invasion of Russia there were definite signs that Stalin's plea was not idle thinking.

For everywhere along the far-flung front—from Leningrad to the Caucasus—the Reds added momentum to their drive. Russian military quarters estimated that 40 per cent of the Axis effectives had been knocked out by the Red winter offensive.

At the same time diplomatic circles revealed that United Nations air and sea supply lines to Russia were getting much better protection than a few months ago because losses on these routes have dropped sharply. One recent U. S. convoy was reported to have reached Russia without loss of a single ship. It was indicated that close U. S.-British - Russian co-operation was making this possible.

FARM PICTURE:
Incentive Plan

Under terms of the new "incentive" program as announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, U. S. producers stand to pick up an extra 100 million dollars in subsidy payments to be awarded for meeting or exceeding greatly expanded farm production goals.

Applicable to soybeans, grain sorghums, peanuts, sweet potatoes, flax and dried peas, the program would pay growers of these crops extra benefits for each acre on which they exceed 90 per cent of their goal—up to 110 per cent of that goal. These are products which are badly needed in the war effort to meet deficiencies in vegetable oils and proteins for animal feeding and human consumption.

Wickard stated further that added labor and materials will have to be available to farmers if they are to meet the goals of the program.

'Land Army'

As a means to this end Secretary Wickard and Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt released their plans for the mobilization of a volunteer land army of 3½ million farm workers. These would be gathered from ranks of women, the unemployed, clerks, and nonwar workers from cities and towns.

Aimed at relieving the expected farm manpower crisis, which experts predict will reach its peak in mid-summer, this land army would be gathered by the joint activities extension agents of the department of agriculture and by the field offices of the War Manpower commission.

More than 12 million farm workers will be needed at the height of the farm season, said Wickard. He pointed out that the total farm labor force in December, 1942, was 8,900,000.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SAVING: Maintenance of the Office of Price Administration has cost each American only 90 cents during the past year, but has saved each citizen $180 during the same period, Chester K. Hayes, of the Chicago regional office of the OPA, said. One of his examples: consumers are paying only seven cents a pound for sugar whereas they paid 25 cents during the last war.

TRANSPORTATION: Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, has called upon taxicab and bus companies to prepare plans immediately for mileage curtailment in case of emergency. He has requested operators of 10 or more vehicles to submit three plans: For elimination of 10, 20 and 30 per cent of all presently operated vehicle miles.

RATIONING:
Limit Set

With the beginning of rationing but a few weeks away the Office of Price Administration established a five-can-per-person limit as the amount of canned vegetables and fruits which householders might have on hand, without penalty, at the beginning of the point system. This was a drastic cut from the eight to ten cans which it had previously been expected would be allowed.

When the plan gets under way, persons who have more than the allowable limits will have coupons torn out of their canned goods ration book up to the point value of the goods held in excess. This will be based on one eight-point coupon for each can over five per household member.

Excluded from the count of five cans per person will be cans containing less than eight ounces.

ARGUMENT:
Gets an Airing

For weeks Washington has reports of unannounced differences of opinion between Rubber Administrator William Jeffers and other government and military officials over priorities for the synthetic rubber program. Finally the dispute was brought into the open when Jeffers, in a Baltimore address, lashed out at army and navy expediters in war plants.

Congress decided to investigate his charges and Donald Nelson, war production chief, admitted the fact that a tift in government ranks had resulted over this issue. Most Washington sources knew that President Roosevelt would be required to step in as arbiter in the dispute.

The quarrel centers around steel priorities for synthetic rubber plants. Army and navy officials believe that these plants should be built only in direct relation to the military needs of steel for the production of such items as high-octane gasoline, airplanes, escort vessels and merchant ships. Jeffers contended that the production efforts could be worked out in conjunction with one another and without hampering progress in his synthetic rubber program.

LEND-LEASE:
Extension Sought

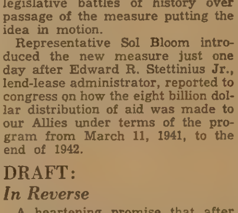
Congress is already considering the extension of the lend-lease act by another year—to June 30, 1944. This early action has been taken to insure an uninterrupted flow of war materials between the United States and our fighting Allies.

Though there are some verbal outbursts expected on the role of Harry Hopkins in the program, even Republican minority leaders in congress predict approval of an extension for the plan. Two years ago when it was first introduced the United States was not at war and there evolved one of the greatest legislative battles of history over passage of the measure putting the idea in motion.

Representative Sol Bloom introduced the new measure just one day after Edward R. Stettinius Jr., lend-lease administrator, reported to congress on how the eight billion dollar distribution of aid was made to our Allies under terms of the program from March 11, 1941, to the end of 1942.

DRAFT:
In Reverse

A heartening promise that after the war the army will do its utmost "to see that no man is mustered out of military ranks into a breadline" has been made to the nation by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson.



ROBERT P. PATTERSON
"Draft system in reverse."

Speaking in Chicago, Patterson advocated a post-war selective service system "in reverse" to function as a job placement agency. He explained that war department records catalog each man according to occupation and the demobilization plan would be to inform men about to leave the army of job opportunities in their own fields.

REVOLT:

That France's spark of independence has not been extinguished completely by the cold brutality of Naziism was proved when angry Frenchmen fortified their homes in the old port district of Marseilles, firing on German soldiers who ordered them to evacuate the district. German authorities had ordered the evacuation apparently as a defense measure against possible invasion from North Africa. The move was made after Nazi officials brought up tanks, field guns and infantry.

'Hirohito Now' Strategy Gains New Proponents

New Line of Argument Developed in Favor of Immediate Action Against Japanese Empire.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

Some weeks ago the story of the real purpose of the visit to America of Madame Chiang Kai-shek was told in these columns. Since then it has been confirmed by unofficial statements credited to "Chinese quarters"—that her mission was a show-down fight for an immediate offensive against Japan. In the interim two things have taken place. The Chinese government has let it be known unofficially that it realizes that America is so occupied elsewhere that a drive on Japan with China as a base cannot be expected at the moment. This would seem to be a retreat. It may be only a demarche, for suddenly, from several other quarters including Australian and Dutch with many American voices echoing in between, the demand for "Hirohito Now" action is being heard.

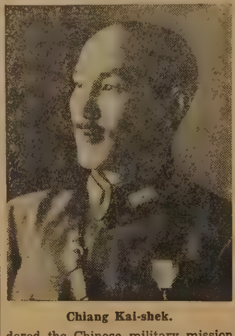
The Chinese course so far is this: Chiang Kai-shek, discouraged because of the futility of his pleas for additional supplies and help and America's failure to replace certain supposedly unsympathetic American representatives in Chungking, he ordered the Chinese military mission to the United States to come home. At the same time stories appeared to the effect that China felt that she was not being given a position of equality among the United Nations when it came to strategy and over-all planning.



Chiang Kai-shek.

Polite Chinese

Then the head of the Chinese mission was called to the White House and it was explained that if he withdrew at this moment it would embarrass the United States—would he please take a nice long trip investigating American war-plants until the disturbance blew over. Perhaps he had the promise of more of the products of these plants. But that has not been made public. In any case, the Chinese, noted for their politeness acquiesced. A little later Britain and the United States signed treaties with China relinquishing their extraterritorial rights there.

But no sooner had this step been taken than suddenly voices, unofficial to be sure, but fairly strident, began asking if this "Hitler first" strategy was really sound? Couldn't Britain and the United States divide our efforts and still conquer?

By the time this reaches print there may be similar statements from official sources down under, or from the vitally concerned Dutch, but meanwhile, either self-generated or systematically inspired, continual calls for action in the Far East now are being heard.

Of course, this is not new. There were similar demands which had to be silenced by official utterances from Roosevelt and Churchill nearly a year ago which, if they had not sufficed alone, seemed effective when bolstered by the launching of the American and British expeditionary forces in Africa.

Airplane's Role

By a change in the face of the war, I refer particularly to the role the airplane is to play. Aircraft is a vital factor in offensive and defensive warfare, but it has been demonstrated that airpower alone doesn't win and hold. This has been proved by the success of the convoys which have "gotten through" in the face of terrible onslaughts by the Luftwaffe.

Two things have served to cut down the airplane's offensive power. First, there is the improvement of anti-aircraft guns and second, increased experience in anti-aircraft warfare. I talked to a British naval officer who had been aboard two convoys which fought their way to Murmansk and three that weathered the fierce attacks in the Mediterranean taking supplies to Malta. He emphasized the fact that green gun crews could not meet the onslaught of the dive bomber. Trained crews could.

I talked with an American naval officer who had been through Coral sea and the battles in the Solomons. He said that the anti-aircraft defense of our most modern warships was such that fighter plane defense was hardly necessary, that time and again it had been proved that this new equipment could raise a wall of fire which rendered air attack by the Japs futile.

Now, how does this affect the "Hirohito now" argument?

This way: We cannot leave Japan alone until we are quite ready and then expect to finish her off with an overwhelming airforce. As this is written, in spite of the constant and terrific bombing by Allied planes, the Japs have been able to complete and operate an airbase at Buna, the nearest Jap outpost to Guadalcanal. And further, the Allies, in spite of mass raids, devastating to ordinary buildings, have not been able to destroy the German submarine bases and submarine plants.

Navy and Land Troops

We must therefore depend on our navies and our land troops for the final destruction of Japan. And, it is argued, every day that Japan has to increase her fortifications, every day that she has to exploit the raw materials of her conquered territory, the harder it will be to beat her.

It is further argued that Germany cannot be absolutely beaten without terrific losses on our side, once she retreats within her own borders, a tight area, and can operate on a consolidated and shortened front.

She can be starved out. Therefore the argument is: Continue to move in through the rim of occupied countries until an iron blockade is formed about the Reich, but meanwhile begin an all-out offensive in the Far East; first, with the capture of enough of Burma to get an inlet to China, then, perhaps through the rest of Burma or Thailand move into China, re-arm, reinforce her, send in our own troops and attack Japan with China as a base.

If that is not done now Japan may be able to isolate China, may be able with silver bullets to win some of her provinces to puppet independence and completely paralyze that valuable ally and block off entrance through her territory, so it is argued by the "Hirohito now" advocates.

War-Weary Europe

The argument presented by the same proponents against waiting until we have finished "Hitler first" is two-fold: When Germany finally falls it will leave Europe and its people, especially its fighting manpower, so war-weary that it will be hard to interest them in a war half way around the world. We may get less help than we need for the job.

Second, the process of reaching into Japan island by island, is a slow process as we have found at Guadalcanal and on New Guinea. The northern half of New Guinea, a long-held Japanese stronghold, will be harder to conquer than the part now won back by MacArthur's men. We know that the Japs will not surrender. We know that in some places, like the Netherlands Indies, where a large part of the population is at best indifferent, the Japs can live off the land.

It would mean fighting every inch of the way against "no surrender" troops while the main Japanese armies were moving into China, fortifying the gateways to the continent.

Those are some of the arguments we may expect to hear frequently these days. Madame Chiang Kai-shek, when she recovers, may find it easier to be insistent upon aid than her husband's unsuccessful military men in Washington were.

Meanwhile the going in Tunisia is tough and the military men are inclined to say, "one field, well tilled" is enough of a job for them at present.

THIS colorful afghan was made by clever fingers from the best parts of old woolen garments put together with odds and ends of bright yarn. Even trousers and fitted jackets yielded strips of the size required.

By holding the goods up to the light it is easy to find the unworn parts. These are cut out roughly; washed with mild soap in lukewarm water; rinsed with a little soap in warm water; and pressed while damp. The pieces are then cut accurately according to the measurements given here. Single crochet stitch is used around all pieces, and the sketch shows how the pieces are sewn together.

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—The swelling army of these embattled United States travels triumphantly on a stomach filled — stuffed — by Gen. Edmund B. Gregory. It is his guarantee, as quartermaster general, that army groceries will put six pounds at least on any soldier who eats them regularly for six months.

Keeps Army on The Go With Its Stomach Stuffed

The general put on his own six pounds long ago. For years, in fact, he would have been happier with a few off. No luck! Sixtyish now he is broad of face and broad of beam. And for all that a few congressional critics growl in his direction, he is generally reputed to be a broad-gauged executive. His degree from West Point is only a lesser qualification for his present job of having plenty piping hot when four odd million American soldiers jam into mess halls all over the globe. He did a tour of post-graduate duty at the Harvard Business school besides a swing through the war college. This last attests to his I.Q. You have to be bright before the army lets you go there.

General Gregory was born in Iowa and it could be that boyhood struggles through Iowa's mud fit him peculiarly now for the job of moving goods regardless. His fleet of trucks would make Genghis Khan's biggest train of pony carts look like something out of Lilliput. He has to figure on 250,000 vehicles for every 1,250,000 soldiers. He is one swivel chair general whose shiny pants-seat is the result of hard work. And if ever his wife of 31 years gives his wide front a look and says, "Edmund, you really ought to diet a little," he can fairly answer that he has to keep on eating to keep up his strength.

SOME people grow surer every day that the wings of peace will take all America into the air. Polish off this war, they say, and aerial flivvers will become so foolproof, so handy that wives will use them to run down to the grocery. Whole families will go vacationing deep into South America and whatever is left of Europe. It will be push-button travel. A button for elevation. A button for distance. A button for correct for drift. A safety button to fend off other craft.

All America May Take to Air With Wings of Peace

If this miracle ever comes to pass Mac Short will certainly have had something to do with the planes that make it possible. He has been leveling toward some such result ever since he tested home-made gliders and his own skeletal structure off the ridge of his father's barn in Kansas. That was more than 25 years ago. Now he is the new president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, an earthbound name that only hints at the aero-dynamics with which many members, the new president included, busy themselves.

Short was in the army air service at 19, a flying lieutenant when the last World war ended, a graduate mechanical engineer in 1922 and he has been an airplane engineer and designer ever since. He formed the Vega Aircraft corporation in California in 1937 and for three years has spent all his time taking the bugs out of that company's ships. Forty-five now, he is married and has two daughters and a son.

Mr. Fly now draws blood with an announcement that recent vulgarity on radio programs has brought more complaints than usual and that the FCC is investigating.

This might be a belated riposte to the charge of incompetence made not so long ago by the National Association of Broadcasters. Before that Mr. Fly had likened the whole industry to a dead fish in the moonlight. Dead fish, he explained, shine in beauty but they also s—k. But Mr. Fly was careful to omit none of the letters. And he can spell pretty well.

The commissioner is a graduate of the tough Annapolis course, as well as of Harvard. He took on Harvard Law after having resigned from the navy in 1923

Silver Belt Buckle

By V. YARDMAN

Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

AFTER listening to Cy Vesta's story of the hold-up, Sheriff Jim Kohr got into his ramshackled, topless car and drove out toward Temple Valley. Vesta had said that the bandit was masked, neatly dressed in a light gray suit and wore a silver belt buckle. "He wasn't any one I'd seen before," the banker stated. "He came in at noon when Brig was out to lunch, paused in the entry way, I suppose, to slip on his mask, then stuck a gun under my nose. He trussed me up, helped himself from the cash drawer. I watched him remove the mask when he reached the entry, unbutton his coat and slip his gun into his hip pocket. I must say he was pretty cool and matter-of-fact about it all."

It was the silver belt buckle that set Sheriff Kohr to thinking. There was only one man living anywhere around Shapleigh who would wear a silver belt buckle. That was young Clark Eldridge, Jake Eldridge's son. Jake owned the Triangle E, and Clark had graduated from the state university that spring and had come home to live with a lot of high ideas in his head.

Clark was sitting on the veranda reading a book when the sheriff drove up.

"Your pa home, sonny?"

"No one's home, but me. Why?"

"An' you ain't got nothin' to do but sit around readin' books, eh?"

"If it's any of your business, I'm reading up on law. Dad wants me to take a P.G. in law this fall."

"Git your coat, you're coming with me."

"What for?"

"You'll find out. Git your coat or I'll take hold of yuh."

Clark went into the house and came out again wearing his coat. "Has anything happened to my dad?" he asked.

Jim stared at him. Sight of the boy all dressed up gave him a new train of thought.

"No," he said, speaking less harshly, "your pa's all right, as far as I know." On the drive back to town, Kohr said: "The bank was robbed this noon. Cy Vesta's description of the man that done it fits you perfect."

"What? Why, I don't even know Cy Vesta. I never saw him in my life. Tom Hardy was in the bank when I went away."

"All the same, Cy described you pretty perfect."

"Pshaw!" said Clark, more amused than alarmed, "you're wasting your time with me, and mine, too."

Sheriff Kohr made no further comment. There was a multitude of thoughts running through his mind, among them the decision to have a talk with Jake Eldridge about this boy of his. It wasn't good for a boy to hang around home doing nothing but read books.

The bank had closed for the day when Sheriff Kohr and his companion reached town, but Cy Vesta's admitted them through a side door. The banker looked sharply at Clark.

"This looks like the chap who held you up, Cy?" Sheriff Kohr asked.

Vesta nodded without a moment's hesitation. "That's him. That's the suit he was wearing. I'd recognize it anywhere."

Clark Eldridge lighted a cigarette. "I suppose," he said, "you're Vesta, treasurer of the bank. And I suppose you're also accusing me of robbing your bank." He blew smoke through his nose. "Do you mind my telling you you're crazy as a loon!"

Vesta bristled. Sheriff Kohr said: "Hold on a minute, Cy. There's one or two more questions I want to ask. In your description of the bandit you said he wore a silver belt buckle. That's what made me suspicious of young Eldridge. He's the only dandy around here who would wear a silver belt buckle. Clark, unbutton your coat and let's see what you hold up your pants with."

Clark started to protest, then changed his mind. He unbuttoned his coat, revealing the silver belt buckle.

"That's it!" Vesta exclaimed exultantly. "I'd know it anywhere."

"Humm," said the sheriff. "That suit Clark's wearing is a double-breasted affair. You couldn't see the buckle 'less his coat was unbuttoned."

Vesta looked blank. "Well, what about it?"

"Nothin', except that you explained to me how the bandit paused in the entry to slip off his mask. You also said he unbuttoned his coat and slipped his gun in his pants pocket. Now if he unbuttoned his coat, he musta had it buttoned, and if he had it buttoned you couldn't o' seen the belt buckle. Which leads me to think, Vesta, you're a dirty liar and that you stole the money from your own bank and hatched up this story involving an innocent kid. Do you want to argue?"

Clark accompanied Sheriff Kohr and his prisoner to the jail. After Vesta was locked up, the officer said: "Clark, I'm coming out to talk to your pa one of these days about you. A kid like you shouldn't be sittin' around readin' an' nothin' more. Folks is apt to try an' make a sucker outter you."

Clark grinned. "Thanks, Sheriff. But be careful my dad or some one else, like Vesta, doesn't make a sucker out of you."

RECRUIT MUST TELL ALL

When a recruit is being examined for the army, he should not hesitate to tell the examining physician his whole medical history. Unfortunately, unless he has had some definite ailment or injury, he may fail to mention his "attacks of indigestion" which he has blamed on eating the wrong foods or eating when tired or excited. He may feel that if he makes mention of these trifling attacks, the examining physician may get the idea that he is malingering, "swinging the lead." The result is that within a few weeks or even months of army life, he is brought before a medical board and sent to hospital for observation and treatment.

By failing to tell of his attacks of indigestion or bringing a certified statement of these attacks from his physician to the army medical examiner, he may put the country to considerable expense and himself to much inconvenience.

I am writing this because a report from Dr. J. M. Smellie, in the British Lancet states that of 247 cases of indigestion reported in one division 131 had definite organic disease of the stomach and first part of small intestine (duodenum) and were discharged from the service as permanently unfit. The remaining 116, after investigation and a short course of treatment, were returned to duty. Dr. Smellie states that when it has been definitely learned that a soldier has ulcer he should be discharged from the army "and immediately returned to civilian life where rest, diet and tranquillity of mind are possible. Before enlistment these individuals were leading useful lives in the service of their country and should be returned to such service. In the army they remain a burden to themselves and to others."

Most physicians and physicians who have had much to do with "indigestion" cases in civil and army hospitals will agree with Dr. Smellie, that a chronic indigestion patient is a real liability.

The thought, then, is that family physicians and patients themselves should have no false sense of duty, but should state by certificate and in person if there is a history of acute attacks or chronic symptoms of indigestion present.

Keeping Abdominal Muscles Developed

As youngsters when we wanted to show one another how strong we were we tightened the upper arm muscle and the whole strength of the body was supposed to be in proportion to the size of our upper arm muscle.

I went with an older brother to see Sandow, the strong man, and my brother pointed out the ridges of muscles across the front of his abdomen.

"That's what shows the strength of a man," my brother told me. "If you see those ridges stand out, it shows the man is strong everywhere. Why, Sandow's abdominal muscles are so hard he uses them for a washboard!"

I believed this at the time and in a sense have always believed it, because the strength of the abdominal muscles has so much to do with the general health of the body, the proper working of the heart, lungs, stomach, liver, intestines. Well developed abdominal muscles give the body the proper posture—abdomen is drawn in, chest stands out, head is erect—thus enabling all the organs in chest and abdomen to have room to work.

A report from a European physician points out that actual disease of the organs in the abdomen can be caused or aggravated when the organs fall downward due to lack of support by the abdominal muscles. This falling down of the abdominal muscles is called ptosis. By examining 100 bodies in which these organs were down low, he found that the distance the organs had dropped was in proportion to the weakness or weight of abdominal muscles.

Now it is not difficult to keep the abdominal muscles developed sufficiently to hold organs in place. It requires just a little thought and a little exercise daily. At all times we should try to stand and sit erect; stand as tall as we can. The exercise is "trying" to touch the toes, keeping knees straight. The slightest bend of the knees puts the work on the legs.

QUESTION BOX

Q. Is Vitiligo curable? Does it grow progressively worse with time? Can you tell me what causes this ailment?

A. Cause of Vitiligo—white spots on skin—is unknown. Some recent cases have been traced to a chemical used in tanning leather so that a cure may be discovered. There is no known cure at present. Painting patches with coloring matter obtained from your druggist is all that can be done.

JESUS AFFIRMS HIS DEITY

GOLDEN TEXT—He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.—John 14:9.

"The Light of the World Is Jesus!" Who does not remember with what delight we as children sang, "Come to the light, 'tis shining for thee . . . The light of the world is Jesus."

How precious was the truth that thus flooded our souls. Jesus is the light. Just as the sunlight sheds its glory on an awakening world at dawn, so He sheds abroad the light of God in the hearts of men. As this portion of God's Holy Word is studied and taught, may the light break forth on many a soul caught in the bewilderment of this dark world.

But that is only one of the great thoughts around which our lesson centers. As Jesus here reveals Himself as divine, we consider four simple words, each fraught with rich meaning.

I. Light (v. 12).

The text says: "Then spake Jesus." When? Just after He had silenced the hypocritical accusers of a woman taken in sin, and had spoken the word of peace to her troubled soul. She was to "go and sin no more" because she had met Him who is the light of the world. They that follow Him "shall not walk in darkness"; they are the children of light, they have the very light of life shining in their hearts and lives.

Not only does Jesus light the believer's heart, but this light shines into all the dark corners of this wicked world, exposing sin and hypocrisy, and showing the way back to God.

II. Salvation (vv. 25-30).

"Who art thou?" That is the question every man must ask and answer as he considers Jesus. Even neglect is an answer—a rejection.

The answer of Christ in these verses goes to the very heart of the matter, for He takes the people right to the cross of Calvary. When they had crucified Him, they would know. Did not the centurion say: "Truly this was the Son of God" (Matt. 27:54)?

It is true today that no man knows Christ until he knows Him as the crucified Saviour. Teacher, Example, Guide—all these He is—but they are not enough, for we sinners need a Saviour. May many today follow the example of verse 30.

III. Freedom (vv. 31-36).

Free! Four letters, but what a depth of meaning! Chains have fallen off, prison doors are open. The one who was bound is free.

But here we are concerned with an even more important liberty, the freedom of the soul. Many there are who boast of their independence but who are naught but slaves. Jesus said: "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin" (v. 34), not its master.

How shall they be freed? Note three things in these verses:

(1) A condition, "If ye continue in my word." This means not only a profession of faith, but a daily appropriation and realization of His truth in life.

(2) A promise, "Ye shall know the truth." The philosophies of men profess to be a seeking after truth, but how few there are who look to the one place where it can be found—in Jesus Christ.

(3) A result, "The truth shall make you free." Truth always sets free. Men are enslaved because, as in some foreign lands, they have not had the opportunity to learn the truth or because they have rejected it.

Men profess to seek truth in their research and in the process of education, but without Christ they cannot have real truth. Educational systems which rule Him out are deficient and lead to bondage rather than freedom.

IV. Eternity (vv. 56-59).

Taking up their statement that they were Abraham's children (see vv. 33, 37), Jesus enters into the sharpest controversy with the unbelieving Jews of His entire earthly ministry. They were claiming kinship with a great man of faith who in his day had looked forward to the coming of Christ (v. 56). Now He was here, and instead of receiving Him as their Messiah they were ready to kill Him.

Not only did they claim Abraham as father, but also God. Jesus told them that in their sin and unbelief they were of their "father the devil." It is possible, then, to be very religious, to follow the traditions of one's fathers, and yet to be children of the devil.

All this led up to their sharp rebuke in verse 57, which denied to Christ anything but an earthly existence and which led Him to the statement of His eternity. He identified Himself definitely and clearly with the Eternal One—the great I AM of Exodus 3:14.

Christ is God, and is therefore "infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth" (Westminster Catechism).

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Prepare Now To Plant Spring Irish Potatoes

Every home should include enough Irish potatoes to adequately feed the farm family in 1943, says W. A. Ruffin Extension horticulturist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Mr. Ruffin offers these suggestions for planting Irish potatoes:

The soil should be of a sandy loam type if possible and be well fertilized. A 4-10-7 fertilizer should be used at the rate of two pounds for each pound of potatoes planted. Do not use stable manure for fertilizer at it causes potato scab. It is important that certified seed be used for planting purposes and the seed pieces should weigh approximately one ounce.

Plant potatoes in 3-foot rows 15 to 18 inches in the drill at the rate of three bushels to the one-fourth acre. Plant in February or early March.

A Letter From A Boy In Service

Chilton County News.
Clanton, Alabama

Dear Sir;

To the people of Chilton County, I plead for unity among all citizens, for in the years past we have been divided into two parties. I don't blame no one of sticking to their belief as long as it doesn't harm your friends. In war time like we are witnessing now forget our differences of opinion. On the battlefields over the world today we soldiers don't stop and ask our comrades what party or religeon they believe in, but we all work for one common goal, defeating the Axis forces. Since joining the Air Corps I have met boys from all parts of the world; and do I stop and ask them their beliefs? No. Do the Germans see a difference between their Axis Powers? Yes, because they want the world for their own gain. Have the Allies unified into one body? Yes. That was shown when President Roosevelt flew the Atlantic to join a conference with Prime Minister Churchill, and representatives from the other Allied Nations. Did he go for his health, for wealth, for fame, or for self gain No. He went for the common interest of all true God loving people, of which Chilton County is a part. So when Uncle Sam asks you to ration tea, sugar, gas, tires, amusements and buy War Bonds don't squak; but give the government one hundred per cent cooperation. Mothers are giving up their sons, and sons are giving up their liberties for the peace lovng world of tomorrow. I am wagering that Chilton County will do more than he share.

In closing I ask everyone to bow their heads for a word of prayer:

"Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, grant unto us this day such strength and courage in thy service on land, on sea and in the air, that we may faithfully defend and preserve the liberties and the lives of all thy dear children who are now suffering from unprovoked aggression and from unjust attack. May thy erly hand ever be over us! May Holy Spirit ever be with us, so we may quickly scatter those wh light in war; and may build a during peace founded upon thy laws and upon that unselfish will to all those who love justic peace which Thou has given un through Jesus Christ, thine only our Lord. Amen.

THE BULL THAT WILL NEVER GET TO AMERI

His name is Rajah of Oaklands. Last we heard of him, he was on the Island of Jersey, a little spot of land in the Channel between France and England.

He's a great bull and breeders over here wanted him. He probably would have been imported except that one day the devils that "Heil Hitler" gobbled up the Channel Islands. Where is the bull and the fine Jersey cattle? Fate unknown. And the people—everything that they have labored for is in the hands of a devouring Germany.

This story repeats itself again and again in the wake of Axis conquest.

We must remember it in the comin weeks and months in so many, man ways. One of the ways is by buying U. S. War Bonds.

You buy Bonds today for two impor tant reasons. First, to help your Government win this war. Second, to help yourself. For they are an investment that never depreciates in value. They increase in value every year up to maturity, when they pay a third more than original cost. And you can always cash them any time after sixty days if you want to. Buy Bonds—at your bank or post office.

CITY TRUCK TO PICK UP THOSE TIN CANS

Earl Gore stated Monday that the city truck would be around on Friday February 19th to pick up all of those tin cans that you have been saving for the War Effort. Al that you have to do is to cut the bottom out of the can, wash it clean, take the wrapper off and step on the can mashing it flat. Then place it with the others that you have been saving in a box and put the box out on the front so that it can be picked up easily and without a loss of time and effort.

Some have asked the question "What do you have to wash the cans for." Well, Uncle Sam wants the tin If the cans are left dirty or wet they soon rust. If they rust they are no good. Most of the value of the tin and steel in them are ruined. The least that you can do is to abide by the rules as set out by the Salvage Committee and follow their instructions Don't forget the date: Friday, Feb. 19th. A LETTER FROM SUPT. OF EDUCATION DELOS CULP

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY

Last week you read in your county papers some information about the recent ODT regulations of school busses. We are publishing elsewhere in this paper some questions that wil enable you to survey your own route for possible savings. We are going to try to use good judgement in making necessary changes, and we aree going to make as few changes as possible but we are forced to comply with regulations in order to get new certificates of war necessity. Without these certificates, we cannot run busses at all.

We realize that inconveniences wil result from the changes which wil have to be made, but this is a thing that was forced upon us by our enemies and we must accept it as such We appeal to you to aid us in this task and we know that we can depend on your aid.

Sincerely yours,
Delos P. Culp
Superintendent.

VETERAN FIGHTER PILOTS PAY RED CROSS TRIBUTE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A few of the accomplishmentsof the American Red Cross overseas were graphically told by two recent visitors to nationa headquarters, Major William James Daley, Amarillo, Tex., and Lt. Edwin Dale Taylor of Durant, Okla.

And these two fighter pilots of the U. S. Air Forces, on leave from England, should know. They served 18 months in the Royal Air Force before being transferred to the U. S Air Forces last September.

Lt. Taylor, who was wounded in one of 54 flights across the channel praised the Red Cross workers in a hospital. "I was receiving the best of medical care—but I was lonesome,' he said. "Then a Red Cross girl came to see me, bringing chocolates and American cigarettes. And we talked 'United States.' Boy, was I glad to see her!"

Major Daley, who has 130 flights over the Channel to his credit, was particularly enthusiastic about the American Red Cross Clubs abroad He sighted the facilities of the Red Cross Eagle Club which he knew before the Red Cross took it over. "I don't know what we would do without the Eagle and other Red Cross Clubs," he said.

The flying officers are devoting a part of their leave to preparations for the approaching War Fund campaign, and plan to make speeches and radio talks.

PEGGY MURRAH — ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY FRIEND

Peggy Lou Murrah was accidently shot Monday afternoon when she and a playmate were looking in an old trunk for material to make dol clothes and they came across a pisto which they decided to investigate.

She was seriously wounded, the bullet going right through her neck, and fracturing the bone so that it was pressing on her spine, causing her to be paralized. She was rushed to the Central Alabama hospital for observation and upon the advice of the physician was removed to Birmingham for an operation. She was operated on Tuesday and latest reports are that she has a good chance of getting well.

Peggy, who is a daughter of Mr and Mrs. George Murrah, is only 12 years old, but she is a very brave little girl. She made this statement while she was being examined and her family was standing around her "Now Dady, don't you and mother worry about me, I'm going to be alright. Think about all those boys who are being shot everyday."

The Ramsey Blues were led by Flemming and Edgar The game was exciting with plenty of hard fought basketball. The game was close all the way through with Clanton in the lead by a small margin al of the time.

Remember Your Own Rationing Dates Say Grocers

Several local grocers have requested that we ask the general public to please remember when certain rationing numbers are good and amounts that can be bought on specified days Over and over again it seems the weary grocer trots to the telephone to answer any one of a half dozen questions about rationing tickets. This rationing is hard enough on the merchant without making his lot the harder by having to answer the same questions over and over again every day.

CIRCLE TWO MEETS

Circle Two of the Baptist Church met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. D. Rockett.

The meeting was called to order by the Circle chairman, Mrs. John T Ellis. The Hymn, "All Hail the Poweer of Jesus Name," was sung in unison. The Circle then repeated the watchword for the year.

"That all the kingdom of the earth may know that through the Lord even Thou only"—Isa 37:20.

The devotional was given by Mrs J. R. Mullins. The subject being "Building an Informed Constituency.'

Mrs. Ellis then gave four reasons why it is important to contribute to the Hundred Thousand Dollar Debt

Circle Two has been named for Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson Johnson who is a missionary to Brazil.

Mrs. Ellis gave a few current topics on China.

Several Circle members offered to entertain soldiers in their homes when it could be conveniently arranged.

There were 13 members present.

After a prayer by Mrs. A. C. Smith the meeting adjourned.

Circle Two will have charge of the program at the church Monday afternoon, Feb. 15th.—Mrs. A. D. Martin Secretary.

Rationing News

Why shoes are rationed—

War time demands for leather and man power have slowed down the production of civilian shoes.

Sharing our limited supply is the only way we can make sure that everyone in America will have enough shoes to protect health and safety.

Rationed sharing means shoes for everyone, not just for those who get there first with extra time to shop and extra cash to spend.

What shoes are rationed—

Ration Order No 17 covers unused shoes made in whole or in part of leather or with rubber soles, including all ordinary types and hard-soled moccasins, casua,l play, platform and rubber-soled athletic shoes.

What shoes are not rationed—

1, Water Proff Rubber Foot wear including rubber articts, lumberman's overs, gaiters, work, storm and dress rubbers, clog and toe rubbers. (Ration Order No. 6 already covers six types of men's rubber boots and rubber work shoes.)

2, Soft and hard soles house and boudoir slippers, including scuffs mules, D'orsays, romeos, operas, softsoles moccasins.

3, Soft-soled infants shoes and ballet slippers.

Note: Shoe repairs are not rationed.

The regular ration—

Stamp No. 17 from War Ration Book One entitles a customer to buy one pair of shoes during the period beginning Tuesday, February 9, and ending June 15, 1943. Other war ration stamps will be designated later for periods of time specified by the Office of Price Administration.

Stamp 17 may be used by or for the person to whom issued or by or for a member of his immediate family who is related by blood, marriage or adoption and who lives in the same household. It must be detached from the book in the presence of the retailer, or his agent, except in mai order, when it may be detached and sent with the mail order.

A consumer who does not have a valid shoe stamp and who cannot get a War Ration Stamp from any member of his family and who would suffer hardship if unable to buy a pair of shoes, may apply to his local Board for a special Shoe Stamp or Certificate.

COOPERATIVE RATIONING

When any country finds it necessary to fight a defensive war such as we are fighting now, it often becomes necessary to ask the people to do things that are unusual and very inconvenient. Under circumstances such as we are facing now the government believes that the end justifies the means used to obtain the desired results.

When the government asks you through the local rationing board to do, or not to do a thing, please remember it is not the local rationing board just trying to be petty and unaccommodating. The local board is trying to do its duty as it sees it. We all resent having to give up our comforts, and conveniences, but if we are to win this war we must put our best into it. Those of us who understand the principles of rationing, and the importance of cooperation, are expected to take the lead in setting examples for some who do not understand so well.

If you think you are having a hard time and being inconvenienced, just read the article in last Sunday's paper by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker in which he tells of what our boys are experiencing on the real fighting front of the Pacific Ocean.

Your cooperation with and consideration of your local rationing board and its problems is always much appreciated.

Nazi Submarine Menace Is Allies' Chief Problem

Pre-Fabricated U-Boats Said to Boost German Output; 'Vanishing Luftwaffe' Puzzles United Nations' Military Observers.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W. Washington, D. C.

"It will be a long and bitter war." That was the remark of the Australian minister of defense in a recent interview. Two days later, I heard a general, who had visited many fronts, make a similar statement. You have heard the same prediction made from dozens of officials. And the strange thing is, it is usually preceded with an account of Allied successes. Nothing but a "but" stands between the enumeration of victories achieved and the prediction of the long, hard road ahead.

Since this perplexed me, I tried to get a concrete answer from various persons as to just what lies on the long, hard road. Out of the answers, two obstacles stand out, the submarine and the story of the "vanishing Luftwaffe." Only recently has it been definitely revealed that the enemy's greatest and most effective weapon is the submarine. For a long time, the British permitted only the most general statements regarding the sinking of Allied or even neutral ships by U-boats. Lately, because it was realized that the people were in ignorance of the extent of this menace, more detailed statements have been made, although still no figures are given out.

We know that America is building ships faster than American ships are being sunk. We know that the margin between launchings and sinkings is very narrow. And we know that launchings alone do not really balance sinkings hull for hull because the enemy sinks loaded ships—valuable cargoes are destroyed—trained men not easily or immediately replaceable are killed or at least taken out of action for long periods—gaps are left in the war effort with each lost cargo.

When I was in Berlin covering the outbreak of the European war in 1939, I heard a great deal of talk about Germany's counter-blockade, how the Nazis could fill seas with their U-boats. There was much talk of the great numbers which could be produced by the American method of the assembly line. I had no idea how much truth there was in those statements. Then in the months that followed, not much was said about the U-boats. For a period when they were operating on our coasts, America was conscious of their presence but when they were driven out of sight of our shores, they were driven out of mind as well.

Nazi Boasts Largely Confirmed

Now we learn how great their depredations are on the shipping lanes where they converge in the eastern Atlantic, confirming to some degree the German boasts which are sounding again. It is stated by British naval observers that the Germans are pre-fabricating the subs, making the parts in factories scattered all over the Reich and assembling them in great underground caverns hewn out of the rock or covered with concrete on the shores of the Bay of Biscay in France.

Therein lies a clear and simple explanation of the Allies' greatest problem, the chief obstacle on the "long, hard road."

The second obstacle may be a fancied one but it is real in the minds of many. The unknown is usually more terrible than the known and perhaps this one is at least partly a myth but no hard-headed realist can afford to underestimate the enemy's potentialities.

Those who believe this "obstacle" exists, say it is hidden behind the mystery of "the vanishing Luftwaffe."

According to military men, there are at present very few German planes on the Russian front. I heard a recent estimate of one-seventh as many as a year ago.

There are not many German planes over Africa—the Allies have at least achieved parity in air power. Where is the German Luftwaffe? Its presence darkened the skies of Europe once—has it really vanished? Been used up? Worn out? The factories which turn out replacements all destroyed by Allied bombers? Is its necessary fuel and lubrication exhausted? Some people think that this, at least to a large degree, is true. But that explanation does not seem reasonable.

• • •

German Advances In Synthetic Gas

We know that Germany has made remarkable advances in the manufacture of synthetic gasoline and oils. We know that some oil has been retrieved from the Maikop oil fields in Russia, new ones developed in Austria.

If Germany is not yet starved of gasoline and lubricants, if the Luftwaffe has not really disappeared from the earth, its absence from the air may have another meaning. We know that in spite of the heavy German losses in men and material in Russia, Germany still has a large and powerful army. Possibly over 300 fully equipped divisions—trained men.

It is estimated that aside from soldiers engaged in Russia and North Africa, the garrisons in the occupied countries, there must be a striking mobile army of a million men and more. Of course, these are estimates but they are not overestimates. And besides this army there is the "vanished Luftwaffe." The assumption is that this great army like the airforce is resting, conserving and building up its strength for one of two things: either a long, last stand defense of the borders of the Reich or one more powerful offensive.

Meanwhile, we know that every day that Japan is allowed to occupy the rich possessions of her stolen empire, she is nearer to the exploitation of their resources, the development of which will make her stronger. And every day she is left undisturbed by a major attack, she is able to increase her fortifications, wear down the Chinese and spread her "silver bullets" among the less loyal war-lord followers on the fringe of Chiang Kai-shek's central army.

There are two factors which make the road ahead a hard one—the present successful operation and the rapid replacement of the German submarine flotilla and the probability that Germany is holding back a powerful army and air force either for another telling blow or to defend its strongly fortified terrain.

Ideologies— Put Them on Ice?

As I go wandering round the town taking a look in every quarter—with apologies to Wan-Eyed Reilly—I have acquired data in the last few days that have convinced me that we will have to expunge the word ideology from the bright lexicon of war, if we are going to win.

I have observed three places where the ideologies have gotten in and done more damage than a buffalo moth in an overstuffed sofa.

Of course in North Africa—it may be the climate or the rainy season—ideologies have done some of their most devastating work. I have conversed with an army officer, an official, who knows that terrain and also what it produces, a newspaper philosopher and a radical—all of them look at the situation on the shores of the Mediterranean a little differently. The official explains that the politics are very important—the radical, happy over the success against all Fascists, but infuriated over using them even to help defeat themselves, shouts—"We should have shot Darlan the day after he served his purpose." "Well," remarks the official, "somebody did, didn't they?" The army officer calls the whole controversy a backyard row that will be forgotten as ground dries up and the Allies get a few victories.

He said: "You have heard that one thing that greatly improved the morale in the Russian army was making the officers supreme and removing the authority of the commissars which were originally placed at their elbows. You know the Russian officers could make no move without the okay of the commissar and yet the officer was responsible if anything went wrong. Now, the officer has the final word—many of the former commissars who had military training have become officers.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The Swedish Labor federation reports that the number of strikes, and workers involved, during 1942, was the lowest ever recorded. Only 34 strikes, with some 1,922 workers involved, were reported. The number of lost working days totaled 94,000. Only three times before in the history of Sweden's labor, have there been a less number of working days lost through strikes.

Feed grain supplies are 12 per cent larger, hay supplies are 9 per cent larger, and supplies of grain and hay per animal on farms are somewhat larger than they were this time last year.

WHAT SAVINGS CAN YOU MAKE ON YOUR SCHOOL BUS ROUTES

The three questions printed below will give you an opportunity to help keep school busses operating through the war emergency. If you will read these questions carefully and score yourself on them by writing "Yes" or "No" in the proper blanks, you will be able to discover possible savings that you can help the bus driver make on your route. It may seem that the elimination of a stop is a small thing but stops and starts wear the bus and tires rapidly, and every stop that can be cut out will count. All the stops that can be saved in the county will amount to a worthwhile saving. The same is true of stops on hills and miles that are driven on spur routes

1. (a) Does the bus stop and start on a hill to pick up your children?

Yes _____ No _____

(b) If answer to above question is "Yes", are you willing to tell the bus driver to stop at the top of the hill or go on to the bottom of the hill to stop, whichever is nearer to your house?

Yes _____ No _____

2. (a) Does the bus stop within two-lengths of a mile from your house to pick up other children?

Yes _____ No _____

(b) If answer is "Yes", will you agree with your neighbors to gather at one stop to board the bus?

Yes _____ No _____

3. (a) Does the bus leave the main road and go out a spur road for your children where they would have to walk less than 1 and 1-2 miles to catch the bus on the main road?

Yes _____ No _____

(note: A "spur" road is one where the bus retraces morning and evening).

(b) If answer is "Yes", are you willing to tell your driver to stop making the trips over the spur road and agree to meet the bus on the main road?

Yes _____ No _____

The miles that are driven on spur routes count up rapidly. The total distance travelled daily by a bus on a spur is four times the actual length of the spur route, because the bus travels that section of the route four times each day.

Thus, if a bus leaves the main road anl goes one mile on a spur route to get a child, or children, it travels 4 miles a day on that one mile road. In addition to the miles travelled, the bus must be turned around twice a day. These conditions have caused ODT to order all spurs cut off where children would have to wolk less than 1 1-2 miles to get to the main bus route from their homes. On those spur routes where children would have to walk more than 1 1-2 miles to catch the bus, busses can continue to go over those spurs that are now in operation, but no new spur routes can be established.

Beginning next Monday, Feb. 15th all bus drivers will be asked to eliminate all stops that can be saved. No stops can be made closer than one-tenth of a mile from each other and it is asked that this distance be increased to two-tenths voluntary.

Before March 1, the school authorities mus submit proof to ODT that the savings covered in the questions above, along with other savings mentioned last week have been made. Do your part in this war emergency by helping school authorities work out every possible saving. We must keep our busses going through this war period, and to do that we must use them as little as possible.

Next week a brief summary of the results of the route reorganization program will be published in this paper.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the kind deeds and help rendered to us by the people of Fairview, Pleasant Grove and Temple Church community during the sickness and death of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Blonnie Henley.

THE FAMILY

What's Doing At Isabella High

The Chapel program last week was a "Truth or Consequences" quiz and was in charge of the Jr. III class. Some of the questions were on timely topics, others on history, and general things of interest. Several students were selected from the audience, each class being represented. Dorothy Williams acted as quizmistress. She was assisted by Elizabeth Jones and Kathleen Rasberry.

The FFA met at the regular time last week. The only business was that of deciding a time to have a weiner roast for the chapter. It was decided that the outing would be on Wednesday of this week.

After the business was attended to the new national F. F. A. Constitution with its new changes was read by Vice President Jesse Culp.

Maplesville handed us a surprise defeat last Friday afternoon on their court, 29-19. Three times Isabella had beaten them this season, then they came from behind to grab the glory Oh well, the defeats will come.

Here is Isabella's basketball schedule for the remainder of this season
Feb. 12 - Jemison Independents and Thomas Jr. High vs. B team.
Feb. 19 - Verbena at Isabella.
Feb. 26. - open.

The Isabella 4-H Club held its 2nd meeting last week ...Two former students, Helen Durbin Atkinson and Naomi Culp, visited school this week ....We wish to welcome Mr. Roy Hearty as a new bus driver at Isabella. Roy has taken over bus no. 12 formerly driven by Melvin Devaughn ...The Jrs. have already selected their play for this year. It is a three act comedy entitled "Romance In A Boarding House." Don't miss this funniest of the funny. Watch for further announcements.

SOLDIERS ... ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

TRANSPORTATION is the backbone of any military effort. A No. 1 soldier, faithfully serving the nation's greatest war effort, is the man in the blue-grey uniform, the man most travelers know and admire ... your Greyhound driver.

His job today of keeping military and essential civilian travelers on the move is no easy one, but he tackles it with eagerness and efficiency. Just watch his easy handling of the ever-growing, ever-crowding travel picture ... his generalship, his untiring courtesy, his all-round ability to meet today's complex travel conditions. You can bet it takes a lot of basic training and schooled experience to turn out a veteran like that.

Greyhound is mighty proud of its men at the wheel ... soldiers on America's Transportation Front. They're doing their part in winning the war.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Point Rationing Scheduled for March 1; Solomons Fit Into Jap 'Empire Plan' But U. S. Armed Forces Will Not Agree; Treasury Favors Pay-as-You-Go Tax

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RATIONING:
New Date Set

Office of Price Administration officials have established March 1 (or a few days later) as the beginning of nation-wide rationing of canned and frozen foods on a point basis. As announced several weeks ago these goods include canned, bottled, and frozen fruits and vegetables, soups, juices, chili sauce, catsup and dried fruits.

Retail sales of these items will be stopped on February 21 and during the eight days following that date a country-wide schoolhouse registration will be conducted for the distribution of ration book No. 2. Blue stamps in this book will be used for the canned goods rationing and the red stamps for meat rationing. (Meat rationing is at present scheduled to begin about April 1, although this may be changed.) Further details of the registration for book two and its use are to be announced by local OPA offices.

One member of each family may register for the entire household for ration book two. Book No. 1 must be presented at the time of registration and "excess" canned goods on hand as of February 21 must be declared. OPA has previously ruled that each member of the household may have five cans of eight ounces or larger on hand at the time of registration and still escape having coupons removed from the new book.

OTHER RATION DATES

Feb. 20—Expiration date for Period 3 fuel-oil coupons which became valid Dec. 23.

Feb. 28—Final date for first inspection of tires for "B" or "C" passenger car card holders and for commercial vehicles.

March 13—Period 5 fuel-oil coupons, good to Sept. 30, become valid.

March 15—Last valid date for No. 11 sugar coupons, good for three pounds.

March 31—Final date for first inspection of passenger car tires for "A" card holders and motorcycles.

April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.

STRANGE QUESTION:
From the Nazis

"Where is the place you surrender?"

This was a strange question indeed for the once-proud Nazi soldiers before Stalingrad to be asking the Russians, but it was what the Reds reported their enemies were asking as they continued to flock in —victims of the relentless Soviet drive to free the once-besieged Volga city.

Dispatches described the condition of the Nazis as "cold, unshaven, and distraught." But the citizens of Stalingrad wasted little pity on their captives. Too well they remembered the long days and nights that the Nazis pounded and ruined their city with bombs and shells.

In a single day 16 generals and a field marshal (Frederich Paulus, chief Nazi army official in the area) were surrendered along with hundreds of other smaller fry. Even the German radio admitted that these losses at Stalingrad were among the most serious of the entire war.

Elsewhere the Russians continued to gain ground or at least hold their recent gains. In the Leningrad sector the "escape corridor" before the city was widened and in the Caucasus the drive for Rostov strengthened as new thrusts on the middle sector headed fresh for Kursk and Kharkov.

WAR NEAR CLIMAX:
Says Finn President

In a statement slanted for the United Nations, President Risto Ryti told his Finnish parliament that "the war is approaching a culmination point," and expressed hope that "the Allies will understand Finland's position," dispatches from Helsinki reported. The dispatches said that Ryti did not mention Germany, Finland's ally in the war against Russia.

PACIFIC TOUR:
And Jap Bombs

Returning from a 20,000-mile trip to the Pacific front, during which time he was twice under Japanese air attack, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told United States newsmen that "I think there are darn good prospects of an air attack on Tokyo." Knox was accompanied by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, and Adm. William F. Halsey Jr., commander in the South Pacific.

SOLOMONS:
Japs Try Again

The importance of the Solomon Islands in Japan's scheme for an expanded empire was forcibly demonstrated again when the navy announced another major Jap effort to retake the islands.

Even the earliest communiques announced that American forces engaged the enemy in what may be the greatest air-sea battle of the Pacific to date.

A U. S. marine looks over a handful of bones—all that is left of a Japanese warrior to whom fate had given a one-way ticket to Guadalcanal. The new Jap drive on that area indicates its importance to the enemy's grand strategy.

Exaggerated Japanese claims of United States losses were spiked early by a navy spokesman, who added that "increased activity on the part of the Japanese indicates a major effort to regain control of the entire Solomons area."

One communique, making no reference to the Jap assault, said an American destroyer had shelled a number of barges at enemy-held Cape Esperance, on the northern tip of Guadalcanal. Those barges might have been used in new landings or in coastal troop movements by a desperate enemy.

A week before the outbreak of the battle Navy Secretary Frank Knox described the American hold on Guadalcanal as secure, predicting that the remnants of organized Jap resistance would be wiped out in 30 days. The United Nations were hopeful but not all were convinced.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO:
Treasury Style

Flatly opposing the Ruml plan to skip payment of last year's income tax, the U. S. treasury department has nevertheless come out in favor of the enactment of a pay-as-you-go withholding tax set-up. As presented to the house ways and means committee by Randolph E. Paul, treasury general counsel, this plan would provide for the withholding of 19 per cent of pay checks (after deductions). This would be in addition to the 5 per cent victory tax, already in effect.

Tentative Exemption Schedule

If the treasury 19 per cent withholding tax plan is carried out some schedule of deductions to allow for dependency, etc., would have to be set up to simplify computation of the tax. Here is a tentative weekly exemption schedule which has been suggested:

Single Person	$11.00
Married Person	26.00
Additional Dependent	8.00

The Victory tax of 5 per cent would also still have to be paid. Deductions for this are a non-dependency basis, allowing a flat $12 per week exemption.

Stressing the need of prompt action by congress, Paul said that the 19 per cent withholding tax would be equivalent to the 1942 6 per cent normal tax and 13 per cent surtax on the first bracket, and would simplify collection and unnecessary refunds. By the "first bracket" he meant the first $2,000 of taxable income after deductions.

It was indicated that while the treasury did not believe last year's income taxes should be "forgiven" if the new plan is put into effect, the government would admit that these taxes should be deferred and paid up gradually rather than doubling up this year.

WAR BOND SALES:
Hit New High

Last month, the treasury has announced, war bond sales totaled $1,240,444,000 to set an all-time monthly record. Previous high month was January, 1942, when sales touched $1,060,546,000 in the first full month of bond sales after the beginning of the war. Total sales since the introduction of War Bonds in May, 1941, amount to $12,934,611,000. Of this amount, 98 per cent are still held by their purchasers.

WAR JOB OR DRAFT:
Fathers Told

Get a war job or be drafted!

With that notice the selective service bureau lifted the ban on drafting fathers by abolishing deferments on April 1 "regardless of dependents" for men in a selected list of occupations and trades.

The order, announced by War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt, was the first move to draft married men with children into the armed services.

In Washington, McNutt told the house military affairs committee that "by the end of this year 10 out of every 14 of the able-bodied men between 18 and 38 will be in the armed services.

Only the physically handicapped and those over 37 years of age in the jobs listed in the order to local draft boards will be deferrable after April 1. The jobs listed were for men engaged in 29 occupations or employed in 19 industries, eight wholesale and retail trades and nine service activities.

Thousands of men affected will be given until May 1 to shift to an occupation essential to the war effort—occupations previously listed by the WMC. The edict amounts to a "work-in-the-right-industry-or-fight" order, although McNutt declined to call it that. The 30-day period of grace (between April 1 and May 1) given to those seeking transfers will apply only to those who have registered with the U. S. Employment Service for war jobs.

TURKEY:
Renewed Pact

The British-Turkish military alliance of 1939 once again became a document of major importance as England's Winston Churchill and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey met near Adana to agree on "positive implementation" of the pact.

The alliance called for active military co-operation if the war moved to the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Close observers, using more ordinary language, indicated that the success of the parley means Turkey's entrance into the war on the side of the United Nations. The fact that Turkey made public the details of the two-day meeting added significance to the occasion. As a neutral she could have insisted upon secrecy.

The Turkish communique referred to the fact that Churchill came to Turkey from his meeting with Mr. Roosevelt at Casablanca and "could speak freely" on the President's views.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Churchill said:

"It is clear that the ancient friendship between Great Britain and Turkey . . . has been revived."

MISCELLANY:

MILKING: As part of the program to supply American farms with badly needed labor to assure record food production, federal authorities and the University of Wisconsin are co-operating in training young men of 16 and 17 years of age for work on dairy farms. The youths are recruited from low producing farms by the federal employment service and the Farm Security administration and given a five-week education in modern dairy methods.

MINERS: Backed by 450,000 members, John L. Lewis will seek "substantial" pay raises for the United Mine Workers in the bituminous fields when negotiations get under way with operators in March. Although the government's policy in these matters has been established by the War Labor Board's formula for increasing wages at a rate equal to the rise in cost of living since 1941, it is reported Lewis and the miners will seek a "$2 a day boost." This amount is in excess of the 15 per cent the board figures represents the per cent of increase in cost of living since 1941.

SACRIFICE: Speaking before a throng of aircraft workers in California, Eddie Rickenbacker declared that no effort being made at home could begin to compare with the heroic sacrifices of American troops throughout the world. Rickenbacker has also stated that the American soldier returning from the front lines will be the most rugged of individuals and will not tolerate regimentation.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A FEW years ago a radio producer, an actress and an actor formed a trio to produce and act in a series of transcriptions called "Story of Martha Blair." Results: the producer married the actress, who became famous on the stage and screen. The actor made a name for himself in the movies, as well as on the air. The director stepped right ahead also. He's Carlton Alsop, producer of radio's "Abie's Irish Rose," now transcribing 15 quarter-hour programs for the Red Cross. She's Martha Scott, who did one of them with the young actor. He's Joseph Cotten, star of the new Hitchcock thriller, "Shadow of a Doubt."

Jeanette MacDonald has no sympathy for these stars who regard service-camp entertainment tours as a hardship; she thinks they're fun. But at 14 she was dancing in a Broadway revue, taking singing and ballet lessons between times, and modeling fur coats to pay for the extra lessons. She says that an army camp tour is just a vacation by comparison.

Since fire destroyed Bing Crosby's home thousands of people have offered to replace his losses. One offered a complete collection of Bing's records; an army sergeant said every time Bing smoked a pipe in a picture he'd bought one just like it, and offered the singer his choice. If you're concerned about what sort of gift to send a friend or relative in one of Uncle Sam's branches of the services, your worries are over. If he smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own, the answer is a pound of tobacco. Numerous surveys made among soldiers, sailors, marines, and Coast Guardsmen show that tobacco ranks first on his gift list. Local tobacco dealers are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for service men. Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco, is a big favorite among many men in the service. —Adv.

WHO'S NEWS This Week

By Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Having shown how to draft the weather for the duration of this biggest war, F. N. Reichelderfer is tendered a nice plum: At its recent annual dinner in New York the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences handed him the Losey Sword for outstanding contributions to the science of meteorology.

He Holds Weather As Important as Terrain in War

Weather is war's most uncertain factor. Not even the great captains from Belisarius on to Stonewall Jackson (and Timoshenko) could win if it blew too hard against them. And it is the belief of Reichelderfer that tacticians take it too little into account. Chief, now, of the United States weather bureau, he would have a weather forecaster with every naval and military unit on its own. There aren't enough military forecasters for this, yet, but Reichelderfer is buttonholing all the generals and admirals.

Forty-seven years old, the bureau chief is sharp-nosed, lean, baldish and square-chinned. By the time he had a science degree from Northwestern university he was sure weather was his dish, and he did extra studying in Norway. The navy got him in 1918 and for 20 years he was about its most weatherwise officer . . . aviator, aerologist and finally commander. He spent a lot of time at the naval air station in Lakehurst, N. J., until he quit the service for the bureau.

He is married and has a son. After years of wisecracks from disappointed picnickers he understands the risks of prophecy. "I doubt," he said a while back, "if many know how brave the weather forecaster is who steps up to a survey map and makes a forecast for tomorrow." When the fate of a battle hangs on the forecast you can bet your bottom dollar he is brave.

THERE is a little (well, not too big!) smoke-filled (sometimes) room off the senate chamber in Washington where politicians are gathering this year as they have these ten past. So far, however, no one has charged against it the sinister schemes layed to the traditional smoke-filled little room where politicians gather. It is the office of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, just confirmed as secretary of the senate for his tenth term.

Lawmakers Check Shooting Irons at Col. Halsey's Door

A senate secretary is supposed to tote up the senate's bills and see that they are paid, even to the bill for the polish put on the vice president's official automobile. He is supposed also to disburse salaries, supervise the printing of legislative bills and keep all records.

Colonel Halsey does these things but he also serves as a suave broad-shouldered steering committee of one for new members and as a friendly confident for new and old. He worked up to his present job from a bottom start. A page boy in 1897 when a senator-uncle beckoned him off a Virginia farm, he was a master of pages and an assistant sergeant-of-arms before reaching his present pleasant singularity.

Report has it that very neat interparty shennanigans are figured out in the colonel's office for it is a neutral ground on which Democrats and Republicans meet unarmed. About this, however, no outsider can say for sure because matters discussed there are not tipped off elsewhere. Except, perhaps, some innocent bit of senate history. The secretary carried a vast store of that between his ears. And, of course, the secretary's golf score. Like any golfer, he will talk of that till kingdom come.

ASTUTE is the word for Adolf Augustus Berle, assistant secretary of state, who plans in secret with aviation experts of the government on a post - war transport program. Most infant prodigies peter out about the time they bid their teachers good-by. But it isn't only in the telephone directory that A.A.B. continues to stand close to the top for all that he was a Harvard Phi Beta Kappa at 18 and had two more degrees when he could [illegible]. His best line is corporation finance but he steps over it readily.

Adolf Aug. Berle Child Prodigy Who Didn't Peter Out

Lately his out-of-bound activities have included a call to Italy to revolt; a prediction that this hemisphere will lead the world after the war, and a judicial suggestion that the world adopt a system of finance based upon our Federal Reserve system.

His photographs sometimes hint at an amiable superiority but this could be only the erudite abstraction of a man able to think up the profound thoughts that must lurk between the covers of books bearing titles like, "New Directions in the New World."

Serve Shrimp Casserole, Save Meat
(See Recipes Below)

Warm Welcome!

These are days when families are divided and diminished, and there comes the urge to say to the neighbor, come take "pot-luck" supper with us. Thus, your neighbor will bring over some salad and muffins and herself and the youngster, you can make a main dish and dessert, and have company with it besides!

It's heart-warming to visit, too, and have someone to help with the meal if your once-big family is somewhat reduced. Most people welcome a visit now and then with just one of the ordinary meals—and pot-luck is the perfect answer.

Your first must-not with pot-luck is do not fuss. Just get together on who is to bring what—and have what you ordinarily would have. Your plans need not be made with campaign-like precision, simply do it on the spur of the moment, since this makes for spontaneity.

Let's take it easy on meat with some grand casserole dishes—including this on shrimp and crabmeat with a crisp, corn-flake crust:

Baked Shrimp Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

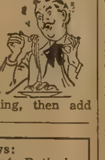
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup minced onion
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup cooked crabmeat, flaked
1 cup cooked shrimp, cleaned
1 cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
2 cups corn flakes
¼ cup butter

Combine all ingredients and mix well together. Place in individual shell dishes or one large casserole. Cover with crushed corn flakes, dot with butter, and sprinkle paprika over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 30 minutes. Serve with lemon.

Spaghetti's a fine dish to serve at pot luck. Should hamburger supplies be low, try some of Sunday's leftover chicken in the sauce:

Spaghetti With Chicken.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 8-ounce package spaghetti
1 onion, cut fine
1 small clove garlic
2 tablespoons fat
2½ cups cooked tomatoes
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
Dash of cayenne
1 cup diced, cooked chicken
¾ cup grated cheese
1 cup mushrooms, sauteed



Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and place in a greased casserole. Saute onion and garlic in hot fat until tender but do not brown. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper, sugar and cayenne. Heat to boiling, then add chicken, mushrooms, and pour over spaghetti. Toss with fork and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

*Recipe Given

For ease in serving, and ease on your budget serve your salad course with the hot bread and skip dessert! It's a smart and simple note in budget suppers:

Wilshire Salad.
(Serves 8)

1 head lettuce or romaine
4 slices pineapple
1 grapefruit, peeled and sectioned
1 red apple, sliced
¼ pound grapes, cleaned
1 orange peeled and sectioned
Mayonnaise

Line salad bowl with lettuce or romaine. Arrange fruit in an orderly but pretty pattern, alternating slices of pineapple with apple, and orange sections with grapefruit. Sprinkle halved grapes (seeded) over whole of bowl, or place clusters of grapes among other fruit. Serve with mayonnaise.

You can take the B-r-r-r- out of winter by serving a delicious hot bread that breaks open like a twink and when spread with butter is the answer to perfection!

Apple-Walnut Muffins.
(Makes 12 medium)

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons mild salad oil
1 cup raw, grated apple
½ cup broken walnut kernels

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Combine egg, milk and salad oil and add to flour mixture, stirring only until mixed. Fold in apple and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls into greased muffin tins, filling ⅔ full. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 20 to 30 minutes, according to the size of the muffins.

It's a pleasure to bring freshly baked bread to the table because it's a sign you have gone to the trouble of trying to make the meal as good as possible. You'll like the following nut bread both for table or lunch-box use.

If you're using this bread for the lunchbox, slice it thinly, spread with cream cheese, blended with apple sauce, or cream cheese with crisply fried, drained and crumbled bacon.

Brazil Nut Quick Bread.
(Makes 1 5-by-9-inch loaf)

3 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sugar
1 cup chopped Brazil nuts
1 egg
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift dry ingredients together, add nuts. Beat egg, add milk and shortening. Stir quickly into dry ingredients. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 1 hour.

Lynn Says:

No Waste, No Want: Rationing and decreased supplies of food have diminished our leftover problem, but not entirely done away with it. That's why I'm passing on these thoughts of what-to-do:

Use cooked meat or fish seasoned and moistened with cream in between the omelet. Vegetables, put through a sieve moistened with cream, butter or gravy are good, too.

Stewed tomatoes go together with scrambled eggs. Especially nice is a rating scrambled eggs get with minced tongue, chicken or ham. Use them if you only have a half a cupful.

Sweeten fruit juices with sugar and thicken with one tablespoon of cornstarch. Yes, mighty good on hot puddings—cottage, apple, or brown betty puddings!

JESUS HEALS A MAN BORN BLIND

LESSON TEXT—John 9:18-38
GOLDEN TEXT—"One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."—John 9:25.

The love of Christ is seen in its full beauty against the background of man's hatred and unbelief. Last week we saw Him coming away from the stones with which his enemies sought to kill him. As He passed by He had the time and the compassion to stop and help a man who had been born blind. His disciples, afflicted in some degree with the speculative tendencies of their time, saw in this blighted life only an illustration of a theological theory about sin.

But Jesus, by a loving and gracious act, stirred in the heart of the man that faith which caused him to obey—to go, to wash, and to see (v. 7). The enemies of Christ were not willing to believe even what they now saw to be true. Their stubborn unbelief shut the door to blessing for them, but the blind man received three things by faith:

I. Healing (vv. 18-23).

The argument with the man's parents hinged on one point—he had been healed of his blindness. The parents were unwilling to risk excommunication by discussing the matter, but they did know that he had been blind and now could see. That was clear.

An experience like that is impossible to deny. The healing of the soul of man in regeneration is also a stubborn fact which deniers of God's Word and God's grace are unable to meet and overcome. The one who was blind and now could see had no questions about the deity of Christ and His saving power. What is more, he was not afraid to testify. He could "speak for himself" (v. 21).

Note the difference between the three classes here: Blind and stubborn unbelief (v. 18), faith too fearful to speak (v. 22), and the assured faith of the one healed. That is our next point.

II. Assurance (vv. 24-34).

The appeal of the Jews in verse 24 based on their statement: "We know that this man is a sinner," reminds us that there is no knowledge so absolute (and so absolutely wrong) as that of ignorance backed by self-conceit.

They said they knew, but did not. The man had complete assurance by faith and by experience. He did not argue (v. 24), he simply restated his healing. "I was blind—now I see." When they evaded that reply (for they dared not meet it), he thrust deep with the convicting fact that God does not perform His miracles in response to the prayers of a wicked man. That was too much for them, and they cast him out.

Even as the stupidity and stubborn willful unbelief of our Lord's enemies grew step by step, so also did the healed man's assurance grow as he testified. First he called the Lord "a man called Jesus" (v. 11); then "a prophet" (v. 17), and then at last, "the Son of God" (vv. 35-38).

Standing true to Christ and speaking for Him means growth in faith, in knowledge and in grace. It may mean persecution and even exclusion, but remember that when the man was cast out by the haters of Christ, he met Christ. "His excommunication was a promotion. He went from the synagogue to the Saviour" (Scroggie). And that is our third point.

III. Fellowship (vv. 35-38).

He did not know Jesus. He had heard His voice, but he was blind then and had not seen Him. He probably did not know where to find Him. Then, too, he was now an outcast under the disfavor of the authorities, and even his friends would fear to be seen with him.

But Jesus sought him. Ah, that's the glorious difference between our Lord and those who look at the outward appearance of things. He went to find the man who now needed fellowship, instruction and encouragement.

He had sought the man out to heal him, now He sought him again to help him spiritually. We need to learn of our Lord that we are not to wait until the sin and suffering of men force themselves upon our attention and force us to do something. We are to go out into the highways and the hedges and urge sinners to come to Christ. We have failed in this. We have built churches and expected the people to come, instead of going where the people are, and bringing them the gospel. The war is teaching us some lessons in that connection, but we are none too quick to learn and to act.

There is a beautiful touch in verse 37. Dr. Maclaren points out that when speaking to the woman of Samaria, Jesus said: "I that speak unto thee am he," but to the man who had just begun to see He said: "Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that speaketh to thee." The Christ who gave sight, now gives Himself to be seen.

Hannon, deceased, are unknown to the plaintiff and can not be ascertained on diligent inquiry, which affidavit she annexes to her bill of complaint, setting forth that the names of such persons are unknown and that she has made diligent inquiry to ascertain the same, and that their residence, as she believes, is not in this State and which unknown heirs are made parties defendant to said cause, which seeks to quiet title against them in reference to any right, title, interest or claim in or incumberance on the Southeast quarter of Southeast quarter of Section 13, Township 21, Range 14, Chilton County, Alabama.

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in Chilton County, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring the said heirs of T. W. Hannon, deceased, to plead, answer or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 23rd day of February, 1943, or within 30 days thereafter, a decree pro confesso will be taken against them.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama this the 19th day of January, 1943.

THE RAM THAT KNOWS THE RATTLE OF MACHINE GU

We take great pride in our livestock, for we have some of the best to be found anywhere.

England also takes pride in its livestock. Many of our breeds of cattle, sheep and horses come from there.

We think farming has been hard this past season, with the shortage of labor and machinery. It has been harder elsewhere. In England, for example, feed is scarce, meats are needed badly by the people, and German airmen machine gun the farm animals in the fields every chance they get. We must remember this all the time—and buy War Bonds—all that we possibly can.

There are two good reasons for buying War Bonds. The first is that it will give our boys the guns and planes and tanks they must have. The second is that War Bonds are a sound investment. They never depreciate in value. They return a third more than the original cost in ten years. You can cash them if you need the money any time after sixty days. Buy Bonds now—to help your country and to help yourself —at your bank or post office.

GROCERY STORE OWNERS MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

The local rationing board is bringing to Clanton Friday night Feb. 19 1943, Miss Margaret Lynch from the State office of Price Administration to explain the point rationing program to the merchants of Clanton and Chilton County. These people have been trained by the state office of price administration and should be in position to give the information needed by the merchants to put this program into operation.

All merchants of the county handling rationed merchandise are urged to attend this meeting at the Court House Friday evening Feb. 19, 194. at 7:30 o'clock.

WALNUT CREEK

Preaching again Sunday morning and Sunday night. Remember the Sunday school hour before 11 o'clock preaching, and the Young People before the evening hour of preaching A good many people commented about Hitler's "Last Will' which we borrowed and gave the readers last week. And here are some more bequests which might be added in al seriousness:

"To the Jews, I leave my confession that I have merited the trice repeated curse of God—(I will curse him that curseth thee) for my murderous treatment of them.

"To the Bible, I leave my admission that my attempt to replace it with Mein Kampf has been a dismal failure. Offering a stone for bread and a scorpion for an egg (Luke 11:12) has proved my undoing.

"To God, I leave my acknowledgement that I substituted Woten, my god of war, for Thee. Now his two black ravens, Huginn (Thought) and Muninn (Memory) fly daily to bring me tidings of my complete defeat and of the triumph of right over might and of Christanity over paganism.

"To the Lord Jesus Christ, I leave my avowal that I endeavored to dismiss Thee by calling Thee a Jew whom I hated. Having made ersatz food clothing, gas and rubber, I vainly dreamed I could provide an ersatz Savior; but there is no substitute for Thy death, burial, and resurrection. Without Thee I have no forgiveness of sins, no peace, no satisfaction. And dying without Thee have no hope—nothing but the blackness forever."

—Rev. Reese Farnell.

Red Cross Call For Surgical Dressing

A letter has been received by the chairman of Surgical Dressings in the Red Cross work stating that 190,000,000 surgical dressings are needed according to the Surgeon General's Office. Mrs. Mary Will Browder, County Chairman of this work, says that in order to complete Chilton County's quota (which is 90,000 dressings not completed) she needs at least 15 women each day working in the Red Cross Room. If you have any idea of helping in [illegible] work, now is the time to do it! This is a real emergency and we must not fail. Please make this your special mission work for the next few weeks and help with this most urgent need of your country's.

CLANTON HIGH SCHOOL PLAYS LANIER POETS HERE FRI· NITE

JAMES FOSHEE, Reporter

The Clanton "Cagers" play Lanier Poets here this Friday night, Feb. 19. They are out to redeem themselves for the defeat the Poets handed them in Montgomery early in the season This game will prove the strength between the two teams. The Clanton Squad has only lost two games; one to Selma and the other to the Poets The Clanton team is a fast breaking team with plenty of expert sharpshooters. The two Smith boys, forwards, Kenneth Smith and All-State Paul Smith have proved to be very strong against their oponents. Buck Daniels, center, has taken over the job of playing spot and is doing it exceptionally well. Cost and Coggins a pair of guards, have played main parts in the Clanton squad; especially when it comes to checking a man close, these boys are ready. The Clanton team has proved to be very strong and are out to defend the State crown

The Clanton team goes to Birmingham Monday afternoon to play Ensley at 3:30 o'clock and Bessemer at 7:30 o'cock. They play Jemison High School on the local court next Tuesday night.

What's Doing At Isabella High

After once being defeated by them the Jemison Independents came back to defeat the Isabella Mustangs 32-21 last Friday afternoon.

From the start of the game, it appeared that the Jemison boys were in for another defeat. They were trailing at the end of the quarter 7-4 They were still apparently unable to meet the pace of the Mustangs at the half when they were still trailing 13-9

In the second half, however a number of things happened to pull Isabella apart. They were playing without their captain, and their alternate captain fouled out of the game. The Jemison boys stepped up their pace too and began to pull ahead in the scoring.

Hilyer was high point man for the winners. Conway led the losers in scoring.

The Juniors have decided to order their rings this year. Not long ago Mr. Chambers, the ring man was by and said that the ring materials were being frozen by the government and that it might be impossible to get them by next year. After talking it over among themselves and their parents, the class members decided to go ahead and order the rings this year.

Also, several members of the class expect to have to enter the Army as soon as school is out, and they wish to have something by which to remember their class and school days.

Mr. William [illegible] was again absent al [illegible] because of illness. Mrs Cobb took his place in school ... Naomi Culp, who joined the WAVES some [illegible] ago reported for training [illegible] week. ...Dorothy Williams, Jr. III student has sold $130.50 worth of War Bonds and stamps since the school drive started ... Next Friday, Feb. 19, Isabella plays Verbena High at Isabella .... The F.F.A. chapter had a weiner roast in the gym on Thursday night of last week.

The Biology Club entertained in chapel last week by holding a meeting on the stage. The cub president Mavorene Henley was in charge Featured on the program was an enjoyable piano solo by Mrs. Cobb. The program also contained string music, some facts on the club and on the habits of the beaver, and a comic sermon by William Henderson.

Clanton Chapter FFA Pledge Cooperation To War Effort

The Clanton Chapter Future Farmers of America has pledged its entire membership to full cooperation in winning the war.

At a recent meeting of the Chapter the agricultural production goals for Chilton County were presented and each member put himself on record as a one man committee to see that goals were met on his home farm.

Individual members volunteered to increase the following crops which might be classed as critical materials of war; peanuts, beef cattle, milk hogs, chickens for both eggs and meat, and home gardens. In addition to crop and livestock increases, the members are using their spare time to repair farm machinery and equipment.

FARMERS PART UNDER MEAT RESTRICTION ORDERS

Following is a letter [illegible] week by P. H. Smith, C[illegible] from the Office of Price Admi[illegible] [illegible] Restriction [illegible]

[illegible] assistance in exp[illegible] ers of your county [illegible] the Meat Re[illegible]

It seems that some farmers do not understand, if they can slaughter and eat the beef themselves, or can sell i on the hoof, why they cannot slaughter it and sell it to a store or other merchant. As I am sure you realize the future beef supply of our Army depends upon the number of cattl available. Consequently, each beef cattle which is slaughtered and sold for civilian consumption reduces by that much the supply available for Army use. I hope, therefore, that you can help us to get the farmers to understand our position and that any sale by them of meat in violation of the Meat Restriction Order hurts our Army and to that extent helps the Axis in the War.

Very truly yours,
Jack Crenshaw
State Attorney

February Bond Quota Lagging Says Judge L. H. Reynolds, Ch'm.

Dear Editor:

Our bond sales for December was a great success. But we are behind for February. However, I hope we wil get our quota before the end of the month.

Our boys have been making a desperate effort in the Solomons Islands and in Africa, and the appeal comes to us from both fronts for ammunition and guns to fight with. When our boys are given the orders to go forward, they cannot offer any excuses. Many of them are making the supreme sacrifice that we may continue to enjoy the wonderful priviledges that we now possess. I saw a picture in the Birmingham News the other day, where they were bringing the wounded and dying soldiers from Guadalcanal. I said that each soldier that was wounded and each one that had given his life represented some mother and father in the United [illegible]

[illegible] moment consider how [illegible] little sacrifices are [illegible]g compared wth the [illegible] our boys are making?

[illegible]en I look out on the streets of [illegible] on Saturday and see hun[illegible] of people enjoying freedom to [illegible] without fear, I won[illegible]alize fully the differ[illegible] our situation and in the coun[illegible] that are being bombed at this very moment

It is the courage and bravery of our boys, many of whom at this time are sacrificing their lives, that keeps us from [illegible]

Let's show them our appreciation and let's buy every dollar's worth of bonds that the Government asks us to, and let's help our boys get through with this war at the earliest moment possible.

Victorious Red Army Continues Drive As Nazi Winter Line Fails to Hold; Establishment of 48-Hour Work Week Expected to Release New Labor Supply

Carter, Secretary General of the Institute of Pacific Relations and Maj. Gen. Dai-Fung King, member of the Chinese military mission to the United States. This photo was taken at a Washington luncheon as the Institute of Pacific Relations met to celebrate the renunciation of extra territorial rights in China by the United States.

RUSSIA'S GAIN:
And the 'Experts'

When the Germans surrendered Kursk before the Russians captured Rostov the Red army again crossed up the military experts who for weeks had been predicting the opposite. But the fact that Kursk was the major anchor point on the Nazi winter line to fall only added to the importance of this strategic victory for Russia.

It is a city of 60,000 and a railway junction of vital importance to the Nazis. It was one of three points (Rostov and Kharkov were the other two) which the German radio once said must be held at any price "of German blood." Germany had held the town since November 11, 1941, and its loss meant that the Russians had breached the Nazi winter line running from Bryansk, Orel and Kursk to Kharkov, Voroshilovgrad and Rostov.

Fall of the latter point meant the entrapment of the entire Nazi force in the Caucasus but even the Russians admitted that some of the 200,000 soldiers caught there were escaping across the Kerch peninsula and through Rostov itself.

All along the line the advancing Russians gained mile after mile and with the territory gained vast quantities of military supplies and hundreds of Nazi and Rumanian prisoners.

48-HOUR WEEK:
For Industry

Approximately 1,500,000 men and women ultimately are expected to be released for more essential work as the result of President Roosevelt's order establishing a minimum wartime work week of 48 hours.

The order, which coincided with a warning by James F. Byrnes, director of economic stabilization, that the government intends to hold wages and prices at present levels, made it clear that workers will be paid for all hours over 40 at time and a half, as provided by the Fair Labor Standards act. The initial order took effect immediately in 32 designated "labor shortage" areas. The order will be extended from time to time.

The shift to the 48-hour work week by employers now working on a shorter week would result in the necessity of releasing certain numbers of workers. These workers will be used in other vital jobs.

Stern Program

In his speech, OES Director Byrnes explained the 48-hour week ruling and listed the following program which the government intends to follow:

1. No further increase in hourly wage rates beyond those allowed by the Little Steel formula, which permits a 15 per cent rise since January 1, 1941.
2. Draft of civilians for jobs where they can do the most good.
3. Effective control of food prices and other prices influencing the basic cost of living.
4. Incentive payments to farmers to increase basic food production.
5. Higher taxes to close the estimated 16 billion dollar gap between consumer income and available goods.

NORTH AFRICA:
New Air Blows

American air forces continued to strike telling blows at Axis North African supply and communications lines while neutral dispatches reported hectic preparations for a gigantic Allied offensive in Tunisia.

U. S. bombers, lashing at Marshal Rommel's forces, blasted the airdrome at Gabes and the docks at Sousse, starting heavy fires among buildings.

Dispatches from Algiers said the Allies were expected to strike from the west at the moment Lieut. Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army resumed its pursuit in force of the Africa Corps. The Eighth army was said to be poised along the Tripolitanian - Tunisian frontier, with forward elements reaching within eight miles of the Mareth line, inside Tunisia.

It was believed the Allied pincers movement was being held for better weather or until all preparations were definitely complete.

GUADALCANAL:
American Victory

When six months of bitter warfare ended with the Japanese evacuation of Guadalcanal island in the Solomons, the enemy's desperate, futile investment was estimated to have cost them 50,000 men, about 800 planes and a considerable fleet of ships.

For the first time the tenacious Japs were forced to give up an important position completely, thus paving the way — in the words of Navy Secretary Knox—for blows by the United States against "some of the most important bases of the Japanese." The enemy had relinquished hope for a stronghold there from which they could blast shipping lanes to Australia.

Knox expressed the opinion that widespread recent sea and air activity in the Solomons might have been "a demonstration to cover their withdrawal." He added that "The story of the Southwest Pacific would have been a vastly different story for the last three or four months had we not established our positions in the Solomons."

PANIC BUYING:
Held Unnecessary

As shoe rationing went into effect a wave of "panic buying" of clothing swept some parts of the country and immediate efforts were extended by government officials to halt this trend. Donald Nelson, War Production board chairman, and Prentiss Brown, price administrator, issued a joint statement pointing out that no shortage of clothing exists and no plans have been made for its rationing.

Part of the statement read: "WPB has not asked OPA to undertake rationing of clothing and no machinery has been set up for such a program . . . shoe rationing appears to have stimulated scare buying in some parts of the country . . . such buying is unnecessary."

Supplies of wool were said to be larger by several hundred million pounds than they were at the outbreak of the war.

LITTLE STEEL:
Formula Upheld

The War Labor board reaffirmed its determination to stabilize general wage rates at present levels when members stood by the Little Steel wage formula and denied higher pay for 180,000 employees of the "Big Four" meat packing companies.

Voting 7 to 4—the labor member dissenting—the board voted to prevent "another tragic race between prices and wages." The formula allows increases not to exceed 15 per cent since January 1, 1941. The three unions involved (CIO, AF of L and Independent) have asked increases of from 10 to 20 cents an hour, far in excess of the limit.

On the heels of the WLB decision came a warning from Patrick J. Gorman, secretary-treasurer of the AF of L meat cutters union, that sporadic strikes probably will result all over the country.

BATTLE FORECAST:
Over Labor Draft

There were plenty of predictions about a rough and tumble legislative battle over the draft-labor bill designed to allow the government to assign men between 18 and 65 and women between 18 and 50 to war jobs.

Now before the military affairs committees of the house and senate, the bill was introduced by Senator Austin (Rep., Vt.) and Representative Wadsworth (Rep., N. Y.) and is backed by the same group of legislators who supported the selective service act.

Controversy is expected to arise over problems of compulsory labor, migration of labor, expansion of the armed forces to 11,000,000 without relegating production to a very minor role and over a proposal made by some that all labor-draftees be given free choice as to whether or not they would join a union upon going into war industry.

THREE PAIRS:
If We're Lucky

Although initial plans calling for a ration of three pairs of shoes per year per person caused little consternation to the buying public, later developments indicated that new restrictions are not impossible. The OPA announced that "three-pairs-a-year ration must not be taken as a definite commitment by the OPA." So far the OPA has decreed only one pair of shoes may be purchased between now and June 15. What happens then depends upon production.

PAY MARCH 15:
That's for Sure

There was still plenty of confusion about what form the almost certain "pay-as-you-go" income tax would take but one fact stood crystal clear through all the conversation and controversy—income tax returns for 1942 must be filed by March 15 and at least one-quarter of the amount owed must be payed by that time. Taxpayers were warned about this by Randolph Paul, U. S. treasury general counsel, and by Harold D. Smith, director of the federal budget, as well as by members of the house ways and means committee, now giving consideration to the new tax plans.

Pictured here in his New York office is Beardsley Ruml, the man who made America "Pay-as-you-go" conscious. Mr. Ruml is treasurer of Macy's New York department store and is also chairman of the New York Federal Reserve bank. His plan calls for wiping out 1942 income taxes and paying on 1943 income in 1943.

These range all the way from the "Ruml plan," which would "forgive" all of the 1942 tax, to "no forgiveness" plans which would put income tax on a "pay-as-you-go" basis but would also collect the 1942 tax.

There was no organized resistance to the principle of pay-as-you-go income taxes but what method was to be used for collecting last year's payments troubled most thinkers on the subject. In the meantime, taxpayers were cautioned to be sure and file their returns.

PACIFIC CONTROL:

While indications continued to increase that the U. S. victory at Guadalcanal was just the first step in the broad strategy of the war against Japan, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox declared that negotiations should begin as soon as possible for naval bases with which we might control the entire Pacific after the war.

Answering questions asked by members of the house foreign affairs committee he agreed that it would be necessary to disarm Japan.

Peace Move?: Count Ciano's appointment as Italian ambassador to the Vatican might be the harbinger of Axis peace moves. Not only has the pope been known to be in support of feasible peace formulas but the Holy See remains one of the few neutral localities of Europe with a wide representation of diplomats from the Allied as well as Axis countries.

Red Tape: There has been talk that the War Labor board might decentralize its operations and vest final authority in all regional disputes in its regional units. The present practice of referring all regional decisions to the main office in Washington for approval has resulted in many delays, it is said, with subsequent dissatisfaction to employer and employee alike.

Changes Scheduled for Manpower Commission

English System Seen as Successful Model; McNutt Unable to Obtain Efficient and Experienced Force of Experts.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 622 Union Trust Bldg.
Washington, D. C.

Two days before the Office of War Information announced the now famous "work-or-fight order" I wrote:

Strange sounds are coming through the keyhole of the wide door of the office of the federal security administrator, Paul McNutt. They have nothing to do with federal security but they have a lot to do with that other function of the administrator, on whose broad shoulders rests heavily the chairmanship of the manpower commission.

The noises I refer to are the preliminaries to a bigger noise.

"The manpower commission is just about to blow up," said a certain official to me, one who has followed its operations very closely but because of some strange premonition refused to get entangled with them. He is entirely sympathetic with the effort but like others whose duties are affected by the ramifications of the manpower situation, he is chagrined and confused by what is happening and still more by what hasn't happened.

When the manpower situation was first turned over to McNutt, who is known as a good administrator, there was a long and patient wait for something to happen. Nothing did. "No wonder," said neutral observers, "he has no authority."

Then he got the authority by presidential ukase. Earlier, it is true, he had made it plain that he felt that there should be passed by congress, a national service act which would lay upon all civilians the similar obligations placed upon the young men of military age. So many people, who thoroughly disliked the idea of a draft of labor of any kind nevertheless declared such a step was inevitable that I was positive that it was coming and so reported. Now it seems far away.

The substitute was supposed to be the setup under McNutt which would work through the United States Employment service. Selective service was even made a part of McNutt's organization and General Hershey, who had seen that institution through from its inception, with better grace than many would have shown, accepted the subordination of his functions like the good soldier that he is.

More Authority

But many a week has passed since that step was taken, various directives have been sent to the draft boards, enlarging the scope of deferment for essential farm and industrial occupations. But still the system doesn't click. It is now reported that McNutt feels that he needs still more presidential authority conferred upon him.

It was thought when the last reorganization of the manpower agency was made that the United States Employment service would work side by side with the Selective service, the one recruiting labor, the other recruiting fighters and the question would be settled between them under a single head. Then, according to one of the members of the commission, without informing anyone in advance, he did what many feel was a direct violation of the key policy—turned over the question of deferment to the department of agriculture.

This is the step which those who opposed it feel is going to force a change in the setup once more. Administration of manpower recruitment was supposed to be centered in the commission.

Naturally members of the department of labor who felt that recruitment of workers should be handled by that agency, consider that no successful solution will be reached until the entire manpower question is put under a single person of cabinet rank and administered by that head right down to the local setups. They point to what has been done in England where the system seems to be working successfully under the British labor minister. A system has been worked out there where the local administration has wide authority under a firm general policy.

The reason why a similar plan was not followed here is possibly because of the feeling against Secretary of Labor Perkins. Too many people would object if the work were turned over to her and it was believed that the President was about to cut the Gordian knot when the plan was announced whereby Miss Perkins was to be transferred to the head of the Federal Security administration; McNutt would go to interior and Secretary of Interior Ickes would head the labor department.

Ickes' Refusal

That scheme fell through because Ickes didn't want to make the shift.

The result is that McNutt has been left to struggle with a problem for which some of his most sympathetic critics say he is not fitted. He has been unable to obtain an efficient and experienced staff—some posts are still vacant—others are said to lack the technical knowledge necessary to McNutt or anyone in his position. Such expert assistance would be available in the labor department for even those who speak least respectfully of "Madame Secretary" admit that she has built up an excellent force of experts in her department.

As one veteran of the labor front said to me: "If the war lasts long enough, we may establish a workable and efficient system like the British. Look for at least one more makeshift experiment. Meanwhile, let's hope we can muddle through."

That was the state of things up until February 2, 1943. Then came the announcement of the list of "nondeferrable jobs." The cynical may still look upon it as a "make-shift experiment"—by April 1 we'll know whether McNutt has cracked the hardest nut in Washington or whether we still have to muddle through.

Nazi Communiques Indicate New Status

When Hitler failed to appear or even to speak to his unseen audience on the tenth anniversary of his accession to power, it was only natural that many people felt that this was part of the peace offensive which it was known the Reich was preparing. The "unconditional surrender conference" at Casablanca was supposed to have pretty well quashed the Nazi peace drive but apparently the Reich still has hopes.

When I learned that Goering and not Hitler was delivering the oration of the day, two pictures flashed vividly into my mind—one I witnessed personally in September, 1939, from the Press Gallery of Reichstag and the other was described to me. The latter is said to have taken place in the famous hunting lodge of Goering, outside of Berlin. A millionaire American manufacturer sat with him. It was not long before Pearl Harbor. The American had a peace drive of his own. He outlined it to Goering. It was this: Get rid of Hitler, set up a more liberal government, agree to get out of France if England will make peace.

The man to do the job, Goering. The fee, one million dollars.

According to my informant, Goering was willing but the scheme was never put through.

Names Goering, Hess

The other scene was the occasion of Hitler's announcement that he had invaded Poland. It was then that he declared that he was going to the front and that if anything happened to him, he had decided that his successor would be his air-marshal, who sat at the Reichstag president's desk, resplendent in one of his musical comedy uniforms. And, said the fuehrer, if anything happened to Goering, Hess would be the second choice. The solemn and lanky Hess, dressed in the brown uniform of the party, rose and saluted as had the grinning Goering.

Hess, when things didn't go according to his wishes, painted his toenails, and took wings for England.

There has been comment in Washington lately over the different tone in the official communiques issued by the German high command. Experts say they seem to indicate that the generals have taken over.

Recently it was rumored that Hitler had fired his "intuition" which he said directed his military strategy and he was letting the professionals run the army. It is just possible that Hitler will some day meet the same fate of the intuition which he so unkindly purged. Even the most thickheaded Nazi could hardly believe that the Allies would ever make peace with a government with Hitler at the head.

Many Americans in the Pacific coast states were as disappointed as the Chinese in the failure to announce an offensive in the Far East in 1943. They say they feel as if Washington was a lot further from San Francisco than Australia.

There is talk again of an overall agency having the last word on all the problems affecting the civilian population under war conditions. James Byrnes, stabilization administrator, would head it.

Victim Had No Difficulty In Identifying Suspect

Mrs. Blank had a burglary. When the news got about, a neighbor called on her in great excitement.

"I saw one of the burglars!" she declared. "He was standing just inside the gate, evidently keeping a watch for the men inside. He was a little man, shabbily dressed. I couldn't see his face properly. He had an old hat pulled down over it. He kept glancing furtively at the house."

"What time was this?" asked Mrs. Blank.

"Just after eleven."

Mrs. Blank stiffened. "That was Mr. Blank," she said icily.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

WHO'S NEWS This Week

By Lemuel F. Parton

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—It used to be that a government nailed down everything loose when diplomats from friendly states came visiting. That was when diplomats practiced the pickpocket politics of Machiavelli and Richelieu. American diplomats of today are contrariwise. Nobody nails down anything against them, because they aren't taking. Not anything. They're running a sort of international bingo carnival, and the stuff they hand out adds up to more than a set of dishes.

Offers India Well-Filled Crockery in International Bingo

Thus William C. Phillips, one of President Roosevelt's handymen, sits down in New Delhi to figure out how much food India needs, and how we can give it in a lend-lease deal. Of course he hopes to persuade India to shinny on the Allied side for the duration; but considering the well-filled crockery he is willing to hand out that isn't much.

Mr. Phillips comes from Italy where he did not coax Mussolini to side with us. But even if he failed he had, on leaving, the satisfaction of knowing that for Mussolini the Axis had turned into a picket stake on the sharp end of which he was sitting far from pretty.

India is virgin soil for Mr. Phillips but the kind of dickering he will do is not new to him. He has been matching wits with foreign office horse-traders all over Europe for nearly 40 years. In 1903 with a fresh law degree from Harvard, he became private secretary at London to colorful Ambassador Joseph M. Choate.

Not long ago he got to be undersecretary of state, but a desk job of even such grandeur cramped the style of so accurate a trouble shooter so he packed his bags and went abroad again. A thinnish, horse-faced man and patient with photographers he knows everybody who is anybody in Europe, including Laval, Galeazzo Ciano and Von Ribbentrop.

He has a wife, five children and four honorary degrees. India, patting a full stomach, shortly should be urging another of these last for him.

ABOUT now, and if not now then in a little while, Hitler ought to be ready to admit that he took a gander in the wrong direction. It was westward that he looked and all he saw was Great Britain and her vast empire and all he thought was, "That's what I'll go for." If he had looked north he could have seen Denmark and Norway and Sweden going their warless happy middle ways. If he had said, "I'll copy them," his Germany might have bought prosperity with the billions he blew in on today's shattered war machine.

Shows Nazis Lofty Defiance of a Stag Among the Wolves

The noble Catholic bishop of Berlin, Most Rev. Konrad Count von Preysing would have praised that prosperity as thoroughly as he now condemns all that Hitler does. "This terrible creed" he calls the Nazi philosophy in a pastoral letter even bolder than those of his predecessor, the late Nicholas Bares.

Sixty-two now, Bishop Preysing spent almost half his life outside the church, but under Hitler's oppression he has become one of its prime defenders. He was born in Bavaria. That pastoral state had just joined the new German empire but it had kept its king and separate government and after Von Preysing studied law his title helped him into the ministry of foreign affairs. He was 32 before he entered the priesthood.

He'll Swap Second Front for Better Housing Any Day

The pet future world of Walter Nash, minister to the United States from New Zealand, is more reasonable than most. It is, in fact, reasonable enough for almost anyone. He leaves extravagant fancies to others and will settle for better homes and more of them. There is, he believes, no other project which would yield richer rewards in terms of social welfare.

Mr. Nash has been talking housing for years, as he should, coming from New Zealand where housing reform paces the world. And he harps constantly on the need for this in any program of post-war rehabilitation. The fact is, he has said he is in no hurry for a second front but he has often said we ought to get more supplies into Russia. Supplies enough might turn the trick, come to think about it. A tailor in his youth, Mr. Nash at 60 is a plump but not fat social reformer who is reputed one of the ablest members of New Zealand's labor government.

Element of Time

By STANLEY CORDELL

Associated Newspapers.
WNU Release.

WESLEY was angry because the train was delayed at Ashville Junction. He was equally angry at the telephone, because there was a delay in getting his call through. But when at last he heard Prue's voice, the heat went out of him.

"Hello, darling! I'll be an hour late in arriving. A cow on the track, or something . . . It's going to be marvelous seeing you again."

"Call me at the office the minute you get in."

Wesley hadn't seen her for six months. It seemed like six years. He had promised himself over and over again that he wouldn't go away another time for so long a period without taking Prue too—as his wife.

The train was an hour and twelve minutes late getting in to Millbanks. Wesley went immediately into the station and called Prue. She would be through work in an hour; would he meet her in the lobby of the Buckingham?

Outside the station Wesley saw Tony Metcalf. He was glad to see anyone that he knew, after being away so long.

"How are things, Tony? It's good seeing you again."

"Back in the big town again, eh? Suppose you're heading for the Buckingham. I'll walk along with you, if you don't mind going by way of Pleasant Street. I have an errand to do."

If there were anything strange in Tony's manner, Wes didn't notice it. He was too excited over the prospect of seeing Prue. When he met her at the Buckingham she seemed lovelier than ever. They had dinner at the hotel, then went into the lobby and sat down to talk. Time passed fleetingly, because each had so much to tell the other.

At 8:30 o'clock two men entered the lobby. They approached the divan where Wes and Prue sat.

"Are you Wesley Holmes?"

"That's right. What's on your mind?"

"You're under arrest for the murder of Tony Metcalf."

At headquarters Wes and Prue got a glimmering of what it was all about. Captain Bullard showed them a diary, written in Tony's hand.

"Prue has turned me down in favor of Wes Holmes. Best of luck to them both, though it came as a shock, for I loved her greatly . . . Met Holmes at the four o'clock train tonight and walked up the hill with him. He really is a nice chap. When I asked him about Rose he begged me not to tell Prue. Well, why should I?"

Wes was stunned. He looked at Prue. Prue said, "I didn't want to upset you by telling you about him, darling. It was nothing. I thought he was merely being friendly. When I found out differently I told him we'd have to stop seeing each other. I met him for lunch today."

"The diary," said Captain Bullard, "was found in Metcalf's pocket. His body was discovered an hour ago in the park—shot. One of your gloves was also found there, Holmes. Now, the fact that you asked Metcalf not to mention to Miss Fuller about Rose—"

"Rose? Rose who?" cried Wes. "I don't know any Rose, never heard of a girl by that name."

Captain Bullard looked unconvinced.

"You did walk up the hill with Metcalf this afternoon?"

"Yes. He was at the station. Neither one of us mentioned Prue."

"What did you talk about?"

"Nothing in particular. Everything in general."

"Had you been particularly friendly with Metcalf?"

"No. He was never more than a casual acquaintance."

"Yet he meets you at the station. Was that by chance, or did he want to ask you about Rose—to find out if the girl he loved were marrying a man worthy of her?"

"Look here," Wes cried wildly, "this is all nonsense. I tell you you're crazy."

"Perhaps we are," agreed Captain Bullard. "That's something that will have to be decided later. In the meantime, you may consider yourself under arrest."

"Just a minute, Captain," Prue said. Prue's lips were white, but the startled, horrified look had left her eyes. "Was your medical examiner able to determine the approximate time of Tony's death?"

"He died at about 5:45, if it makes any difference."

"It does. It makes this difference: Tony committed suicide, but was clever enough to make it appear as though Wes had murdered him. He didn't want either of us to be happy. He told me that this noon. After lunch he must have gone and written those things in his diary as he expected and planned them to happen."

"On just what do you base such a deduction, Miss Fuller?"

"On the element of time. Tony knew Wes was arriving on the four o'clock train. I know because I told him. Yet the train didn't get in until 5:12. I met Wes at 6:30. They were together in the meantime. Tony wouldn't have had time to write all that in his diary in the interim, and he neglected to change the time from four to five-thirty."

Wes, who had cursed the train because it was delayed at Ashville Junction, now blessed it.

TO YOUR Good Health

ARTHRITIS, RHEUMATISM

When it was first found that infected teeth and tonsils caused rheumatism or arthritis (inflammation of a joint), many physicians felt that all cases could thus be cured. There were so many cases in which the removal of the infection did not relieve the signs and symptoms of arthritis that some physicians began to doubt that infection was the cause or a cause.

Dr. Barton

It is interesting to read in all the articles by research workers in arthritis that injury, diet, cold and exposure, sluggishness of liver and bowel and other conditions are given as causes. There may be a few physicians who do not mention infection of teeth and tonsils as a cause but the great majority still include infection of teeth and tonsils, but do not emphasize this infection as much as formerly.

Among the causes as mentioned above are cold and dampness, injury, diet and surgical removal of infection—teeth, tonsils, gall bladder.

Some months ago Dr. Frank H. Krusen, Rochester, Minn., in the Journal of the American Medical Association pointed out that there are three groups of physical measures which can be used, after the cause has been removed insofar as this is possible. These three are: thermal (heat and cold); massage, manipulation and resting the joint by splinting, and exercise, postural training (teaching the patient to sit and stand properly), and rest. Whether these methods are used at home, or in hospital, they should be continued for some time after signs and symptoms have apparently disappeared. Thus those who have been treated in hospital should continue to have these treatments when they arrive home.

In regard to heat or thermal treatment, any kind of heat applied in various ways—heat lamps, bakers, hot tub baths, or placing affected part alternately in hot and cold water.

As to massage, a member of the patient's family should be instructed in the simple methods of massage. Heat, then massage, then heat again is usual method of using massage treatment. Heat and massage prevent permanent stiffness.

Various Causes of High Blood Pressure

In former days before the invention of the machine to measure blood pressure, the physician placed his fingers on the blood vessels in wrist or elsewhere and if they were hard (like a pipestem) the blood pressure was said to be high and a stroke of apoplexy might be expected; if soft, the patient was not likely to have a stroke.

Although a hardened vessel means that more pressure is needed to push the blood through it and the pressure will increase as the vessel becomes harder, nevertheless it is now known that hardened blood vessels (where elastic tissue in wall of blood vessel has been replaced by hard tissue) is not the only cause of high blood pressure. There are other causes for high blood pressure, one of which causes the elastic tissue in the blood vessel to contract or tighten and the blood needs increased pressure to pass through these vessels made smaller by having their elastic walls tightened.

What causes the muscles everywhere to tighten or contract? Excitement, anxiety, fear, overwork, will cause tenseness and tightening of nerves and muscles. And just as the large muscles of the body become tensed by the emotions, so do the tiny muscles of the blood vessels (though not under control of the will) become tightened, thus raising the blood pressure.

It can thus be seen that when your blood pressure has been tested and found to be above normal the high blood pressure may be due to some organic disease or change in the walls of the vessels caused by infractions.

On the other hand, the high blood pressure may be due to the emotions causing a tightening of the blood vessels making them smaller and so making increased pressure necessary.

If the high pressure is due to damage to the walls of the vessel—organic disease—treatment is rest and guarding against further infections by regular visits to your physician and dentist.

QUESTION BOX

Q. Would a doctor tell a patient he did not have syphilis if he did have it? My physician told me my test showed no syphilis was present, but I am doubtful and would like to set my mind at ease.

A. If the physician told you that you did not have syphilis you should stop worrying. If syphilis were present he would see that you were under treatment at once. However, you can go to your nearest hospital clinic and get another blood test.

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD

GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John 10:11.

Beautiful and meaningful as they are, none of the other figures or types of our Lord's redemptive work have a stronger appeal than that of the good shepherd. Even those who have never tended sheep nor yet seen them under the shepherd's care sense the telling aptness of the allegory of the Good Shepherd. We know how much we are like sheep needing the tender shepherd's care, and we soon learn to know and to trust Christ as the True Shepherd of the flock.

The center of the picture is the Good Shepherd, and it is around Him that we group our thoughts.

I. He Knows His Sheep (vv. 1-5).

At night, whenever possible, the sheep were brought into a fold, a walled-in enclosure with shelters and with a single gate. Many different flocks were kept together under the care of an undershepherd. In the morning the shepherds came to lead forth the flock. They came by the door, not as the thieves of the night, who sought to come in by stealth over the wall.

When the shepherd called, his own sheep responded. We are told that they would not come at the call of a stranger—not being ready to trust him.

The application is obvious, and yet a word is in order. We ought to examine ourselves and see whether we do indeed know our Lord's voice. Do we respond when He calls us? Then, too, let us be on the lookout against those who profess to be shepherds, who call themselves "pastor" or "reverend," and have only one purpose—to despoil the sheep. They are "thieves and robbers"—Jesus said so. They are only interested as long as it pays. The true shepherd cares for his sheep.

II. He Protects His Sheep (vv. 6-15).

Not only thieves, but wild animals would attack sheep, and it is said that often the shepherd died to protect them from harm. But the hireling, serving for what he can get out of it, is not interested any longer. When danger appears, he flees. He has not the real shepherd heart and cares not if the sheep be destroyed. Having stolen them to enrich himself, he will not defend them at the cost of his own life.

Note the sharp contrast of "I am the good shepherd" with the dark picture of the faithless hirelings. Not only does it magnify His goodness, but it deepens the blackness of their treachery.

We should recall that the Good Shepherd is able to protect His sheep; for while He lays down His life for them, He takes it again in victory over sin and death (see vv. 17, 18). The Saviour seemed to have been defeated at Calvary, but He arose again, and ever liveth to make intercession on our behalf (Heb. 7:25).

III. He Seeks Other Sheep (v. 16).

The other sheep Jesus had in mind were probably the Gentiles. The believers He then had were Jews, but the day was to come when the Gentiles were to hear and believe. His desire for them may well stir in our hearts an eagerness to go out and bring in all—both Jew and Gentile—who will, by believing in Christ, become members of His one fold.

Note the word "must" in verse 16. It does not say "if convenient," nor "when we can raise enough money," nor "after our local debts are paid" we will go out and seek others. There is a divine imperative here—it "must" be done.

Let us not fail to gather the full significance of the expression "one flock, one shepherd." We are not interested in any manufactured unity of man-made organizations. Certainly we will not accept union which means compromise of essential truth. But unity under Christ, the one great Shepherd, that we want—yes and will have. He makes that certain—"they shall be one flock."

Let us not put hindrances in the way of that kind of unity, and let us not be delinquent about seeking the "other sheep." Now a final word.

IV. He Keeps All His Sheep (vv. 27-30).

These words (said after a period of weeks had elapsed) stress the blessed assurance which comes to those who follow Christ. Jesus rebuked the Jews for their unbelief, telling them that they were not His sheep.

Those who are His have been given to Him by the Father—an eternal gift to Him—and He gives to them eternal life.

The power back of this whole matter is evident in verse 30. Christ is God. He who is in Christ's hand is also in the Father's hand, "and no man is able to pluck them out of the Father's hand." Instead of trying to modify that statement, or to quarrel with those who believe it, every Christian ought to accept it and shout "Hallelujah!"

WHY CANNED FRUITS, VEGETABLES, AND SOUPS ARE RATIONED

Every week we are sending shiploads of canned goods to feed our fighting men and our fighting allies in Africa, Britain, and the Pacific islands. We must see that they get all the food they need.

We at home will share all that is left. Point Rationing will be used to guarantee you and everyone a fair share of America's supply of canned and processed fruits and vegetables, soups and juices.

HOW they are rationed

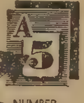
1. Every eligible man, woman, child, and baby in the United States is being given War Ration Book Two. (This book will not be used for sugar or coffee.)

RATION BOOKS FOR ALL

2. The BLUE stamps are for any kind of
   - Canned or Bottled Fruits and Vegetables
   - Canned or Bottled Juices and Soups
   - Frozen Fruits and Vegetables
   - Dried Fruits

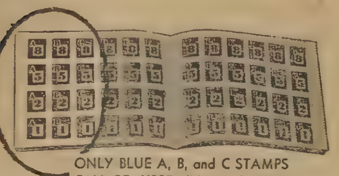
(The red stamps will be used later for meat.)

3. The stamps in this book are POINT stamps. The NUMBER on each stamp shows you how many POINTS that stamp is worth.



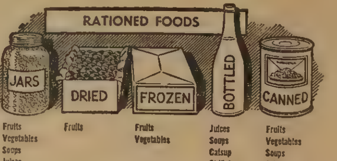
NUMBER SHOWS POINTS

4. The LETTERS show you WHEN to use the stamps. The year will be divided into rationing periods. You can use all BLUE stamps marked A, B, and C in the first rationing period. A, B, and C stamps cannot be used after the first rationing period ends.



ONLY BLUE A, B, and C STAMPS CAN BE USED IN 1st PERIOD

5. You must use the BLUE stamps when you buy ANY KIND of the rationed processed foods. See the official list, showing every kind of rationed processed food, at your grocers. Different kinds of these foods will take different numbers of points. For example, a can of beans may take a different number of points from a can of peas.



(See Complete Official List at Your Grocers)

6. Of course, the more of anything you buy the more points it will take. For example, a large can of peas takes more points than a small can.

7. The Government will set the points for each kind and size and send out an Official Table of Point Values which your grocer must put up where you can see it. The Government will keep careful watch of the supply of these processed foods and make changes in point values from time to time, probably not oftener than once a month. The Government will announce these changes when it makes them and they will be put up in the stores.

8. The number of points for each kind of processed food will be THE SAME in ALL STORES and in all parts of the country.

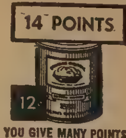
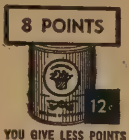
HOW TO USE YOUR NEW RATION BOOK

TO BUY CANNED OR BOTTLED FRUITS, VEGETABLES, SOUPS, AND JUICES; FROZEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES; DRIED FRUITS

1. The Government has set the day when this rationing will start. On or after that day, take your War Ration Book Two with you when you go to buy any kind of these processed foods.



YOU GIVE MANY POINTS FOR SCARCE FOODS



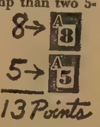
YOU GIVE LESS POINTS FOR FOODS THAT ARE NOT SO SCARCE

2. Before you buy, find out how many points to give for the kind of processed foods you want. Prices do not set the points. The Government will set different points for each kind and size no matter what the price. Your grocer will put up the official list of points where you can see it. It will also be in the newspapers. The points will not change just because the prices do.

3. When you buy, take the right amount of blue stamps out of the book. Do this in front of your grocer or delivery man and hand them to him. The grocer must collect a ration stamp, or stamps, for all the rationed processed foods he sells. Every rationed processed food will take points as well as money.

SHOW YOUR BOOK PLEASE

4. Do not use more stamps than you need to make up the right amount. For example, if the food you buy calls for 13 points it is better to tear out an 8-point and a 5-point stamp than two 5-point stamps and a 2- and a 1-point stamp. Save your smaller point stamps for low-point foods. You can take the stamps from more than one book belonging to your household if you need to.



5. Every person in your household, including children of any age, has a total of 48 points to use for all these processed foods for one ration period. This means that you may use ALL the blue stamps marked A, B, and C from all the books during the first period. You may use of the blue A, B, and C stamps as you wis time. When they are used up you will able to buy any more of these processed f the next stamps are good. The Governm announce the date when the next stamps a

Everyone Must Register During Next Week---22 to 27

Complete Declaration Form Before Going To Register For Book Two ..

Each family unit must make declaration on that form. Fill it out and take with you to School House when you go to register. You may cut this copy out and use it.

Our Job At Home

All of us have been told many, many times that we at home are fighting the battle of the home front.

But too many have tried to make that battle on the home front what it is NOT.

Let us accept once and for all that there is little drama, little excitement, little except inconvenience and humdrum sacrifice in many of the jobs we must do while men are fighting on the military front.

Filling out a rationing form is not like sitting up in front in a bomber or looking through a periscope at an enemy ship, waiting in complete silence for the zero hour.

No, the jobs that you and I have to do here at home are pretty dreary stuff. And yet, UNLESS WE DO THEM, and win our battle HERE AT HOME, our men in Africa and in the Pacific may suffer, and the war will be longer than it need be.

One of the most important, and yet routine jobs you and I here on the home front must do, is see to it that the nation as a whole—every man, woman and child—is supplied with the necessities of life. This must be done if the nation as a whole is to be able to work to its maximum capacity in getting out the things of war for our fighting men. This humdrum, unexciting, yet terribly vital job of supplying all civilians with the necessities of life, involves the food that goes on your table, and things you buy every day at your corner store. That package you carry home from the store may not seem as much a part of the war as a P-38. Yet, without this package of food assured every war worker, we won't gets tanks and guns and planes to our boys.

Consider for the moment, the unbelievable job that we are doing here at home, in the factories and in the shipyards and in the mines. To have such mass production, our workers must have speed and eficiency. Anything which henders this speed and efficiency of our workers is dangerous. Too few tools for our workers is dangerous. But too few of the necessities of life will slow a worker down also. Only by assuring every worker of a fair share of what he needs to keep him fit on the job day after day, can we maintain constant efficiency. And only the day-to-day cooperation of millions of people, inconvenienced though they may be, will assure fairness to all.

Your Government has taken action to make sure that the essentials of life will flow evenly and fairly to all civilians alike. No one will be able to get more than his share or deprive his neighbor of his fari measure, of any necessities which are scarce. Every citizen will be able to obtain the essential living commodities for his family. Every war worker will be able to go to his work confident that so long as we are able to produce these essentials, he will not have to do without his share because someone else got more than he was entitled to.

This is what rationing means—making sure that every person gets his fair share of what is scarce. Rationing means taking the OFFENSIVE against shortages. That is the democratic way. I assure you that the highest officials in the country get no more than their pound of coffee every five weeks. Compare this to the Nazi system, where the average housewife boils some herbs into a foul brew because she cannot get coffee, whilt Mr. Hitler and Mr. Goering have their shelves stocked with cans of fine Brazilian coffee.

Now, cooperation in any rationing program is just one more of the routine humdrum jobs for us on the home front. As I said before, there is nothing dramatic about tearing off a ration coupon. But unless all of us understand that many commodities are scarce becase of this war, and that what is left must be shared fairly, we are lying down on the job and harming the war effort. We have the same obligation to understand the reasons behind rationing and to obey the ratioing regulations, as the private has the obligations to understand Army rules and to obey them.

Everyone of us must buy only what he actually needs. Everyone of us must leave as much as he can so that his neghbor, too may get his share.

It is also he civilian's oblgation to find out reasons for delays and inconveniences before he shouts from the rooftops of injustices and bad management. This country has forty-eight states and is 3,000 miles across. This country has 132 million people who must be rationed. That's an awful lot of ground to cover, and a lot of people to supply with forms and coupons! It is one of the most colossal jobs in the history of the United States and what makes it worse it is a job that has never been tried before. It is not always possible to get rationing programs into operation in time to prevent serious shortages of essential goods because of the tremendous problem that must be solved with every new rationing program. Your neighbors cannot get their fair of what is scarce, if you pile up quantities in your cellar or on your shelves of those scarce goods. It is not only thoughtless to hoard this way—it not only hurts others by keeping them from getting what they should have—but in the long run, it hurts you. It creates an unsound economy. It makes the shortage worse. It requires factories to turn out additional and unnecessary quantities of these, from quantities we have stored away, when they might be turning out war goods instead.

America cannot win the war if it must turn its attention away from getting to the battle fronts the things our fighters need. This country must be sure that all the citizens share alike under any rationing program. One hoarder in a block can disrupt the even flow of goods in that block. One ill-advised and uninformed complainer can disrupt the morale of his community. It is the sum total of all the individual tasks each of us do that will add to a victory in this battle of the home front. And I know that all of us realize how deadly to our war effort, unconcern or disobedience to a rationing program can be. I know that every American who values our chances for victory, will realize that rationig helps him further the democratic system, and helps our war workers and our soldiers to get what is needed to spur them to greater efforts.

Remember that rationing means taking the offensive against shortages.

Remember that rationing will shorten the war.

"Registration"

EDITOR'S NOTE: To help our readers understand the point rationing system so they will be able to spend their food dollars wisely, the Chilton County News is running a series of five articles.

Point rationing will be introduced to the residents of Chilton county with a six-day registration period during which they will get War Ration Book Two—one for each member of the household.

During this six-day period, all retail stocks of rationed goods will be frozen to allow storekeepers to get their stocks in shape before the day point ration shopping begins. In other words, you will not be able to buy any of the rationed foods during the registration period, but you will be able to buy other unrationed foods.

Registration dates, Monday through Saturday, Februry 22-27 have been announced by A. A. Bazzel, chairman of the Chilton County War Price and Rationing Board, and board members have been at work with OPA officials and have perfected the system by which civilians in every community in the southeastern region will register.

Hours—2:00 p.m. to 6 p.m. each day except Saturday; 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon Saturday.

The registration will work on the same principle as an automoble assembly line. Every step will be clearly defined:

1. Any adult member of the family may register for all members of the group. To enter the registration center, he must show at the door a copy of War Ration Book One (sugar-coffee) for each member of the group for whom he wishes to register.

2. Next he will fill out a form for the declaration of the number of containers commercially canned goods at home. Just one figure need be given —the total number of containers, minus the allowance (5 cans per person). Each separate kind of food need not be reported. Home preserved foods do not count.

3. Next he must report how many pounds of coffee were on hand November 28, the date coffee rationing went into effect—less one pound for each adult. Stamps for excess amounts will be torn from the sugar-coffee ration book.

4. At the distribution unit the registrant will present the sugar-coffee books and the declaration form for canned goods, to be a clerk who will keep the form and tear out of each War Ration Book Two to be issued the correct number of point coupons to cover excess stocks.

5. Both War Ration Books One and Two will be passed to a recording clerk who will transfer the identifying information from each sugar-coffee book to the front of the new ration books.

6. A document clerk will assign a serial number to each point rationing book and keep a record of the serial number to each book holder.

7. The final step will be the validation book by a clerk who will stamp it and write in the serial number, making it officially complete.

Each person will then have a copy of War Ration Book Two—his insurance of a fair share of all rationed foods.

Next Week—What must be done about declaring the stocks of rationed foods on hand? What foods are rationed? What foods are exempt? Next week's story will answer these questions.

Declaration Of Canned Goods And Your Ration Book

Because the point rationing system has been designed to assure everyone a fair share of rationed goods and no one family or person will be allowed to have more than that fair share, one of the first requirements for getting War Ration Book Two will be the declaration of stocks of rationed foods on hand at the time of registration.

The first step, therefore, is for you to make accurate count of the number of containers of these rationed foods on your pantry shelves. According to Mr. Bazzell, Ration Officer of the Local District OPA Office, only one figure need be stated—the total number of cans containing eight ounces or over. Containers holding less than eight ounces need not be reported on the "Reclaration". You do not need to specify each individual kind of food, just the total number of cans. Home preserved foods need NOT be counted.

At the time of registration, eight ponts will be torn from the new ration book for each can in excess of five per person. The oficial declaration forms will be printed in The Union-Banner and will be avalable at food stores before registration. It will save time when you register if you bring a declaration form already filled out.

Point deductions for excess stocks will be made as evenly as possible from all the new ration books of your family. Only part of the stamps for any one period will be deducted. You will always have part of your stamps for each period left so you can buy some rationed foods.

Ths is the democratic way to make sure everyone gets an even break. Persons with unduly large stocks will be charged the proper number of points to make sure no one gets more food than he is entitled to have. Actually, people who have large stocks of rationed foods will have spent some of their ration points in advance.

After you get War Ration Book Two for your family, handle them as carefully as you would money. Actually, the point stamps are even more valuable than money because no matter how much cash you want to spend, you can't buy rationed foods without them.

The new ration book will look familar to you. It is about the same shape as the sugar-coffee book, but it has been improved by the addition of a heavy manila cover to protect the point stamps.

Inside are four pages of red stamps and four pages of blue stamps, 24 to the page, making a total of 96 stamps of each color. BLUE stamps will be used in the imediate rationing of processed foods. The RED stamps will be used later for meat.

A numeral on the face of each stamp indicates its point value. On each stamp also appears a letter of the alphabet which tells you WHEN to use the stamp.

Each letter appears on stamps totaling 16 ponts—one eig stamp, one five-point stam two-point stamp and one o stamp. For the first period use all the blue stamps mark and C, but these stamps will good after the first period This gives each person a tota point to spend for processed during the first period.

Whenever you go to the s buy rationed foods, you must your point stamp book. Any the household may do the sh if he takes along the ration Stamps must be torn out in th ence of the grocer and used with the correct amount of to pay for the order. Stamps taken from more than one family's books, if necessary.

MORE RATION

4. Q. Can anyone else buy a pair of shoes with my stamp No 17?

A. Only people who are related to you by blood, marriage or adoption and living in your household. The stamps belonging to a family household can be used within the family as the household thinks best.

5. Q. Are all kinds of shoes rationed?

A. The ration order covers unused shoes made in whole or in part of leather, or with rubber soles, including all ordinary types and hard-soled moccasins, casual, play, platform and rubber-soled athlectic shoes.

6. Q. Hhat kinds of shoes are not rationed?

A. WATERPROOF RUBBER FOOTWARE—including rubber artics, lumberman's overs, gaiters, work, storm and dress rubbers, clogs and toe rubbers. (Ration Order No. 6. already covres six types of men's rubber boots and rubber work shoes.)

Soft and hard-soled house and boudoir slippers—including scuffs, mules, dorsays, romeos, operas, soft-soled moccasins. Soft soled infants' shoes and ballet slippers.

7. Are shoe repairs rationed?

A. No, shoe repairs are not rationed.

8. Q. How many pairs of shoes does the new ration regulation allow each person?

A. In general, each person will be allowed one pair between February 9 and June 15, 1943. Future allotments will be announced later.

9. Q. Suppose some special circumstances make it necessary for a person to buy more than one pair of shoes between now and June 15.

A. If your health or occupational needs are involved, state your need in writing to your War Price and Rationing Board. If your need is real, your Board will issue you a special certificate of need. Shabby shoes or shoes that can be repaired must be considered adequate for your use.

10. Q. I am a shoe retailer. Is the shoe rationng regulation in effect even if I don't have a copy of it?

A. Yes, the rationing order became legally effective as soon as it was filed with the Federal Register, Sunday afternoon, February 7, 1943.

11. Q. How does an individual who has given his Ration Book to a boarding house, dormitory or other institutional establishment get stamp No. 17 to buy shoes?

A. He must borrow his Ration Book and take it with him to buy his shoes. The Ration Book must be returned to the Boarding house or institution immediately.

12. Q. Can a stamp No. 17 which is removed from Ration Book One be used to secure a pair of shoes?

A. No. You must remove the stamp in the presence of your shoe merchant. The one exception is when you order shoes by mail. A loose stamp must be attached to your order.

13. Q. Under rationing, how do I return shoes to my dealer for cash refund or credit on my account?

A. If your dealer agrees to accept the return to you one stamp No. 17 and a cash refund receipt or credit slip or cash refund receipt.

14.Q. If I ordered shoes, or if I had them placed on lay-away, on or before February 7, can I claim them later without a ration stamp?

A. Yes. You may acquire shoes that were shipped or mailed to you before the effective date of the order, or that were wrapped, marked or held for delivery, as well as shoes placed in lay-away departments, on or before February 7, 1943, if they are delivered to you or to a carrier for delivery to you with three days, Tuesday, February 9, Wednesday, February 10 or Thursday, February 11, after the effective date of the order.

15. Q. If I am a consumer, retailer, jobber or manufacturer and do not know how to proceed. what should I do?

A. Contact your local War Price Board and ask for more information.

16. Q. What are the most effective ways to preserve the shoes I now have?

A. 1. Avoid wetting shoes. Ues overshoes on wet days. Wear old shoes on wet days. Dry wet shoes slowly in a moderately warm place. NEVER dry wet shoes on or near a radiator or stove or near a fireplace.

2. Keep work shoes well oiled. Keep grease and oil removed from rubber footwear with warm scap and water.

Uncle Sam is doing a whale of a job in this global war—and a big part of it is being done by long distance telephone.

That's why we ask you to, please use the long distance lines only when really necessary, so as to keep them clear for vital war business. It will be especially helpful if you will, as far as possible, avoid making any long distance calls to war-busy industrial centers.

Material shortages prevent expansion of telephone facilities to fill the general increasing demand for service, so won't you help to make the most of what we have, knowing that in doing this you are making a genuine contribution to the war effort?

A CONCRETE BARNYARD

helps you raise more beef with less feed and labor

With the United Nations appealing to American farmers to raise more beef and pork, many farmers are paving their feed lots with concrete. This saves feed and labor—leaves more feed for pigs following cattle—saves manure.

Authorities say a concrete feed lot is worth $7 a head per year in direct savings.

A concrete pavement will last a lifetime, and the cost is surprisingly low. Concrete farm jobs require a minimum of critical war materials. If you need help, get in touch with your concrete contractor or building material dealer.

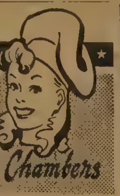
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



Tea for You, With Delicious Cranberry Pastries!
(See Recipes Below)

. . . And Cookies, Too!

You may not serve tea, and you may not even have coffee, but you still like that pause in the afternoon with a few good friends, to mull over the happenings of the day, to get philosophical over the events that touch all of us. But have that pause whenever possible, even if you have just fruit juice and a few cookies or cakes. It's as important as the bigger things you do.

Have a hot or cold drink as the climate dictates, flavor them with honey if the sugar supply is low. Some supplies of tea are still obtainable for the hot or iced beverage, if you use the coffee ration at breakfast.

Chocolate and cocoa are obtainable now and then and make excellent hot beverages. Made with milk, they're nourishing, too. And if you make them with canned milk they're delightful. Somehow, the canned milks have an affinity with chocolate beverages.

Fruit juices have been a summer standby, but you should discover their winter uses, too! Hot lemonade is delightful as are combinations of lemon, orange, grapefruit and pineapple juice.

Those of you who like spending cold afternoons in front of the open fire will enjoy a small glass of a cool drink with a few tasty cookies. For this purpose, try mixing equal quantities of cranberry and orange juice or apricot and pineapple juice served in pretty glasses with cookies.

Small cakes and cookies are an attractive accompaniment with refreshing drinks. Our first one today is a sugar-saver, butter-saver, quickly and easily made:

Cranberry Fingers.
(Makes 24 fingers)

4 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg
Milk
1 1-pound can jellied cranberry sauce
Grated rind of ½ orange

Work shortening and sugar into flour, and mix to a light dough with beaten egg and milk, using only enough milk to moisten. The mixture should be dry rather than wet. Divide into two portions. Roll one portion to an eighth of an inch thickness, place on a greased cookie sheet, and spread with crushed cranberry juice. Sprinkle with grated orange rind. Wet edges and cover with remaining dough, rolled to fit, pressing edges firmly together. Brush with milk, sprinkle with sugar and bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven about 30 minutes. When cool, cut into finger strip size for serving.

Oranges enter the picture again, this time combined with maple syrup to make a drop cookie:

This Week's Menu
Pork Kidneys with Scrambled Eggs
Mashed Potatoes Diced Beets
Lettuce with French Dressing
Whole Wheat Muffins
Apple-Cheese Crisp
Beverage

Orange Drop Cookies.
(Makes 60 cookies)

2 tablespoons grated orange rind
¼ cup butter or substitute
1 cup maple syrup
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Cream together orange rind, shortening, maple syrup. Add beaten eggs, then flour sifted together with baking powder and salt. Drop the batter by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderately hot (375-400-degree) oven and bake about 10 minutes or until lightly browned.

Molasses 'n apple butter were favorite ingredients of cookies in grandmother's time, and now they come in for a grand encore:

Old-Fashioned Molasses Cookies.

3¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
¾ cup butter or substitute
⅔ cup sugar
1 egg
¼ cup apple butter
1 cup molasses

Sift together dry ingredients. Cream together butter and sugar, add egg and beat together until light and fluffy. Add apple butter and molasses and blend together thoroughly, then mix in sifted dry ingredients. Chill for 2 hours or more. Roll as thinly as possible and cut into large cookies. Place on a lightly greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven for 10 minutes. These cookies are crisp when baked, get soft if stored in tin for a day or so.

Honey and sour cream are an unbeatable combination in a cupcake, and here they are lined up with spices for an extra deliciousness:

Honey Spice Cupcakes.

½ cup butter or substitute
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup honey
3 egg yolks
2 cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons ground cloves
2 teaspoons allspice
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup thick, sour cream
3 egg whites

Cream butter, add sugar and honey, creaming well. Add egg yolks, one at a time and beat well. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour cream, beating after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes or in two greased cake tins.

Your icing for the cupcakes should be a halo of white swirl of honey icing which will not crack and can be whipped up in a hurry:

Royal Honey Icing.

1 egg white, stiffly beaten
½ cup honey
½ teaspoon vanilla

To the stiffly beaten egg white, add honey slowly, beating continually until icing will stand in peaks. Fold in flavoring.

What problems or recipes are most on your mind these winter days? Write to Lynn Chambers for expert advice on your particular problem, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

Handy Hints: When a recipe calls for sifted sugar or flour sift the ingredient before you measure it, so you'll get an accurate measurement.

In mixing cakes, add flour mixture to creamed sugar, shortening and egg before adding the moist ingredients, then alternate and add dry ingredients last. You'll get a better grained cake.

Muffins are beaten just enough to, blend ingredients together. Don't overbeat.

Greasing cookie, cake and muffin tins with a mixture of pancoat, made by blending ½ cup shortening with ¼ cup flour prevents sticking.

French Leaders Brought Together

The bringing together of the two French leaders—key men of the two main factions of divided France—was one of the big achievements of the historic Casablanca conference. Shown, left to right, are Gen. Henri Giraud, commissioner of French Africa; President Roosevelt; Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Fighting French leader, and Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Do we upsweep our hair or don't we? is the burning question of the hour. An expert shows the upswept coiffure in two versions. In front he has shaped the hair very short to achieve the soft curl on the forehead (top). The fan-shaped back design (below) is one of many types.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MARGUERITE CHAPMAN'S glad to join in the share-a-ride movement (she gets just enough gas to drive to and from work at Columbia studios every day), but on the first day that she worked in her new picture, "Destroyer," she worked out a new stunt. Attached to her car door is a small box with a Red Cross painted on it, and an opening for coins. Her passengers are glad to drop in the bus fares that they save by riding to work with a movie star!

*

Remember "The Dark Angel"? Samuel Goldwyn will make it again, starring Teresa Wright. This third version will bring the story up to date; the hero, an American officer, will be blinded in fighting at Guadalcanal.

TERESA WRIGHT

*

Lum and Abner of radio fame have done a great service for the motion picture industry; RKO reports that thousands of persons who had never before seen the inside of a movie theater now go to the pictures made by these two radio favorites. They're now starring in "Two Weeks to Live."

*

Tim Holt was booed in public while making his last picture before enlisting, "Hitler's Children." He had to give the Nazi salute while working on location at the Los Angeles Orphans' Home, and a group of school boys watching from the sidewalk cut loose when he made that scene. A canvas screen had to be put up before he could go on. Well, RKO wants audiences to feel that way when that scene is flashed on the screen, but young Holt says that it was the most embarrassing moment of his life.

*

Douglass Drake, Columbia contract player, enlisted in the army six months ago, and thought his screen career was done for, for the duration. But he was given an honorable discharge for injuries received while in service, and returned to be tested for a role in the Rita Hayworth-Brian Donlevy comedy, "My Client Curley."

*

Jean Porter of Cisco, Texas, arrived in Hollywood minus a Southern accent—but got her first screen role, in "The Youngest Profession," because of her assumed Southern drawl. Then she was cast in "Faculty Row," as a co-ed with a Southern accent!

*

"Casablanca" has scored such a hit that there'll be a sequel to it, "Brazzaville"; Humphrey Bogart and Sydney Greenstreet will continue their characterizations from the first film, and it's likely that Geraldine Fitzgerald will have an important role.

*

Barry Wood was voted the most popular male singer on the Columbia Broadcasting System, in three major radio editors' polls—whereupon he left that network to become an NBC star, taking command of the new "All-Time Hit Parade," the program that now succeeds "Information Please" on that Friday night spot, and coming from Carnegie Hall in New York.

*

Bandleader Woody Herman, who'll be featured in "Quota Girl" with Sonja Henie, has proved that the adage, "Like father, like son" is all wrong, pointing out that following dad's footsteps would have made him a vaudevillian, Sammy Kaye a civil engineer, and Rudy Vallee a village druggist. Kate Smith would probably have been president of a woman's club. Mark Warnow'd be a concert violinist.

*

ODDS AND ENDS—Dinah Shore will probably appear in a Goldwyn picture, "With Flying Colors" . . . You should see Anita, of the "Tommy Riggs" show, doing her marketing—on roller skates . . . Dariel-Jean Johnson has just received a new Metro contract . . . Edgar Bergen's going to co-star with Kay Kyser in a film musical, tentatively called "Keep 'Em Singing" . . . Gary Cooper and Ingrid Bergman will turn into one of those popular movie teams, first thing they know—they have the leads in Warners' "Saratoga Trunk" . . . Harriet Hilliard's slated for a leading role in "The Falcon Comes Back."

Crop of the Sea

Submarine gardens on the Pacific coast which thrilled visitors in glass-bottom boats in peacetime are now being visited by men in diving helmets, picking clumps of sea fern from the lush underwater growths. This is agar sea fern, one of the very essential products that Uncle Sam wants these war days.

Agar-agar, the gelatin made from the fern, gives smoothness to ice cream and contains cheeses. More important, it's the one essential gelatin for which no substitute has been found, in making laboratory tests of drinking water, milk, and food to safeguard American civil and military health.

ATTENTION Mothers!

The music industry claims that youngsters who study music build a strong shield against temptation to crime. Mr. Sam C. Rowland (quoting Life Magazine) says juvenile delinquency has increased twenty per cent since the start of 1942, with the most rapid spread in the 10 to 12 age group. Further increase is feared as more fathers join the armed forces and mothers are absorbed in war production. Only by directing the playtime energies of these youngsters can this demoralization be checked. Good Housekeeping Magazine of September, 1942, shows how easy it is to teach children to play some musical instrument. This means culture for your children. Read the American Home Magazine of Nov., 1942, see what they advise parents to do for their children. E. E. FORBES & SONS PIANO CO. can supply you with any kind of musical instrument you would like to have your child learn to play. Many hours can be spent by your child playing a piano or guitar. Your money invested in a musical training for your children is better than in land or a savings account. The child who learns to blow a trumpet is not apt to blow a safe. If you bring your truck and take the piano back home with you they will give you an allowance of $10.00. If you can't call at one of the FORBES MUSIC STORES, write them at 403 N. 20th St., Birmingham, Ala., or call at Anniston, Decatur, Florence, Gadsden or 103 Commerce St., Montgomery, Ala.

THE COW THAT DIDN'T GET MILKED

She was a Holstein. There are many like her on our farms.

But this cow was not on an American farm. She was grazing in a little pasture in Holland, native country of the Holstein, when hell broke loose. A new kind of horrible hell called a blitz.

She went crazy. She ran until her tongue hung out. She wasn't milked that morning, or that night, or the next day, or the next. Her beautiful udder spoiled. But maybe it is just as well—Hitler and his men take all the milk. They take everything from enslaved Holland.

Remember this story as you milk your good herd. Keep on remembering it—and buy U. S. War Bonds—every dollar's worth that you possibly can.

Buying Bonds will help with the war right now—and be one of the best investments you ever made. They never sell for less than you pay for them. They increase in value every year. If held for ten years, they return $4 for every $3 invested. And they can be cashed any time after sixty days if you need the money. Buy Bonds—for yourself and for your country—at your bank or post office.

Rationing News

All applications for renewal supplemental milage gasoline that expires March first will be mailed out this week. Please complete these forms and return to the local rationing office at once.

Word comes from OPA at Washington that supplmental gasoline milage will have to be further reduced. Your local rationing board has been instructed to be very careful about granting additional gasoline.

IMPORTANT

All trucks and passenger cars holding B and C Books must have the tires inspected by Saturday of this week. February 28 is the last day for inspection.

The publicity agent for the local rationing board would like to take this opportunity of calling the attention of the people to the contribution that is being made to the war effort by the CHILTON COUNTY NEWS AND UNION BANNER. These papers have contributed space week after week without any compensation whatever. It requires work and valuable space in the paper to carry this news. The Office of Price Administration sends out this news with instructions for it to be printed for he benefit of the people, but makes no provision for paying for the newspaper space used. The two papers of Clanton have been most cooperative in giving the people this news without complaining or acting the least unwilling to help in putting the government's program into operation. The local rationing board appreciates this fine work of these papers.

Clarification of the requirements vehicle owners must meet before they can obtain recaps for their tires came from Regional OPA office today.

"There is at present only one method by which car owners may get recapping service. They must have their tires examined and then apply to their local War Price and Rationing Board. If the board issues a certificate for recapping, the certificate can be taken to a tire dealer and the recapping service obtaind," tire rationing officials said.

A statement by William Jeffers, rubber coordinator, about a contemplated amendment to the tire regulations which will make it possible for car owners to secure recaps without applying to their rationing boards evidently has caused confusion, according to OPA officials. This amendment is still in a formative state although expected to be in effect by March 1. Meanwhile there is no change in the procedure for getting recapping service, the OPA officials said.

Final Report of ODT Savings In School Bus Routes

A final tabulation of bus drivers' reports shows that worthwhile savings have been made on the routes of Chilton County School Busses in complying with recent ODT regulations. Every day the 44 busses make the folowing savings:

Stops saved on hills	198
Stops eliminated	574
Miles saved a day	139 7-10
Gal. of gasoline saved a day	20

If the above daily savings are figured for a full month of 20 days of operation, the monthly savings are:

Stops saved on hills	3,960
Stops eliminated	11,480
Miles saved a month	2,794
Gals. of gasoline saved a month	400

The above savings were made to comply with recent regulations of the Office of Defense Transportation. The people of Chilton County have given school officials full cooperation in this emergency. They know that the bus route changes were made necessary by this war. With few exceptions, every reduction that was made in routes or stops met with the approval of the people affected by such changes. Many children are walking a mile or more to meet the school bus and are glad to do so during the war emergency.

Tin Truck Gets Nice Load Of Tin On First Trip

Earl Gore made his first trip around town last Friday as per schedule and picked up some 200 pounds of tin for the Salvage drive. Some of the house wives didn't understand the truck was to be around and failed to put their tin out but some cooperation was found.

Gore in a statement Tuesday said that the truck would make a return trip on Friday, March 5, and urged all housewives to have their pressed tin cans out in front so that they could be quickly gathered.

In pressed tin cans, he stated further, he meant for them to be washed, the lable torn off, the bottom cut out and then the tube mashed with the foot until flat. This means that they will take up a minimum of space and be easily handled and transported.

The next round will be Friday week March 5th. Don't forget the date and have your tin cans ready.

GLOBAL WAR'S CHALLENGE MET BY RED CROSS

Vast Resources Back Nation's War Effort Abroad And At Home

Washington, D. C.—The American Red Cross today faces the second year of United Sates's participation in World War II secure in the knowledge that its vast resources have withstood the rigid tests of wartime in the months since Pearl Harbor

To meet its increased wartime responsibilities the Red Cross has set a goal of 125,000,000 for the 1943 War Fund now in progress. Of this sum, $80,000,000 will go to the national organization to further its services to the armed froces.

At distant outposts where American fighting men are guarding freedom, from India to the tiny garrisoned islands of the South Pacific, Red Cross services have reached out to keep pace with the fast-changing requirements of global warfare.

On the home front, the Red Cross has broadned its program to guard against the unbridled spread of suffering and death in the wake of disaster from natural catastrophies or war.

War clouds had not yet settled over Pearl Harbor when Red Cross workers were called into action by Chairman Norman H. Davis.

Prepared For War

Veteran Red Cross workers, who had maintained a constant alert and were ready to face the emergencies of war, were joined by tens of thousands of new volunteers anxious to do their part in the cause of humanity.

Thousands of workers were trained to serve with the military forces as Red Cross field directors, hospital recreation workers, and medical social workers. They were assibned to posts at home, and all armed tasks forces leaving ports on embarkation for foreign service were accompained by Red Cross field directors and their staffs.

Overseas, the Red Cross organized an extensive club program for the recreation of the armed forces in leave areas. Staffed by American men and women who by experience and training were suited to the task, nearly 150 clubs were opened in Australia, Great Britain, Iceland, India, the Middle East, Alaska, Northern Ireland and China.

On the home front, Red Cross chapters and branches assumed an early lead preparing the nation for the disasters war might bring to an estimated 5,500,000 persons in first aid. Through the Red Cross Nurses War Reserve, 28,000 nurses were recruited for the armed forces and 15,000 for service at home. An estimated 50,000 Red Cross Nurse's Aides were trained to help relieve the shortage of nurses in hospitals, while 900,000 persons received instruction in home techniques.

In Red Cross production rooms the nation over, patriotic women volunteers worked long hours making 520,000,000 surgical dressings and 14,300,000 garments for relief among civilian refugees of a war-torn world and for the armed forces.

Volunteered Blood

The Red Cross Blood Donor Service was established in 24 cities where laboratory facilities were available, and thousands of people volunteered as doners. Approximately 1,800,000 pints of blood were contributed at these centers and at Red Cross mobile centers operating from them.

Young America joined the Red Cross call by enlisting in the American Junior Red Cross. With its 14,500,000 members the Junior Red Cross carried on an extensive program of production for the armed forces.

When the war struck home to the American population as the first U. S. troops were captured in battle, the Red Cross Inquiry Service stood ready to assist in establishing communications between the prisoners and their families. At the same time, relief to American prisoners of war including food parcels, large quantities of cigarettes, tobacco, medical supplies and clothing were shipped by the Red Cross, and relief supplies were sent to victims of aggression in foreign countries.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Department of Agriculture Forecasts Tightened Civilian Rationing Orders; Losses Alter Nazi Military Strategy; Lend-Lease Reaches Ten Billion Yearly

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Weary from siege and bitter fighting and wasted away from starvation, these are some of the Japanese soldiers captured by U. S. army forces when they overcame resistance on Guadalcanal. They have been marched down to the beach and are waiting for a barge which will transport them to a prison camp for the duration.

FOOD OUTLOOK:
And Rationing

As the American housewife began to learn the details of the new point rationing system the department of agriculture took a look around at the 1943 food supply and forecast an extension of rationing which might even reduce dinner table loads to depression era levels.

Tip off on the situation came after a house appropriations subcommittee slapped its disapproval on the administration's food production subsidy program by rejecting to approve a request for $100,000,000 for incentive payments to growers of potatoes, beans, sorghum, flax and certain vegetables.

Farm bloc members of congress are against the incentive payments because they have their own plan for raising the farmer's income—by including farm labor costs in the parity formula.

After the subcommittee's action, Secretary Wickard called on farmers to ignore the action and go ahead with their production plans anyway. The department of agriculture pointed out that the most severe pinch on many foods is yet to come but careful rationing and intelligent use of food supplies will help.

FORETASTE:
Of Battle for Africa

The first big armament battle of North Africa gave a foretaste of the severe nature of the fighting which lies ahead of the Allies before the Axis can be cleared out of that front.

Allied communiques told of heavy fighting in which German tanks swept into the Allied forward base at Gafsa, 75 miles west of the Gulf of Gabes, in the southernmost part of the Tunisian line.

American troops, which had been holding the place, were understood to have retired before the German advance and to have withdrawn according to plan. The retirement from Gafsa was not completely unexpected and was expected to strengthen the Allied line in the districts where strength has been too thinly spread for safety.

However, better news came when American tank combat teams smashed back at Marshal Rommel's experienced armored troops and forced the Nazis back six miles in the Faid area of central Tunisia. This was the biggest armament battle of the North African front, and conducted under an umbrella of American fighter planes.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Score: 15—2

The early-February rumors of a major fleet engagement in the Solomon Islands turned out to be no more than rumors—but only because the Jap fleet decided against it.

A navy communique announced that 15 Japanese ships, including 12 destroyers, were sunk or damaged, and two American warships were lost in a week of furious fighting in the area—but the fighting was all of air attacks on surface vessels. There were no reported incidents of warship battling against warship. Reports indicated that the Jap fleet preferred not to risk another large-scale naval battle.

ALTERATIONS:
In Nazi Strategy

There were definite signs in Berlin that German military strategy with respect to the war in Russia was undergoing some rather vital alterations. Some sources indicated that Hitler himself was no longer making the important strategic decisions. Rather, said these reports, the German general staff had taken over.

If true, there was reason aplenty for the change. For now the Russians have regained virtually all of the territory they lost to the Nazis when the latter began their 1942 spring offensive. Spring, summer and fall last year had seen the Russians fall back from a line running roughly from Leningrad down through Kursk, Kharkov and Rostov to as far eastward as Stalingrad on the banks of the river Volga. And almost to the Caspian sea.

All this was now lost. For the Russians had in turn encircled the Nazi troops before Stalingrad and then retook that city; the siege of Leningrad was lifted; Kursk fell, then Rostov and last to be retaken was the anchor city of the German lines—Kharkov. Most experts predicted that the German generals had convinced the political leaders that a retreat to the Dneiper river was in order. Here, they reasoned, it would be simpler to stop the Russians. Moscow sources could not agree. The Red army fought on.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Ship Losses Small

Adm. Andrew B. Cunningham, commander in chief of the Allied Mediterranean naval forces, has announced that American and British shipping losses had been less than 2 per cent in bringing 780 ships totaling 6,500,000 tons to North Africa since November 8. At the same time the admiral reported the Germans and Italians in January lost nearly one-third of their ships in trying to supply their Tunisian forces.

When asked if the Axis could mobilize enough ships to get their forces out of North Africa, Admiral Cunningham said:

"Yes, but I wouldn't like to say what would happen to them."

LEND-LEASE:
Still Growing

The United States is spending at the rate of $10,000,000,000 annually to supply its Allies with food, implements of war and necessary industrial products, Edward R. Stettinius Jr., lend-lease administrator, told a senate appropriations subcommittee.

Stettinius' lend-lease table showed that $6,823,000,000 worth of material had been sent to Great Britain and its territories while only $160,000,000 worth was sent to China.

The 1943 requirements of the various lend-lease countries have been submitted, he said. "On the basis of our best present estimate . . . 1943 requirements for food will approximately double 1942 requirements." (Food requirements up to January 31 totaled $1,115,000,000.) It is expected that lend-lease requirements for other materials will exceed those for 1942.

FINLAND:
Ryti Again

The attention of three strong nations—the United States, Russia and Germany — centered on Finland when that small nation re-elected Risto Ryti president, thus extending his tenure in office to March 1, 1945.

Germany hailed Ryti's re-election as a "plebiscite of the people" approving Finland's foreign policy. Transocean News Agency reporting from Helsinki said: "This election was a demonstration for Ryti and his foreign policy, and thus against the Anglo-American war of nerves."

America's attention was drawn a short time after the balloting by the college of electors when the dominant Social Democratic party council in a manifesto urged friendlier relations between Finland and the United States. It was hoped in many sources that relations between the two nations, troubled for some time, might be smoothed.

Russia looked with sardonic eye upon the Finnish press which emphasized that Finland was independent of Germany. One newspaper noted that "Finland is fighting a purely defensive war. Our alliance with Germany is purely accidental."

Peace Proposal?

Authoritative reports that the Finnish government has requested Sweden to sound out London and Washington on the prospect of a separate peace between Finland and Russia have been received by the Allied governments.

Finland's conditions for peace stipulated Finnish independence, a frontier compatible with Finnish honor and interests, and that the United States and Sweden should guarantee that independence and territorial integrity.

Although Britain is at war with Finland, it was natural that the Finns' separation from the Axis would be welcomed. The view prevailed in London that Finland should enter into discussions direct with Russia.

WPB SHAKEUP:
And More Rumors

When Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, dismissed Ferdinand Eberstadt as vice chairman of the WPB, informed observers immediately forecast a widening of the already gaping breach between the WPB and the army and navy.

Eberstadt, New York investment banker and chairman of the army and navy munitions board before he came to WPB, has been looked upon as the top authoritative liaison in co-ordinating military and civilian economy programs. Eberstadt's duties were transferred to Charles E. Wilson, WPB vice chairman.

DONALD M. NELSON
A widened breach.

The move was thought in Washington quarters to foreshadow more important changes in the WPB structure. With Eberstadt's dismissal came rumors that Nelson's tenure of office was strictly limited. As the rumors spread, Bernard M. Baruch, 72-year-old chief of the War Industries board of World War I, was the most prominently mentioned as Nelson's successor.

FIRST CROP:
Of Natural Rubber

Harvesting of the first natural rubber to be produced in the United States was announced by the department of agriculture less than a year after the nation's guayule rubber program was begun.

The harvest, in the Salinas valley of California, amounted to about 600 tons of raw rubber. It was grown on 550 acres. The source was a small desert shrub, which must be planted annually.

The department of agriculture report disclosed that the army made an investigation 13 years ago into the possibilities of the guayule plant as a rubber resource in the event of war. One of the two officers making the report was Maj. Dwight D. Eisenhower, now a general and commander in chief in the North African theater of war.

PRICE CEILINGS:
Here to Stay

The Office of Price Administration is committed to a policy of firm price control and, contrary to reports, does not intend to permit a gradual increase in the cost of living.

That was the statement of Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, who asserted that it was the intent of congress under the emergency price control act to hold prices to the general level of September 15.

John L. Lewis Leading Anti-Wage Ceiling Fight

'Man Who Came Back' Is Responsible for Battle Against Little Steel Formula Of Increases.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

There is a new candidate in Washington for the title of the "man who came back."

He has come back before so it is probably no great thrill for him but it is a terrific pain in the neck for a number of people who hoped this tall, dark ghost had been laid away for the duration, if not for longer. I am speaking of John Lewis, stripped of his robes as head of the CIO which he hewed out of the rock of AF of L opposition. But if his head is bloody, it is bowed in no humility whatever.

Lewis may not be all the way back but it seems very much as if Messrs. Green and Murray are going through some preliminary shuffles that may be a dance to Piper Lewis' tune.

Lewis loudly sounded the keynote for what he hopes to be the death march for the Little Steel formula which held wage raises down to a 15 per cent maximum. When Murray and Green heard of Lewis' press conference, on the day he sounded his threat, they hurried to the White House where the President, who isn't seeing just anybody, permitted the visit and let the CIO and the AF of L talk to reporters on the White House steps—but they had nothing to say which could drown the Lewis roar.

I talked with a man who has fought labor's cause for many a year without affiliation with any group. He said to me:

"There are only two things that will keep from blowing the whole price control system into the high heavens. Either Murray and Green can turn their backs on Lewis, put aside their fears that he will win the plaudits of labor away from them by being the sole champion of wage raises and say boldly to their followers:

" 'We'll do what is best for you and everybody. Inflation will be worse in the end than the squeeze you feel you are getting now.'

"If they don't, Lewis will have his way.

"The alternative," he went on, "is to have the President call in both the farm and the labor leaders and say: 'All right. How much of an increase do you want? Twenty per cent? Thirty? But then prices will go up by just that much. You and everybody else will be that much worse off.' "

Of course, there is another alternative—a cast-iron ceiling on prices but the metal to withstand the upward pressure has not been found. With this situation before him, almost anyone would rather be right—or left of center—than President.

* * *

Different Problem

Recently, to add to the troubles of the labor leaders themselves as well as the government, there was evidence of a different type of problem in scattered hot-spots in the labor world—undisciplined groups which one man described as made up of men "who wouldn't even take orders from Stalin."

Some 300 workers in a zinc smelter in Moundsville, W. Va., gave notice that they weren't going to work Saturday or Sunday without overtime pay. This, in spite of the fact that they worked only 36 hours a week. The orders are clear that double-time is only paid for a seventh day of consecutive work. But these men said "orders or no orders" they weren't going to work Saturdays or Sundays without that overtime. Zinc is one of the bottle necks. The War Production board was frantic.

These are only pin pricks and not typical but they cause a near-crisis every time they occur in industries producing essential materials.

Quick Comeback To McNutt Edict

There has seldom been a quicker comeback in a Washington bout than the smart jab to the chin that followed Paul McNutt's haymaker delivered at the boys in non-essential industry.

The echoes of the "work or fight" ukase of the Manpower commission were still reverberating up and down the corridors of the long list of industries from bootblacking to window-curtain manufacturing when the house military committee arose with its "no, no, a thousand times, no!"

Representative Kilday of Texas obtained a promise from Chairman May of the Military Affairs committee for immediate hearings on his amendment to the Selective Service act and the "block McNutt" move was soon heavily under way.

As you know, Representative Kilday's bill is aimed to make dependency the basic cause of deferment while McNutt's move was to establish participation in the war effort in field, factory or the armed forces as the principle governing the order of induction.

McNutt's order set the boys in the non-essential businesses hammering at the doors of the United States Employment offices all over the country and consternation and confusion reigned.

Then up spoke Mr. Kilday. The attitude of those favoring the measure to draft the single men first, everywhere, before the married men and the others with dependents go, is this: They say they do not want the Selective Service act made a weapon to force men into essential jobs. They claim the act was never so intended.

Legislation, they say, must be passed after careful study which will lay down a manpower program; military service is an honor as well as a duty. It must not be used as a threat.

Kilday's Views

I talked with Representative Kilday before the hearings began. He was optimistic over quick committee acceptance of his bill though he said he didn't want to hurry the hearings and he realized all sorts of opposition might develop. He pointed out that his measure would not alter the present deferments, that it doesn't mean, as some seemed to think, that single men, now deferred under the present deferment rules, will be yanked out of their jobs and thrown into the army. Opponents say, however, in some cases, this will be the actual effect.

Whatever the effects on agriculture and industry may be if the bill passes, it will sink the present Manpower commission program without a trace and with all hands on board.

There is plenty of public appeal in the Kilday measure—the argument that it is more important to keep the family together than to fill quotas for industry or the army and the navy, the argument that there is no authority in the Selective Service act to do what the Manpower commission order is aimed to achieve, namely, to state what job a man is to hold. And that side of the argument has particular appeal in a congress exceedingly jealous of its prerogatives, sworn to prevent usurpation of its powers by the administrative branch.

A Prediction

Last week, I reported the prediction by a keen observer of this whole problem to the effect that one more desperate measure would be attempted by the Manpower commission before it would be forced to step aside for some other agency. McNutt acted, and within 24 hours of that prediction, the military affairs committee announced hearings on the Kilday bill, looks very much like a bird of ill omen echoing the second part of the dire prediction—the end of the Manpower commission as an agency with any power of initiative left. To many high army officials, there is grim satisfaction in what is happening. Long ago, it was intimated that sooner or later the military would have to take over the whip hand and settle the manpower question in its own way. Some military men would be quite happy to have the Kilday measure pass, sweep everyone draftable into the armed forces and then do its own reallocation, screening out the men necessary to industry and agriculture and furlough them back as military needs, first, and the industry's, second, demanded.

One can imagine, however, how union labor would like to see khaki and navy blue manning the stamping machines and the lathes beside the workingmen in civvies. Labor's objection to the bill was expected from the first.

And so we have a four-way clash: Legislators, Manpower commission, Military, Labor.

Once more, a labor draft "looms" as the headlines say.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In Zambezi, Africa, carts used by the natives have tires made of elephant hide, which serves the purpose of rubber.

In Bulgaria natives paint pictures of their enemies on their tires so they can be regularly splattered with mud, as a gesture of contempt!

Cars and trucks for transportation account for 86 per cent of the Army's rubber requirements.

Cord tire construction, the type common today, first made rapid inroads on the cord-woven fabric tire in 1915. Low pressure balloon tires made their appearance in 1924.

Cryptostegia is a new word for the rubber lexicon. To Floridians it is the technical name for the Mexican morning glory, which has been recognized as one of the most promising rubber-producing plants.

MORE RED CROSS

the work here. On behalf of our Forces in the European Theatre I desire to express appreciation to the American pople for their generous support which has made possible the operation of this great organization.

By Gen. Marshall

The Army depends heavily on the Red Cross as a vital link between its individual soldiers and their families. As the only civilian organization which operates on military reservations the contribution made by Red Cross workers, and the highly organized assistance available to the Army through them, are of inestimable value to us in maintaining morale.

The fighting effeciency of a soldier is greatly enhanced when he knows that during his absence the welfare of his loved ones is the subject of interested concern other than his own and the service of the Red Cross is available to every man in the Army Its representatives are scattered throughout the world wherever American soldiers are stationed, contributing to the comfort and care of convalescent soldiers in hospitals, maintaining clubs where wholesome entertainment and recreation are available to men off duty, and—caring for their families at home when they are in need of assistance.

Thousands of Red Cross workers are efficiently lending a helping hand to the members of the armed forces with their individual problems and the opportunity to share in this contribution to the well-being of our soldiers is offered to every man, wowan, and child in the country. Gratitude and appreciation cannot be adequately measured in dollars and cents but dollars and cents are certainly necessary for the continuance of these services which are so vital a part of the war effort, and I strongly urge every citizen to assume a part in the responsibilities of this great organization by contributing to the Red Cross War Fund.

By Gen. MacArthur

The American Red Cross is an expression of humanitarianism. When tragedy interrupts, as sooner or later it must, succor for the injured, the helpless, the destitute, speeds by land sea and air. No call however great or small pass unheeded. The Red Cross never fails the soldier. It brings to him a hint of home, a touch of cheer whether he be in teeming jungle or arctic waste. It bears a gift to him from no one and yet from all. It warms him with the comfort that someone thinks of him and someone prays for him. It truly follows in the train of the "Prince of Peace."

Q. Are any of the funds of the Red Cross supplied from federal or other taxes?

A. No, all Red Cross funds are voluntary contributions, though occasionally it distributes relief supplies purchased from U. S. Governwent appropriations.

Q. How are Red Cross accounts audited?

A. All Red Cross accounts are audited by the War Department, and a report, copies of which are available to the public, is submitted annually to Congress. The national organization requires periodical audits from each chapter.

Q. For what general purpose is the Red Cross War Fund used?

A. The Red Cross War Fund is used shiefly for services to the armed forces, disaster relief, civilian war aid foreign war relief, and health, education and safety services.

Q. Does the Red Cross sell anything to soldiers?

A. It is a policy of the American Red Cross to make no charge to any soldier for any Red Cross article or service. However, at the request of the War Department, food and lodging are provided at cost, and in many cases, below cost, in the Red Cross clubs located in overseas leave areas

Q. How fast did the Red Cross get into action after Pearl Harbor?

A. At Hawaii and Manila the Red Cross evacuated and cared for refugees and injured civilians so quickly as to win Army commendation. Its personal since has moved with the Army on world-wide assignments. A Red Cross field director landed with the Marines on Guadalcanal and a number of field directors accompanied the American expeditionary forces to North Africa.

Q. Did the Government mobilize the Red Cross when war was declared?

A. No, this was not necessary since the Red Cross is always in a state of rediness for disaster through its national disaster relief staff and chapter disaster relief committees.

It merely expanded its personnel and facilities to meet the demands of the war emergency.

Q. How do Red Cross services in this war differ from those of the last war?

A. The services are substantially the same, but the number of facilities as well as the number of workers have been greatly increased. In this war the Red Cross has a million more volunteer workers, plus several hundred more field workers.

Q. Can the American Red Cross establish contact with civilians in occupied or belligerent countries?

A. Yes, through the Inquiry Service which cooperates with the International Red Cross Committee's Central Agency in Geneva. The American Red Cross is the only medium thru which messages from persons in the United States to civilian relatives in occupied countries may now be forwarded. Both inquires and messages must be made out on standard forms obtainable in the local Red Cross chapter.

Q. What does the American Red Cross do for Americans in enemy hands?

A. The American Red Cross endeavors to provide regular shipments of food parcels, toilet and comfort articles, clothing and medical supplies to men in the armed forces who have been captured, and for Americans held as civilian internees.

Q. What arrangements for systematic aid to prisoners has the American Red Cross been able to make, to date

A. Immediately after the entry of the United States into he war, the American Red Cross arranged for regular distribution of standard food parcels to all Americans held in Germany and Italy through the International Red Cross Committee's Agency in Geneva. It also started negotiations through diplomatic and Red Cross channels for a neutral vessel to make regular sailings with supvlies for prisoners in the Far East, but so far Japan has not granted safe conduct for such a vessel.

Q. What are the Red Cross services to the armed forces?

A. These services include hospital and convalescent service; home service for the ablebodied and hospitalized men and their families; blood plasma for the Army and Navy; emergency supplies for the armed forces and chapter produced supplies suvh as surgical dressings; assitance to the disabled men and their families of this and past wars; and assistance to prisoners of war. For the men overseas, in addition to the above services, special welfare and recreational activities are provided. The Red Cross today operates more than 150 clubs and rest centers overseas for American enlisted men on leave, and reaches soldiers even at the remotest posts by means of clubmobiles.

Q. What is the Red Cross set-up at Army posts and naval stations?

A. At the large camps and stations there are Red Cross headquarters and hospital recreation buildings. A Red Cross field director is in charge, with an assistant field director and other assistants on duty when the size of the force requires additional help Red Cross volunteers also serve.

Q. Is the Red Cross responsible for the welfare of the families of the men in the armed forces?

A. Yes, this obligation is imposed by its Congressional charter. Red Cross Home Service provides "basic maintenance" when public relief is not available, and gives special financial aid and other forms of practical aid. This frees the soldier of home worries

Q. For what purpose are loans made by the Red Cross to service men?

A. For furlough transportation and other emergency needs, upon approval of the commading officer and after consultation with the home chapter.

Q. What is the Red Cross definition of a disaster?

A. A situation usually catastrophic in nature, where many persons are made helpless and in need of medical care food, clothing and shelter.

Q. What disasters call the Red Cross into action?

A. Foods, tornadoes, hurricanes, fires explosions, train wrecks, bus and ship wrecks, earthquakes, epidemics, and mine disasters.

Q. Would persons affected by sabotage or enemy action be given relief by the Red Cross?

A. Yes, such victims would receive emergency assistance of food, clothing, and shelter by the Red Cross, and further help may be given if the Red Cross is requested to do so by the Office of Civilian Defense and the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service.

Q. How far does the Red Cross go in meeting the needs of victims of natural disasters?

A. The Red Cross will meet that part of need caused by disaster which is beyond the ability of the family to cope with through the use of its own resources of cash, credit, and labor.

Q. On what authority does the Red Cross give disaster relief?

A. Its Congressional charter makes it the official agency for disaster relief.

Q. On how many disasters does the Red Cross give assistance each year?

A. Approximately 150, or three each week.

Q. What is the average number of mamilies receiving such aid each year?

A. An average of 40,000 families or 200,000 persons.

Q. What is a Red Cross nurse?

A. She is a graduate, registered nurse who meets a definite professional standard, set up by the Red Cross Nursing Service. Professional nurses enroll in the Red Cross because they wish to be listed as both qualified and willing to serve their country. The Red Cross War Reserve is the official reserve for both the Army and Navy Nurse Corps.

Q. Are Army and Navy nurses Red Cross nurses

A. The Red Cross is the official recruiting agency for the Army and Navy Nurse Corps and all Army nurses must have their credentials certified by the Red Cross.

Q. Does the Red Cross employ public health nurses?

A. Yes usually in the rural areas.

Q. Is the Red Cross responsible for first aid instruction in the U. S. armed forces? In the Office of Civilian Defense?

A. The Red Cross has the responsibility for providing competent first aid instructors and extends the service as requested to the Army and Navy and civilian defense personnel.

Q. How does one go about donating blood for the Army and Navy?

A. Phone the Red Cross Blood Donor Center if there is one in your vicinity Appointments must be made ahead of time.

Q. How many blood donor centers are there in the country? Where are they located?

A. There are 24 blood donor centers located in the following cities: Baltimore, Boston, Brooklyn, Buffalo Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, Harrisburg, Hartford Indianapolis, Kansas City (MO.), Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh Rochester (New York), San Francisco, Schenectady, St. Louis, and Washington, D. C.

Q. How many units of blood have been requested by the Army and Navy?

A. The amount requested by the Army and Navy is 4,000,000 pints. Of this amount, approximately 1,500,000 have been obtained. The rate of blood donations is 50,000 pints a week

"The Greatest Mother"

Somewhere, on some distant battlefield an American soldier will be wounded in action today. He may be your son. Or the laughing, tow-headed kid that only yesterday lived in a house down the street. Remember?

Strong but tender hands will carry him back to an Army dressing station. A blood transfusion may be required to save his life—blood contributed to the American Red Cross by thousands of Americans back home.

He will be brought to a base hospital where Army nurses, recruited by the American Red Cross, will dress his wounds. Sympathetic Red Cross workers will advise his family of his progress, and, as he convalesces, other Red Cross workers will help speed his recovery.

* * * *

Somewhere tonight an American boy is longing for home. He may be in bomb-scarred London—in far-off Australia, in a Pacific island jungle, or on a North African desert.

But his heart and his mind will be back in the States, at the home fireside. He will long to pat the head of that frisky pup, to laugh again with the girl who awaits his return; to live the life of a civilized man.

If he can, he will go to the American Red Cross club. It wont be the home for which he longs. It will only be a substitute—an antidote for loneliness. But there he will find a warm welcome, an American style meal, a comfortable bed. He may sit down to write letters to the folks back home. He will find entertainment to relieve his mind of the thoughts that pass through the minds of homesick men.

He may be at some distant outpost, far removed from that Red Cross club. But tonight or the next night, the Red Cross will come to him bringing relief from the boredom and horrow of war.

* * * *

Somewhere, today, an American service man needs help. He may be at a distant domestic camp or base, on a ship, in an unfrendly prison camp. He may be almost anywhere.

"Wherever he is, there also is the Amercian Red Cross, offering him its many resources. Whether his problem is personal, physical, mental or financial, the Red Cross stands ready to assist him and his family. Even the barbed wire enclosures of prison camps are no barrier to the Red Cross. Through its affiliation with the International Red Cross Committee, it breaches all hatreds to bring food, articles of comfort, and to re-establish the line of communication between the military prisoner and his loved ones at home.

At the disposal of every American serviceman are Red Cross field directors in the war front, home service workers in the local chapters and millions of volunteers.

Thus, the Red Cross serves the serviceman.

* * * *

Somewhere, sometime, disaster will strike some community. It may be your town, ravaged by storm and flood—or enemy action.

When that disaster strikes, the Red Cross—your Red Cross—the one to which you always have contributed—will be on the job. It will feed and shelter the suffering. If necessary, it will help to rebuild their town, their homes.

The Red Cross will be there because it is part of the community, made up of people representative of the community. When the period of emergency ends, it will still be there—on the job.

* * * *

Somewhere, every minute of the hour, every hour of the day, every day of the year, the Red Cross is helping someone.

Won't you help, too?

MOTHER'S BEST FEEDS
at Farmers Union Cooperative

FOR A LONG TIME EXPERIENCED STOCK RAISERS AND POULTRYMEN IN MANY PARTS OF ALABAMA HAVE BEEN USING MOTHERS BEST FEEDS WITH EXCELLENT RESULTS THEY FIND THAT THESE SCIENTIFICALLY BLENDED FEEDS MEAN MORE MILK, HEAVIER SWINE, FASTER GROWING CHICKENS AND TURKEYS, AND BETTER LAYING HENS. THEY ALSO FIND THESE FEEDS REALLY SAVE— MONEY—FOR MOTHERS BEST FEEDS ACTUALLY COST YOU LESS.

Yes, MOTHER'S BEST Feeds cost you less because they are made right here in Alabama—by the Alabama Flour Mills, in Decatur—from high-quality grains brought to the mill door by cheap barge transportation. Or grains purchased from close-by Tennessee Valley farmers. Thus the mill saves money on transportation, passes this saving on to us, and WE PASS IT ON TO YOU AS LOWER PRICES!

Buy Mother's Best Feeds Instead of Our Former CO-OP Brand

We will discontinue selling our widely-known CO-OP Brand in line with the Government's request to conserve bags. Private brands are being eliminated wherever possible so this material can be used for war purposes. Besides, our CO-OP Brand contains certain ingredients which are becoming very difficult to obtain. However, in the tried and proven MOTHER'S BEST Feeds you get every ingredient needed to produce good, rich milk; fast growing swine, turkeys and chickens; more and better eggs.

Uncle Sam wants you to produce more and better cattle, swine and poultry. MOTHER'S BEST Feeds will help you do this at less cost. Come in—let us explain why!

"One of my ancestors," the Englishman was saying, "won a battle against the Normans by skillful use of his artillery."

"Don't be silly!" retorted his bored companion. "Gunpowder wasn't known then."

"I'm well aware of that, and so was my ancestor."

"Then how did he win the battle?"

"He aimed the artillery at the Normans, and the idiots, seeing the guns, thought gunpowder had been invented. So they hopped it!"

Hiding Again

"Do I understand you to say," asked the magistrate, "that when you heard a noise you got out of bed, turned on the light, and went to the head of the stairs—that a burglar was at the foot of the stairs and you did not see him? Are you blind?"

"Must I tell the exact truth?" asked the witness, as he blushed furiously.

"Yes, the truth and nothing but the truth."

"Well," replied the man slowly, "my wife was in front of me."

The Leavings

Boy (returning just as train is pulling out, chewing wildly on a ham on white)—Here's your quarter, mister. They only had one sandwich.

Just a Gold Digger

Him (looking in jeweler's window)—How would you like to have your pick in there?

Her—I'd rather have a shovel.

Salesgirl—Here's a lovely sentiment: "To the only girl I ever loved."

Sailor—That's the stuff. Give me a dozen of them.

For the Duration

It was at Bordeaux after the Armistice in 1918. One of a work detail was a little slow about unloading a box car. "All right, soldier, snap into it," said the sergeant.

"Aw, shucks, sarge," he replied, "I enlisted for the war, and it's over."

"Yeah," replied the sergeant, "you enlisted for the war all right. But you enlisted for the duration, too. The war's over, soldier, but the duration has just begun."

Favorite Desserts

"We like desserts that take fruits, but use little sugar," is the verdict many homemakers give on the dessert problem. Thus, I'm including in today's column several desserts that take citrus fruits now in season —fruits that mean quick-pick-up from tiredness because of the good nutritional values.

As regards the sugar question, most homemakers are finding they can spare some sugar for cooking or baking, and that is why our desserts take some of that sweetening.

Don't starve that sweet tooth entirely, for the body needs some carbohydrate foods daily to meet the large demands of daily energy. These dessert recipes are tailor-made to fit your budget and demand for sweets.

Pie's a favorite, and especially so when it's made with a cornflake crust and luscious lemon custard filling:

*Lemon Custard Pie.

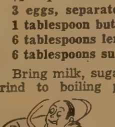
Crust:

- 1¼ cups cornflakes
- 1½ cups sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅔ cup shortening
- 3 tablespoons water

Crush cornflakes into fine crumbs; mix well with flour and salt. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until mixture looks like cornmeal. Mix with water just to hold together and let stand in icebox for about 2 hours. Roll dough about ⅛ inch thick, line pie pan with pastry and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) about 15 minutes. Cool and fill shell with:

Lemon Custard:

- 1 cup milk
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 4 tablespoons cornstarch
- ½ cup water
- 3 eggs, separated
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 6 tablespoons lemon juice
- 6 tablespoons sugar for meringue



Bring milk, sugar, salt and lemon rind to boiling point over direct heat. Add cornstarch which has been dissolved in a little water and cook in double boiler for 5 minutes. Beat egg yolks until light. Remove cooked mixture from egg yolks and add to well beaten egg yolks. Add butter and lemon juice. Cool. Pour into pie shell. Top with meringue made by beating in 6 tablespoons of sugar into the egg whites, slowly, and whipping until it stands in peaks. Bake in a 300-degree oven for about 15 minutes or until meringue is lightly browned.

If it's cake you like, then you'll like an orange-lemon flavored cake—made with only one egg but personality plus:

Honey Orange Cake.

- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup honey
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 2 cups all-purpose enriched flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup finely shredded orange peel
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind or flavoring

Cream shortening. Add sugar gradually, then honey, creaming constantly. Beat in egg. Sift dry ingredients thoroughly (flour, soda, baking powder and salt); add orange peel. Combine orange juice and flavoring. Add dry ingredients and orange juice alternately to mixture, beginning and ending with flour mixture. Spread in well greased pan. (Mixture is quite thick.) Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 45 minutes. Let stand 6 to 8 minutes before removing from pan. Serve plain, iced or with hot fruit sauce, warm or cold.

A trifle that isn't a trifle is this orange dessert—if you want something pretty special for that day of a special dinner. This is simple for you can use leftover cake or sponge cake:

Orange Trifle.
(Serves 6)

- Cake or lady fingers
- Orange juice
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon enriched flour
- 2 cups scalded milk
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon flavoring

Cut cake into small pieces or split lady fingers and fill dessert dishes about half full. Pour on as much orange juice as cake will absorb. Prepare a custard as follows: Blend eggs, sugar, flour, thoroughly. Add hot milk slowly, cook over hot water until thick, stirring constantly. Cool promptly. Add salt and flavoring. Pour over cake. Chill several hours or overnight. Serve cold.

Getting eggs and milk into the diet in sufficient quantity to meet the body's demands sometimes presents a problem but not if you include a delightful honey custard for dessert:

Baked Honey Custard.

- 4 cups scalded milk
- 8 tablespoons strained honey
- 4 to 6 eggs
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Nutmeg or cinnamon

Scald milk in double boiler, add honey. Beat eggs and [illegible] hot milk, stirring mixture rapidly. Add salt and mix well. Pour into buttered custard cups. Dust lightly with cinnamon or nutmeg. Set cups in pan of warm water and place in oven. Bake in a slow (325-degree) oven until knife comes out clean when inserted in custard. Remove cups from pan of water immediately. Serve hot or cold.

Cake Making? Bread Making? Cookie Baking? Budget Fixing? Housekeeping? You name the problem and explain it. Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice if you write to her, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your reply, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Use sauerkraut with pork if you like it. No kraut will be canned, but the USDA is helping producers to put it up in barrels. It's said barrel-packed kraut has a superior flavor.

The postman may ring twice but the laundryman can't. Laundries may not deliver clean clothes in the morning and pick up soiled ones in the afternoon. Everything must be done at the same time.

War industries need gas, so it is suggested you save on gas, in every possible way if you are a gas user. Economize it in cooking, water heating and refrigeration.

It looks like nationwide graded meat is just around the corner. The only thing holding it back is a shortage of trained government graders. Now, three out of four "big" meat packers use grading.

JESUS RESTORES LAZARUS TO LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 11:32-35, 38-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the resurrection, and the life."—John 11:25.

Suffering, sorrow and bereavement are so common in our day that this lesson is peculiarly appropriate. Life, even to the Christian, finds its full measure of things which hurt and grieve. Many ask: "Why must I, a follower of Christ, bear such burdens?"

The answer is, that while the believer is not "of the world," he is "in the world," and here he must meet the problems of life, including the evils to which the flesh is heir because of sin. The fact that Jesus is our Friend and our Saviour does not exempt us from human sorrow, but it does assure us of the needed grace to bear the trial and makes us ready to trust Him even in life's darkest hour.

Lazarus, the friend of Jesus, was sick. The home in which Jesus had found rest and fellowship was in deep trouble. Jesus was no longer in Judea. In haste, word was sent to Him of His friend's illness. But He did not come.

Why does He delay? Such is the heart-cry of thousands today who call on Him in their hour of trouble. The purposes of God we cannot fully understand. We need only to trust Him and abide His time.

Notice that His failure to respond at once to the message of Lazarus' sisters did not mean that He had deserted them (John 11:4-6). Nor did it mean that He had denied them His help (v. 7).

Above all, note that He came. He always does. Jesus has never failed any child of His. The time and the manner of His answer to our prayers may not conform to our opinion of what should have been done; but let us remember that we know only in part. He knows all. Let us trust Him. Job, in his darkest hour, said: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him" (Job 13:15).

The steps from sorrow to victorious joy in this story are three in number.

I. Death and Tears (vv. 32-25).

By the time Jesus came, Lazarus was dead and his family and friends could only weep as they said: "If thou hadst been here—" Try as we may to temper its cruel blow, the fact remains that death is the enemy of man. It came into the world as the result of sin (Rom. 5:12), and only in Christ is it "swallowed up in victory" (I Cor. 15:54). Until the glorious day of Christ's returning, when the redemption of the body will be complete (Rom. 8:23), death will continue to bring sorrow to the heart and tears to the eyes.

But let us not fail to notice that as the friends of Jesus, we do not sorrow alone. "Jesus wept" (v. 35) with Martha and Mary. We know that He weeps with us in our trying hour. He is the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother." He is the one who gives grace to meet the deepest sorrow, and to bear it with grace because of His tender fellowship.

II. Faith and Hope (vv. 38-40).

"If thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God," said Jesus to Martha. She must look beyond the evident fact of the deadness of her brother and see God's glory in his resurrection. Thus faith assures us that those who believe in Christ have more than the comfort of His sympathizing presence—they have a sure hope (read I Thess. 4:14-18).

Sorrow and unbelief would becloud our faith and thus rob us of our hope. Martha needed to have her faith stimulated by the gracious words of the Lord; and then she triumphantly put her hope in Him, the Christ of God. Once we recognize Him as God, we have no hesitation in believing in His miraculous power.

III. Christ and Resurrection (vv. 41-44).

Majestic and authoritative are the words of Christ, "I am the resurrection and the life" (v. 25). He it was who gave life, for was He not "in the beginning with God"? And is it not said of Him, that "all things were made by him" (John 1:2, 3)? Paul tells us that "by him all things consist" (Col. 1:17). He is the only one who could say: "I lay down my life . . . I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again" (John 10:17, 18).

So it can rightly be said that if we have Christ we have everything—both in this world and in the world to come. But if we do not have Christ, we have nothing; we are without God and without hope. "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (v. 25) is the promise of Christ to us. Let us believe it.

The resurrection power of Christ is at work in the world today raising the spiritually dead to newness of life in Him.

May we see many such a Lazarus called forth—loosed from the grave clothes of sin and set free.

JOINT RESOLUTION BY SEN. LISTER HILL FOR SPECIAL AWARDS TO FARMERS

JOINT RESOLUTION: Providing for awards of honor for agricultural production.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to make awards of honor, with suitable insignia, to persons who are engaged in the production of any food or fiber essential to the war effort. Such awards shall be made to all such persons who are certified to the Secretary of War by the Secretary of Agriculture as having made outstanding contributions to the war effort.

Sec. 2. The Sec. of War and Sec. of Agriculture are each authorized to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this joint resolution.

Sec. 3. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out this joint resolution.

Farming For Victory

"Major projects of food and livestock have been planned by the boys enrolled in vocational agriculture at the Chiton County High School in order to help meet the food needs of our Nation," states J. H. Jackson teacher of vocational agriculture.

The boys are working out detailed plans of job operations in the vocational classes to better carry out each project. Jackson states further, "experimental data is studied and the boys take the facts learned in class and apply them to the soil where actual experience is gained."

Boys who have planned to produce chickens and eggs have incl much in their farm shop progra construction of a lamp type suitable brooder.

ALABAMA PORTABLE MILLERS

THE GOAT THAT HIDES IN A CAVE

Malta is a little rocky island in the Mediterranean Sea not so very far from Italy. It is the most bombed place in all the world because the Axis seeks desperately to wrest it from England.

There are farmers in Malta, as there are farmers in America. They lead a dangerous life; work when they can and hide when they must. Even the goats have learned to scamper for the caves when the planes are overhead.

We who are free and independent farmers — how would we like to live and work with such terrible odds against us? That is why, as we sell our crops and milk and eggs, we must buy Bonds. We must buy Bonds to the full limit of our ability.

There is another very good reason for buying Bonds, aside from helping to win this war. They are a real investment backed by the strongest government in the world. They return a third more than you pay for them in ten years. They never depreciate in value. And you can always cash them after sixty days if you need the money. Buy Bonds now . . . keep on buying—from your bank or post office.

Postmaster Lowe has asked us to / a word to the mail route patrons out sending letters into the post-ice by the mail carriers without any umps on them. It s a fact that the rriers bring between 4 and 5 hun-ed, pennies each day and more than hundred letters. This often causes much delay in sorting and stawping it all of the letters miss the after-on train that they were intended for stmaster Lowe pointed out that ch carrier, at all times, has stamps sale and he requests that instead putting the letters and the pennies t for your mail man, buy the stamps d have the letters ready to drop in bag at the postoffice, thus saving uable time and getting that import-t letter off a day earlier.

A certain citizen of our town has en suffering from diebetes for sev-al years and has been under the re of a physician. His diet was some rt of canned vegetables that recently came under the rationing program. Upon advice and a letter from his Dr. he went to the rationing board to see if he couldn't get some of the canned goods. The first thing the lady asked was for his "A" gas rationing book. Figure it out for yourself. Anybody should know the connection between diebetes and gas rationing books.

County Agent Gives Some Tips On Victory Garden

A successful Victory Garden is another step toward Victory, states County Agent, P. H. Smith, who offers the following tips on how to make your garden a success:

1. Have a garden large enough to supply vegetables generously for all the year. Half an acre, if well planned, is enough for the average family.

2. Improve the soil texture and enrich it by adding (a) lime, if a soil test shows need for t; (b) generous amount of well rotted manure—15 to 20 loads per acre or all that can be plowed under; (c) plenty of commercial Victory formula 3-8-7 fertilizer applied broadcast after plowing and harrowed in—one-half to one ton per acre, or one pound to every 25 to 40 square feet.

3. Make and follow a garden plan. Include a large variety of vegetables to meet the health needs of the family. Be sure to plant green, leafy vegetables generously.

4. Get good seed to tested varieties from reliable seedmen.

5. If you are a farmer, arrange most of the garden for horse cultivation, where possible. Group quick-growing, early crops that will be replaced by later crops.

6. To have vegetables all summer long, make two or more plantings of such vegetables as beans, cowpeas, turnip greens, okra, carrots, beets, cabbages, and tomatoes. Keep the ground in use by replacing early crops with vegetables that mature later.

7. Cultivate as needed throughout the season to keep down weeds to keep the soil in good condition.

Turkey Hunting Season To Open March 20TH

Oldtime turkey hunters, and a smattering of new addicts to the sport of attempting to outwit old king Turkey Tom, are putting in final licks on their callers in preparation for Alabama's annual spring wild turkey hunting season. Season opens March 20th. From then until sunset of April 15th gobbling season will be open.

Children Study Safety-First At Thomas Jr.

We invited Mr. White our principal to talk to us about safety first at our School.

Mr. White sent Nell Popwell and Willie Mae Blalock, two girls from his room to talk to us. Their safety reminders were:

Do not run or push in the school building. Be careful when one is burning paper. Do not run or play with pencils, knives, or sticks. (Put fruit peelings in the scrap buckets. Do not sling ball bats. Do not throw rocks or sticks. Do not push while people are getting in and out of the school bus. Do not run in front of school bus while it is moving.

Next we invited Mr. Propst the highway patrolman, to talk to us about Safety First in town and on the highway. His safety reminders were:

Walk facing the oncoming cars. Walk on the edge of the Highway. Look both ways and, listen before crossing the highway. Do not skate on the highway, it is against the law. Do no hang on to moving vehicles. Put a light on a wagon or buggy that will shine at least fifty feet at night. Watch the traffic lights in town. Do not step into the street until the light turns [illegible] Put a head light and tail light on bicycles. Also put mirrow on the left handlebar. Always run from danger.

Dr. P. T. Hinkle Died Suddenly Wednesday

Dr. P. T. Hinkle, age about 65, died suddenly at his home in Southwest Clanton Wednesday morning at 5:00 o'clock. Funeral servcies will be held Thursday, (to-day) afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, in the charge of Dr. S. J. Ezell and Rev. Roswell E. Owens. Spigener Funeral Home will direct. The wife survives.

Dr. Hinkle was born at Galveston Texas; has been a resident of this county for some twenty-five years. For many years he actively practiced his profession of veterinary medicine, and worked for the State in that capacity for some time. He always took an active part in community activities, and was one of Chilton County's leading citizens.

Dr. Frazier To Speak At Methodist Sunday

Dr. Stanley Frazier, District Superintendent of the Selma District, will preach at the Methodist Church here Sunday at 7:30 o'clock. He will hold the first Quarterly Conference of the Clanton Methodist Church immediately after services.

Preaching At Three Churches On The Clanton Circuit

Sunday there will be preaching services at three of the churches on the Clanton Circuit. Bro. I. P. Kennedy, our layman from Walnut Creek will be the guest speaker at Cedar Grove at 11 a. m. And at Shady Grove I will fill my pulpit there which is our regular preaching time. And at Walnut Creek the Rev. C. W. Northcutt will preach at the 11 o'clock hour. The week of Dedication is observed throughout Methodism, and we hope that gracious services will be held in all our churches. On Thursday night the preacher and his wife will be host and hostess to a social and fellowship hour at the Walnut Creek church for ehe entire church community. We trust that the weather will be favorable and nice time will be had by all. On Friday at three o'clock at the parsonage the Children's Popeye Pipe Band will be held.—Rev.Reese Farnell.

Committee Plans 1943 Scout Activities

Clanton Boy Scout District plans are well underway for the spring season according to Field Scout Executive Charles B. McKee of the Montgomery Area Council, who spent last week in Clanton and vicinity inspecting the units and helping plan the coming activities.

All units are registering for a new Troop year with Troop 57 of Clanton, Troop 52 of Alabama Mills, Troop 60 of Thorsby and the possibility of a new unit at Jemison.

The Council effeciency contest for all Troops in the Area started this week and the local units are vieing for honors when the contest closes late in May. Troops are rated on meetings, advancement, camping, community service, and other activities related to Scouting.

The Clanton Boy Scout Camporee dates have been set for April 30, and May 1st, when all units will camp for a period with each other, providing their own leadership, program, tentage food and cooking and other equipment. The District Board of Review will be held Tuesday, March 23, at the High School with Prof. Patterson Hicks in charge. Scouts will appear for review of applications for advancement in rank and merit. Another Board of Review will be held April 27 in order to permit Scouts to appear at the Court of Honor to be held at the Camporee Campfire on April 30.

Field Executive McKee will be in Clanton on a scheduled visit on March 22, 23, and 24th to assist the District and Troops with activities and problems of Scouting nature.

Representatives Of FDA Meet With Local School Heads

Last Wednesday Morning the principals of the schools in Chilton County with Miss McKee and Miss Barber and others representing the lunch rooms in the schools, met together with Miss Mary Ling Hayley and R. E. Cammack, both from the State Department of Education and Herbert D. Rorex, of the Food Distribution Administration, in the office of Supt. Delos Culp, to clerify just how the F. D. A. could work with Mr. Culp and the school principals in the county to improve the lunches and to make it possible for every child in every school to have the same lunch as to a nutritional standpoint. The idea is to be worked out in a simular manner to milk distribution in the schools. With the consent of those present the F. D. A. and State Dept. of Education decided to try the project in Chilton County and see how it would work out before trying it in other schools. It will not only benefit the children nutritionally but will also furnish a market for the sale of local vegetables while they are fresh. The school in each community will buy all the food possible for that lunch room from their community. The F. D. A. and State Department of Education, do not wish to try to carry on this project by themselves, they consider it a means to help with improving the condition in the school physcally and nutritionally, and also be able to keep in closer contact with each principal and their school lunch room.

Farm Security Makes 55 Loans

The Farm Security Administration in Chilton County has made 55 loans to enable tenant farmers to become home owners. These 55 farmers have proved that they can and will pay for these farms, Marvin Durbin, RR Supervisor, stated today, and proof of their ability to pay for these farms is that they paid during 1942, 124 per cent of all maturities that were due during last year. These farmers are not only paying for their farms but they are doing their part in helping to win the war by producing crops, livestock, and livestock products needed by our soldiers and our allies.

A LONGER STAPLE COTTON URGED BY COUNTY AGENT

Would you be interested in helping win this war by just changing the variety of seed you will plant this year? If you will and have been planting a short stapled cotton, read the rest of this article.

According to the best information available we have over a two year supply of American cotton in the warehouses in this country now. A very large percentage of this cotton is short stapled and of a low grade this type cotton can not be used in the manufacture of many articles needed in our War Effort, therefore the greatest demand is for longer stapled cotton. We are all familiar with the shortage of labor and fertilizer. We can grow long staple cotton with the same amount of labor and fertilizer that is required in growing short stapled cotton. At the time this article is being written there is a difference of 120 points on the Montgomery market between middling cotton one inch staple and middling cotton 7-8 inch staple. This difference is in favor of the inch staple.

A very high percentage of Chilton County farmers are now growing a longer stapled cotton. Government reports show that about 90 per cent of the cotton grown in Chilton County in 1942 stapled 31-32 inch or better This is a very good record and it is hoped that this record will be even better this coming year.

Deltapine (DPL) is a variety of cotton that does well under Chilton County conditions. The remarkable record made in this county last year on staple length was due, mainly, to this variety cotton. The highest yields that have been made in this county for the past several years have been made with DPL cotton. The improved strains of this variety will produce satisfactory staple length even under unfavorable growing conditions. There are several other varieties that were grown in Chilton County in 1942 that produced satisfactory staple lengths but we had favorable weather conditions for producing maximum staple lengths last year.

Fortunately, there is a supply of the improved DPL seed available that were grown in the county last year some of these seed are in almost every community in the county..

After studying the situation the conclusion is reached that from a financial and patriotic standpoint the wise farmer will plant a longer staple cotton in 1943. For further information on the above, contact your County Agent.

Hunters May Get Shells After All

Sportsmen may expect some relief from the shotgun ammunition shortage before opening of hunting season next fall. That's the encouraging news Chief Ben C. Morgan, of the Game, Fish and Seafoods Division, Alabama Department of Conservation, brought back from the recent North American Wildlife Conference at Denver, Colo.

Belief was expressed by a WPB representative who spoke at the meeting that a "reasonable amount" of 12 and 16 guage shotgun ammunition would be available before Fall.

NUTRITION CLASS

A series of meetings began on Tuesday March 2nd at 4 o'clock, on nutrition. The meetings are being held at the home economic department at the Chilton County High School. All home makers are invited to attend.

IMPORTANT CHURCH NOTICE

It becomes very important that I call the Walnut Creek entire membership and church officials into session Friday nght at 7:30 p. m. As previously announced we will have our social hour after the church conference.—Rev. Reese Farnell.

Schools To Open At 8 O'clock And Close At 1:30

Beginning next Monday, March 8, all Chilton County Schools will begin work at 8:00 o'clock in the morning and dismiss at 1:30 in the afternoon. This schedule was adopted by the Chilton County Board of Education to enable school children to do more farm work. and other war work. This new school day will work a hardship on some children who have to leave home so early in the morning and on some children who have no farm work to do, but the scarcity of farm labor seems to indicate a real need for help from school children. In some instances, school boys are the sole dependence for operating a farm. In wany cases, families cannot tend their farm wth the help of children who are in school.

In normal times, 6 hours make a srhool day. That is, 6 hours of actual work time. Under the new schedule, a total of 5 and one-half hours will be available to the teachers and pupils for their day's work. The Board feels that good work can be done during the shortened day if work programs are planned carefully. Play periods, lunch hour, and recess time will be greatly reduced. School operating lunchrooms will continue to serve lunches around the middle of the day.

School authorities hope that all school children will do some war work every day. Many school children who do not live on farms work two hours a day, or more, in home gardens, or in scrap collecting, earning money to buy war stamps, or making articles for soldiers. It is hoped that Chilton County School children who do not live on farms will find useful war work to do in after-school hours.

F. F. A. Members Plant Pine Trees

With the cooperation of the State Chamber of Commerce, ten (10) Clanton F.F.A. Members have secured and planted 15,000 pine trees on their farm These 10 boys realize that all land needs to be used to its best advantages; therefore these trees were set on the steep, poorer land that was unprofitable in row crops.

Trees were set on the average of 6 feet by 7 feet. This distance in planting will save pruning. They will be thinned later, to about 18 by 21, using the tree cut out for wood, etc.

The following boys have planted trees for future income and wood: Joe Gillispie, Erskine Baker, Edwin Taylor, Willie Easterling, Acie Mims, Hilman Mims, James Dunlap, Thomas White and Olious Bean.

AGENCY HEADS MEET AND DISCUSS CIVILIAN DEFENSE

Methods of caring for Chilton County citizens in the event of actual or threatened enemy action were discussed at a recent meeting of County Defense Council Chairman, Mayor Cohen E. Stapp; County Red Cross Chairman, I. S. Levine; and Director of Chilton County Department of Public Welfare, Miss Martha F. Burt.

These three agencies endorsed an agreement recently made by the manager of the Eastern Area of American Red Cross, the Commissioner of the State Department of Public Welfare, and Chairman of the State Defense Council, whereby areas of responsibility in the event of attack were defined. According to the agreement, Red Cross will render group care, and the Department of Public Welfare will render individual care in such an emergency. Federal funds have been authorized for Civilian War Assistance and will be expended by the Department of Public Welfare in rendering individual family care.

It will take some time for the County agencies to perfect the plans for operation, but it is comforting to know that in the event of enemy action, the agencies are ready to act, if necessary.

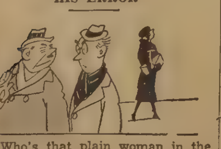
HIS ERROR



"Who's that plain woman in the funny hat?"

"My wife."

"Pardon me—my mistake."

"No, mine!"

Wrong Dose

A professor at medical school asked a student how much of a certain drug should be administered to a patient. "Five grains," replied the young man.

A minute later he raised his hand. "Professor," he said, "I would like to change my answer to that question."

The professor looked at his watch. "Never mind, young man," he said, "your patient has been dead for 40 seconds."

The Cure-All

A man went to his doctor and requested treatment for his ankle.

After a careful examination the doctor inquired: "How long have you been going about like this?"

"Two weeks."

"Why, man, your ankle is broken. How you managed to get around at all is a mystery. Why didn't you come to me before?"

"Well, doctor, every time I say anything is wrong with me, my wife declares I'll have to stop smoking."

A Likely Story

A man was walking along a Berlin street muttering to himself, "And all this trouble for one man."

A policeman overheard him and arrested him. When he appeared before the judge the latter asked him to which man he was referring. The reply was "Winston Churchill," and the case was dismissed.

As the man was leaving the courthouse he met the policeman who had arrested him.

"What man did you think I meant when you arrested me?" he asked.

WITHOUT BENEFIT?

"There are times when benefit may be derived from the advice of a fool."

"You certainly shouldn't complain. Haven't I always listened to yours?"

Daredevil Decoy

The duty officer at a coast observation post watched a lonely British bomber flying up and down a stretch of clear sky.

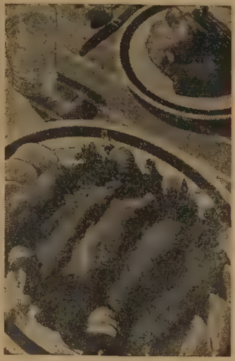
"Get into communication with that fool," he roared, "and tell him it's dangerous to fly like that."

In due time the reply of the solitary airman was reported to him. It ran:

"It's all right. I'm only the bait. There are 20 Spitfires keeping above the clouds and watching."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Fish Fulfills Protein Needs of the System



Fish fillets served with juicy lemon wedges and generous garnishes of radish roses and parsley make an attractive main dish.

Fish Is Flavorful

One very direct and effective way of meeting the meat shortage is by serving fish in its many delectable ways. Few families have been initiated into the many ways of preparation for fish, few know how succulent are their steaks when baked, or how tart and crisp are fillets when fried.

Bones have been removed from many types of fish so this need concern the cook little. If they have not already been removed, this can be done easily since they are usually together.

French Fried Fish Fillets.

Desired number and kind of fish fillets
1 egg, well beaten with 1 tablespoon water
Crumbs, corn meal, flour or potato meal
Salt and pepper
Salad oil for frying

Wash fillets in cold water, drain on absorbent paper. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; dip first in dry coating—(crumbs or other if preferred), then in egg mixture and again in dry coating. Place in deep salad oil—(375 to 385 degrees)—or hot enough to brown a 1-inch cube of bread in 40 to 50 seconds.

Fish is good when baked—especially with tomatoes and green pepper:

Baked Whitefish, Creole.
(Serves 5 to 6)

2½ pounds whitefish, cleaned and boned
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup green pepper, chopped
1 tablespoon flour
1¾ cups tomato soup
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Place fish in greased baking dish, skin side down. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and brush with one tablespoon of the melted butter. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 15 minutes. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in saucepan and add chopped onion and green pepper. Simmer five minutes. Add flour and blend thoroughly. Then add tomato soup, salt and worcestershire sauce. Cook until mixture thickens, then pour it over the partially baked whitefish. Return to oven for 20 minutes more or until fish flakes easily.

Halibut is another good, substantial dish. Mild in flavor, it needs a tart sauce to pick up its delicate flavors:

Lynn Says:

Sauces for Fish: They're a must with fish because they make it most delicious dish. You'll like browned butter with lemon juice and worcestershire sauce. Or, just cream the butter and season with lemon juice.

Horseradish is popular with fish. Take ½ cup drained, prepared horseradish, season with salt and pepper and one tablespoon vinegar, then fold in ½ cup of whipped cream.

Tartar is not just another name for sauce, it's an affinity with fish fillets. Make it by adding 1 teaspoon minced onion, 2 teaspoons chopped, sweet pickle, 1 teaspoon chopped green olives, and 1 tablespoon vinegar to ¾ cup mayonnaise.

Make a cup of medium-thick white sauce and add to this ½ cup grated cheese and let the cheese melt. Or, 2 chopped, hard-boiled eggs added to white sauce, make a golden crown for baked or fried fish.

This Week's Menu

*Baked Whitefish, Creole
Parsleyed Potatoes Broccoli
Watercress and Endive Salad
Oatmeal Bread Butter
Broiled Grapefruit
Beverage
*Recipe Given

Halibut Steaks.

Have center cut slices of halibut steak cut one inch thick, salt and pepper them and dredge lightly with flour. Fry to a light brown in butter. Remove to a platter and cover with sliced sauteed mushrooms, using about a pound for 2 steaks. Over this pour the following sauce:

Stew 1 No. 2 can of tomatoes with 1 cup of chopped celery, ½ chopped green pepper and 1 large chopped onion. When vegetables are tender, run all through a coarse sieve. Into this melt ¼ pound of grated cheese, 1 tablespoon of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Heat fish thoroughly in oven and just before serving sprinkle with cheese and run under flame to brown.

There's distinction in salmon when it's combined with discreet seasoning—lemon juice and tomato:

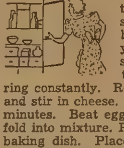
Baked Salmon Slices.

Salmon cut in individual servings
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 onion
1 tomato
Bacon strips

Brush slices of fish on both sides with the oil. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle with the lemon juice, salt and pepper. Then lay a thin slice of onion on each piece. Cover onion with a ¼-inch slice of tomato and top with a strip of bacon cut in two. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes.

Salmon Fondue.
(Serves 6)

5 slices bread
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup flaked, cooked salmon
3 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup grated American cheese



Trim crusts from bread and cut into ½-inch cubes. Heat milk in double boiler, add bread cubes, butter, liquid from salmon, and well-beaten egg yolks. Season with salt and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in cheese. Cool for 10 to 15 minutes. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Pour into greased baking dish. Place dish in pan of warm water and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 1 hour or until a knife when inserted comes out clean.

Note: Chopped shrimp, flaked tuna or minced clams or oysters may be used in place of the salmon.

A platter of fish with broccoli and corn fulfills a good portion of daily dietary requirements.

An early touch of spring goes into the menu with a fresh green salad:

Toss-Up Salad.
(Serves 6)

½ head lettuce
1 cup diced celery
2 fresh tomatoes
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 clove garlic
½ bunch radishes
½ bunch watercress
1 cup raw spinach leaves

Shred lettuce, dice celery, cut tomatoes and slice radishes. Cut eggs into slices. Rub salad bowl with garlic and add vegetables. Serve with French dressing.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBE

The importance of group riding as a rubber conservation practice has been demonstrated in Pontiac, Mich., where today 20,000 workers roll to war plants in 4,000 cars instead of the 15,000 cars they used daily earlier this year.

2,300 cities and towns with a total population of 12½ millions depend entirely upon automobiles for passenger transportation.

In 1896 The B. F. Goodrich Co. made the first fabric clincher type automobile tire in the 36 x 4 size.

A ton of rubber a year is the collection of the average Brazilian wild rubber gatherer. This explains why man power is the crux of the South American natural rubber problem.

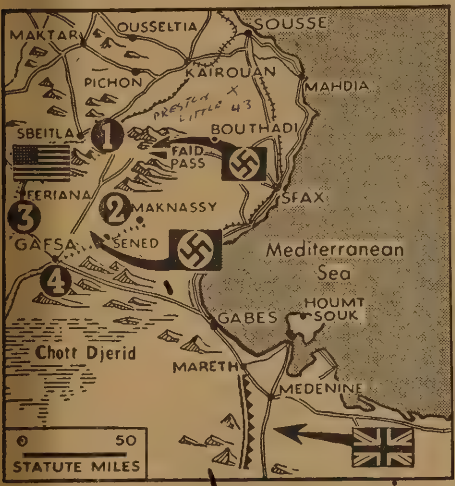
Where Yanks Faced Setback in Africa



The first big armament battle of North Africa gave a foretaste of the severe nature of the fighting which lies ahead of the Allies before the Axis can be cleared out of that front. With General Rommel's hardened tank fighters pressing westward to Sbeitla (1) and Feriana (3) from the Maknassy region (2), American troops were forced to re-form in the Tunisian hills to the north. The Allied forward base at Gafsa (4) had been abandoned earlier. The retirement from Gafsa was not completely unexpected.

BEDTIME STORY

Associated Newspapers WNU Features

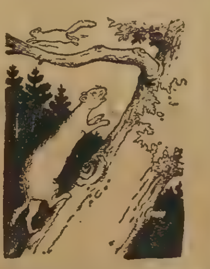
CHATTERER RUNS FOR HIS LIFE

CHATTERER THE RED SQUIRREL had been scolding because there was no excitement. He had even tried to make some excitement by waking Bobby Coon and making him so angry that Bobby had threatened to eat him alive. It had been great fun to dance around and call Bobby names and make fun of him. Oh, yes, it had been great fun. You see he knew all the time that Bobby couldn't catch him if he should try. But now things were different. Chatterer had all the excitement that he wanted. Indeed he had more than he wanted. The truth is Chatterer was running for his life and he knew it.

It is a terrible thing, a very terrible thing to have to run for one's life. Peter Rabbit knows all about it. He has run for his life often. Sometimes it has been Reddy Fox behind him, sometimes Bowser the Hound, and once or twice Old Man Coyote. Peter has known that on his long legs his life has depended and more than once a terrible fear has filled his heart. But Peter has also known that if he could reach the old stone wall or the dear old Brier Patch first he would be safe, and he always has reached it. So when he has been running with that terrible fear in his heart there has always been hope there, too.

But Chatterer the Red Squirrel was running without hope. Yes, sir, there was nothing but fear, terrible fear, in his heart, for he knew not where to go. The hollow tree or the holes in the old stonewall, where he would be safe from any one else, even Farmer Brown's Boy, offered him no safety now, for the one who was following him with hunger in his cruel red eyes could go anywhere that he could go—could go in any hole big enough for him to squeeze into. You see it was Shadow the Weasel from whom Chatterer was running, and Shadow is so slim that he can slip in and out of places that even Chatterer cannot get through.

Chatterer knew all this and so, because it was of no use to run to his usual safe hiding places, he ran in just the other direction. He didn't know where he was going. He had just one thought—to run and run as long as he could and then, well, he would try to fight, though he knew it would be of no use.



And Chatterer the Red Squirrel was running without hope.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" he sobbed as he ran out on the branch of a tree and leaped across to the next tree, "I wish I had minded my own business! I wish I had kept my tongue still. Shadow the Weasel wouldn't have known where I was if he hadn't heard my voice. Oh, dear! Oh, dear me! What can I do? What can I do?"

Now in his great fright Chatterer had run and jumped so hard that he was beginning to grow very tired. Presently he found that he must make a very long jump to reach the next tree. He had often made as long a jump as that and thought nothing of it, but now he was so tired that the distance looked twice as great as it really was. He didn't dare stop to run down the tree and scamper across. So he took a long breath, ran swiftly along the branch and leaped. His hands just touched the tip of the nearest branch of the other tree. He tried his very best to hold on, but he couldn't. Then down, down, down he fell. He spread himself out as flat as he could and that saved him a little, but still it was a dreadful fall and when he landed it seemed for just a minute as if all the breath was gone from his body. But it wasn't quite, and in another minute he was scrambling up the tree.

Convinced Him

"Tommy, I saw you fighting just now, don't you know it's wrong for little boys to fight?"

"Yes, sir, but Willie Jones didn't and I was provin' it to him."

ROY ROPER, PRESIDENT CLANTON BERRY GROWERS ASSOCIATION ESTIMATES $5,000,000 PEACH CROP

A $5,000,000 peach crop for Chilton County was the prediction this week of Roy Roper, president of the Clanton Berry Growers Association and himself, a successful peach grower.

Mr. Roper says that with a favorable season Chilton County will surpass last season's bumper crop and with sufficient help in the harvesting season will have a very successful year with its orchards.

Strawberries too, have an optomistic outlook this year according to Mr. Roper. With any kind of luck with the seasons, he says the county will produce as many, if not more, than was produced last year. This is in spite of the fact that at least twenty-five percent of the acreage in the county has been plowed under since last season.

All in all, it looks like a good year for the growers of fruits and berries in the county, and the Clanton Berry Growers Association is optomistic over the outlook for the year.

I AM THE AMERICAN SOLDIER

I am a mother's son. I am the pride of a family and part of a home. I love my life as you love yours. I am youth in years and experience in life, yet I am a gambler, betting the highest stakes that a man can wager—my life If I win, you win; if I lose, I have lost all. The loss is mine, not yours; and there is a grieved mother, a saddened family and a broken home to which I can never return.

I ask only for the godspeed and support of my nation in return for laying upon the alter of my country my all. For bravery and blood will you furnish bullets and bread? Will you pawn your sheckels if I pawn myself? Will you bet your gold while I bet my blood? Will you hazard your wealth while I risk my life? I am the flower of a nation's manhood, the glory of a noble race. I am the American soldier. I am the boy in the trenches.—Aux.

"ESSENTIAL"

That is a word that war-time has brought into everybody's vocabulary. Just now we apply it mostly to guns and tanks, planes and ships.

But remember, it has its application to your business too. Peace will come again. Human needs and desires will be just as numerous as they ever were If you want the name of your business to be remembered so that your services will find ready acceptance and you will not have to start from scratch once more, you must keep them before the public.

To stop advertising, to give up your printed contact is the one sure way to become the forgotten business in the new world that is eventually to come after this war is won.

Advertise and build good will to-day for to-morrow.

NOW

Is a Good Time to Do It

1. Oil motors of refrigerators with "open type" units. Clean radiator fins, coils or panels of all types. Dust on them decreases their efficiency. Disconnect your refrigerator before you oil or clean.

2. Clean and oil electric fans—both portable and stationary types.

3. BUY MORE WAR BONDS

4. Clean vacuum cleaner bag. Oil motor if not "sealed in" type.

5. Repair frayed or worn extension cords on lamps and portable appliances.

6. BUY MORE WAR BONDS

7. If not "sealed in" type, oil washing machine motor.

8. Get a carton of fuse plugs for replacement when one blows out.

9. Plan your subscription to the American Red Cross this month.

Your Dollar Paid to Brown-Service
Three
Kills ~~Two~~ Birds with One Stone

In presenting the Financial Statement covering the operation of your Company under its first full year of war, we believe it important to outline the part your dollar plays in carrying on the war when you pay premiums to the Company.

During wartime we civilians find that many extra duties are required and needed on our part. We find many things are increasingly necessary if we are to speed up the Day of Victory and hasten the day when we may again live peacefully . . . Yes, and free from aggressor nations and their oppressive rulers.

Paramount among these necessary duties stand three which concern you and your Brown-Service Company:

1st—To Help Finance the War
2nd—To Help Prevent Inflation
3rd—To Keep Yourself and Family Protected

When you pay premiums to Brown-Service you are, in a measure, covering these three duties and necessities.

During the past year, 1942, your dollars paid to Brown-Service enabled your Company to invest in Bonds, alone, approximately One Million Three Hundred Thousand Dollars. This means that the Company invested, in Bonds alone, more than 50 per cent of its total increase in assets. So, your Brown-Service dollar is truly helping to finance the Government.

Your dollar paid to Brown-Service also tends to aid in preventing inflation by keeping the dollar out of the merchandise markets. So, in this way, your dollar is doing double duty for winning the war by preventing inflation.

Your dollar also performs still another duty by protecting you and your family in the event of death, thereby reducing or eliminating worry and uncertainty during these perilous times. So, your dollar paid to Brown-Service does TRIPLE duty and enables you to KILL THREE BIRDS WITH ONE STONE.

The Policyholders' Reserves are now more than Eight Million Dollars, and the total invested in Bonds is well over Four Million Dollars, meaning that more than 53 per cent of the total Policyholders' Reserves is covered by Bonds alone.

We desire to express appreciation for the response of the Policyholders in paying advance premiums to aid the agency force in conserving gasoline, tires and automobiles. Premiums paid in advance reached the high total of $670,715.77. This is a real manifestation of cooperation of the Policyholders and a real endeavor to aid the war effort.

During 1943 let us go forward, conscious daily of our duty and opportunity to aid and help, remembering that at the end of each day's work, well done, we can say that we are "ONE DAY NEARER VICTORY."

NEWS OF OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

HERES ONE ABOUT T-SGT. AUSTIN B. McCARTY

(From the McClellan CYCLE)

Volunteered for service December 7, 1940, at McClellan, sent to Fort McPherson, Ga. for three days. Came back here the 10th with new "wardrobe" and plunged into personal work as company clerk for Hq. Det. Held various specialist ratings during first year. Was dscharged December 6th, 1941—day before P. H.—and placed on ERC 1st. Six days later he came back to find his old chair still warm. Was transferred from ERC to regular army. Feb. 12, 1942 was Cpl. Buck Sgt. March 10 and S-Sgt Sept. 28th last. Added another stripe to his arm shortly after.

Is only 24. Hails from Jemison, Ala. Favorite sport is baseball—loves to take the long ones off the fence in centerfield. Took the fatal plunge into matrimony with an Anniston girl Nov. 26th. His spirit of cooperation is lauded by fellow workers who find him admirable companion on the ball or off.

OUT OF THE MAIL BAG—

Camp Adair, Ore.

Hey Ben;

You don't know how much I enjoy the good old Chilton County News When any of the boys are away from good old Chilton they always want to read the latest news, and you sure can get it in your paper. I am sending you a picture of some of the snow we had three weeks ago, it was about two and one-half feet deep, and lasted for three weeks. So you can see the sun don't shine here every day. I was gone one day when John VanDerveer came to see me, but I am going to see him soon. We have lots of work to do out here. I have another stripe now and have had it since January 1. I hope to have another one by April. Tell Clark Headley to write and send him my address. I sure would like to come home on furlough but I have a job to do, so that can wait, I'll be seeing you.. Thanks for the paper and just keep sending it.

Dear Sir;

I received the 2nd copy of the News today and sure appreciated the home paper. It is almost like being back home to read over the paper and see so many familiar names. I would like to thank friends and relatives who sent me many cards and letters during my 49 day stay in the hospital.

During the holidays I went back to duty for a month but had to turn back in to the hospital for a few weeks. We get the best of attention from the house doctor, nurse, and Corp men. Imagine my surprise when after being here two days who did I run into but W. C. Smith, from Clanton. He has been up in Alaska and is doing fine. He is in the Navy and runs into boys and men from all states in the union but he is the first one that I have run into from home. We think and talk of the days we spent on the back water catching "crappie."

Again I say I appreciate the News very much.

Red Cross Needs $125,000,000 To Finance Wartime Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Faced with the greatest wartime program in history, the American Red Cross will launch its 1943 War Fund appeal for $125,000,000 on March 1. Chairman Norman H. Davis has announced.

Pointing out that the bulk of the fund will be used to expand Red Cross services to the men of the armed forces and their families, Chairman Davis urged every American man and woman to contribute to the fund.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, who also is President of the American Red Cross, the month of March is being observed as Red Cross Month. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is chairman of the Red Cross 1943 War Fund.

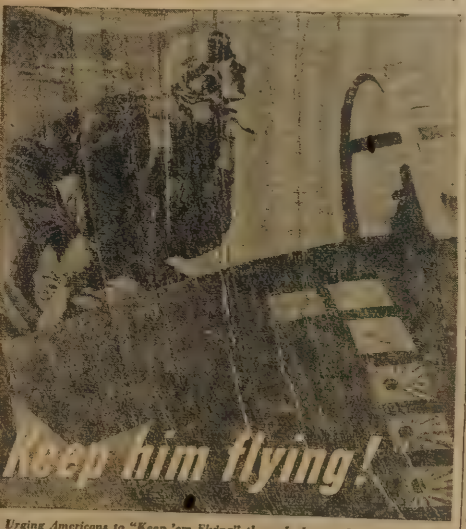
"Red Cross services to our armed forces and to the needs of distressed civilians on the battle and home fronts can be supplied only by great expenditures and sacrifices," Chairman Davis said. "We are exerting our utmost efforts to accomplish these tasks with the least possible drain upon the resources of the people in funds, time and energy. We must never falter in our determination to meet these definite obligations. The Red Cross is confident that all our people will be generous in their support of the 1943 War Fund."

More than 65 percent of the fund received by the national organization will be devoted to meeting Red Cross responsibilities to the armed forces. These include the Red Cross overseas club program, recreation and hospital program, the stationing of field directors at all foreign and domestic military camps and bases, the huge surgical dressing production program, and the blood plasma project which recently was expanded to a total of 4,000,000 pints at the request of the Army and Navy.

Chairman Davis pointed out that the 1943 program will be vastly greater than the accomplishments of last year, in which the Red Cross aided millions of war victims through its foreign war relief program; gave aid to thousands of prisoners of war; collected 1,500,000 pints of blood for the armed forces; produced 520,000,000 surgical dressings, and aided more than 1,500,000 servicemen and their families.

The $125,000,000 quota, he said, will finance the local, national and international work of the Red Cross for the entire year, barring unforeseen emergencies.

Noted Artist Paints War Poster



Keep him flying!

Urging Americans to "Keep 'em Flying" through the purchase of more War Bonds, the above poster will soon make its appearance in several hundred thousand stores and display spots throughout the country. It was painted by Georges Schreiber, internationally known artist, whose pictures hang in the Metropolitan and Whitney Museums in New York and other museums in various cities.

Rationing News

TIRES

When the tires for passenger automobiles and light trucks need recapping with th camelback recaps no certificate from the local rationing board is necessary. The government does not expect any one to neglect his tires, so when they need recapping go ahead and have it done without asking for a certificate. Large truck tires when recapping is needed still require a certificate from the local rationing board before recapping can be done.

OFFICE HOURS

The local rationing office will open in the future at 8:30 in the morning and close at 4:30 in the afternoon. These hours are necessary so that the clerical work can be done after the doors close. There is so much paper work to be done that the office force must have sometime after the doors are closed to clean up the work for the day.

FOOD RATIONING

It is not the purpose of the government for anyone to suffer for the lack of food. If you have an invalid or a baby, or any one in your home that needs special foods, or more of some food than your ration books entitles you to, make application to your local board. It will be glad to consider your needs and grant certificates to you when in need of additional foods.

ABOUT THOSE SHOES

A limited group of "play" shoes and certain other types not ordinarily worn on the street, which are already in the hands of shoe stores and wholesalers or in the process of manufacture have been released from ration control as of February 25, Mr. Bazzell, chairman of the county War Price and Rationing Board, annaunced to day.

The following types of shoes are now ration-free:

1. All infants' shoes up to size 4, whether made with hard or soft soles. (All sizes above 4, both hard and soft soled, will be subject to rationing.)

2. Certain types of play shoes: rubber-soled, shoes with fabric uppers, bathing slippers, Mexican huaraches shoes that do not have rubber or leather soles, play shoes with uppers made of fabric, imitation leather, sheepskin or capeskin, or a combination of these materials. (Rope sole play shoes, bedroom slippers and rubber footwear were, and continue to be exempt from rationing.)

"This is not the signal to buy large stocks of exempted shoes, Mr. Bazzell said. "Consumers are urged to buy these nonrationed shoes only if they really need them and dealers are asked to limit sales to one pair to a customer, to avoid the stocking of idle shoes in consumers' closets."

MORE FOOD RATIONING

Confused about food rationing? Here are OPA Regional rationing officials' answers to questions resulting from the recently announced "freeze" on canned meats and fish and the rationing of dried lentils and dehydrated soups:

1. Q. Can I buy canned meats and fish next week when point shopping starts?

A. No, the "freeze" on canned meates and fish is not related to the "freeze" on processed foods. Canned meat and fish will remain frozen until a rationing program for them starts—probably when meat rationing begins.

2. Q. What is included in the list of rationed foods, just announced?

A. Dry edible beans, dry peas, dry lentils, dehydrated soups, dried soups, and soup mixtures of all kinds.

3. Q. How will I buy these foods?

A. With point stamps. The government will announce point values for these foods, just as it has announced pont values for other processed foods.

4. Q. Should I have included dried peas, beans, lentils and dried dehydrated soups in my Consumer Declaration form when I registered for War Ration Book Two?

A. No, you did not have to declare these foods.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Curb on Wheat Production Is Lifted; New Foods Restricted as Housewives Get Initial Taste of 'Point' Rationing; Red Army Drive Meets New Successes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Hailed as the new scourge of the submarine, this mighty new land-based patrol plane, the Vega PV-1, may prove to be the navy's answer to undersea warfare. The PV-1 carries "ash can" depth charges, or torpedoes, and is the first sub-buster in production to fill the navy's need for twin-engined, land-based aircraft with plenty of range and striking power.

POINTS:
For Rationing and Study

Moving quickly, government agencies placed three varieties of food under control as the nation lined up for registration for the No. 2 ration book to be used for canned, bottled and processed vegetables, fruits and juices.

Shortly after the department of agriculture announced rationing of dried beans, peas, lentils and dried and dehydrated soups, the Office of Price Administration placed wholesale ceilings approximating 40 cents a dozen on eggs and froze prices of fresh vegetables at the levels prevailing between February 18 and 22.

These moves put almost 95 per cent of all food under some sort of government regulation. The OPA's action came as the nation's housewives still studied the effect of the newly announced point values of the various canned, bottled and processed foods rationed. To many, point values proved much higher than expected and undoubtedly will lead to numerous revisions in family fare.

On top of all this came reports from the Capitol that cheese, butter, fats and oils might be included in the next rationing program, scheduled for meat.

WHEAT BAN:
Has Been Lifted

AAA wheat marketing quotas for 1942 and 1943 have been suspended in what was announced by the department of agriculture to be a move designed to insure adequate wartime supplies of the grain for food—human and livestock.

Under the marketing quota system only wheat grown under their AAA planting allotments could be sold, used or fed by farmers. Excess wheat so disposed of had been subject to a 54 cent per bushel penalty tax for the 1942 crop and it previously had been expected that this penalty would amount to 60 cents on the 1943 crop. With the quotas suspended these restrictions were lifted.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard declared that when the 1943 quotas were announced in the fall of last year this country had a record supply of 1,613,000,000 bushels of wheat—enough to supply normal needs for two years. At that time farmers were asked to use extra wheat land for other war crops. Now consumption of wheat for human and livestock food has gone up and as a consequence the restriction had to be lifted to insure supply.

RUSSIANS:
Continue Drive

There was little pause for celebration as Russia's army marked its 25th anniversary but well the Nazis knew that the Russians had an army. For all along the broad front the German retreat continued. From the northern anchor of the Axis line in South Russia at Orel to the northwest Caucasus the Red drive pushed Hitler's troops toward the Russian border.

Premier Stalin's message on the anniversary proclaimed the mass expulsion of the Axis forces was in flood tide and would not soon abate. He praised his soldiers for their fighting spirit and urged them to be unrelenting in their future battles.

Meanwhile the Berlin radio admitted the Reds were smashing through in several sectors near the Dnieper river but this source also declared that "the far reaching aims of the enemy had failed."

NORTH AFRICA:
Counterattack

"The Americans of Washington's day faced defeat on many occasions. We faced, and still face, reverses and misfortunes."

When President Roosevelt uttered those words, 10 days ago, he was thinking in part of the North African front. But "reverses and misfortunes" are a far cry from "defeat." The battleground of southern Tunisia was the scene of an Allied reversal—depressing only to those who were over-optimistic.

In three places American and British forces checked the pace of a German advance in Tunisia. One Nazi column, attempting a desperate push on to Thala, was stopped four miles south of the town. Bombers and fighters checked another strong attack on the road leading to Tebessa from Kasserine, and farther north, near Robaa, a heavy German patrol ran into serious trouble when it attacked British forces. It was sent rolling back by crack British infantry.

The Nazi column moving toward Tebessa was bombed by continuous relays of American warplanes. Fighters and bombers attacked the Kasserine bottleneck in more than a score of missions.

But it was evident that our forces had suffered reverses.

ARMED FORCES:
Let George Do It

"Since when has America adopted as its national policy, 'Let George do it?' " asked Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, as he discussed the need for putting 10,800,000 men into the armed forces by the end of this year. He defended this plan by declaring that this was the number needed as judged by the commands and staffs of both the army and the navy.

"Full account has been taken of the ability of American industry and labor and agriculture to produce the supplies needed by our forces, our Allies and by our civilian economy," said Patterson, and he went on to point out that China had been actually engaged in warfare for five and a half years, that Great Britain by the defense of its homeland had come the closest of the United Nations to an "all out" struggle and further advanced the point that the Russians "have killed more Nazis than all the other United Nations combined."

Then he inquired whether it was U. S. policy to "Let George do it!"

U-BOATS:
Still Grave Menace

Sinking of two American transports in the North Atlantic with a loss of 850 lives underlined a statement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that the submarine remains a grave menace to the entire Allied war effort.

Coincident with his statement, Knox revealed that an American destroyer succeeded in trapping a U-boat in the Atlantic and sinking it with a barrage of five-inch shells. An American gun crew aboard a freighter fired four shots to sink a Jap submarine that had torpedoed and severely crippled their craft in the Pacific, Knox also revealed.

Germany is building U-boats faster than we are sinking them, Knox said. The new submarines have longer cruising range than the old and can submerge to greater depth. The U-boat menace is expected to reach its peak this spring.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CANCEL FAST: Catholics in the Chicago archdiocese will not have to fast during the approaching Lenten season. Archbishop Samuel Stritch suspended the fasting regulations on papal authority. Increased productive efforts and the rationing program are believed to have led to the decision. Meatless Fridays will remain in effect, however.

LOST: According to Wilfrid Gallienne, British consul, Britain has lost 2,798 bombers in raids over Germany.

AFRICAN RESOURCES: American ships used to transport food and other goods to French North Africa have returned to the United States loaded with cobalt, ore, cork and tanbark, raw materials obtained from the occupied territory.

ALLIED ACTION:
Renewed Demands

Renewed demands in London for a second front came from two sources on the heels of Josef Stalin's warnings that "the enemy has not yet been defeated."

Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to London, in a fighting speech declared that Russia expects "an early realization of the military decisions taken at Casablanca."

While acknowledging that the successes of the Soviet army were "very encouraging," Maisky pointed out that they were being achieved at a tremendous cost of Russian lives and property. It is natural, therefore, he said, that the USSR expects early Allied action.

Speaking before the house of lords, Lord Beaverbrook reiterated demands for a second front, declaring that "Whatever may be the plans of the Germans, we should strike and strike now before they can regroup their divisions . . . If another attack is made on Russia, June may be the date, so we must strike quickly if we are to be ready. We must invade northwestern Europe now."

FINLAND:
Tired of War

Ever since the re-election of President Risto Ryti the world had wondered whether Finland would make a bid for separate peace with Russia.

ARCHBISHOP SPELLMAN
Visitor to the pope

When Finland called home her ministers to the Vatican and Germany the rumors of a separate peace bid were given impetus. But official dispatches from Helsinki announced that Georg A. Gripenberg and Toivo M. Kivimaeki, ministers respectively to the Vatican and Berlin, had been summoned home "for a conference in connection with the reorganization of the government."

Two factors gave credence to such belief. First was the possibility that the Vatican might be asked to act as intermediary (bolstered by the visit of the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, archbishop of New York, and Pope Pius XII), and second was a suggestion made by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles that Finland discontinue immediately "effective military aid to the mortal enemies of this country."

GUERRILLA WAR:
Along Salween River

Although the Japanese continued their advance along the west bank of the Salween river in China's Yunnan province, informed quarters said that the Japs were not trying for a major break-through but merely were feeling out the Chinese lines. Chinese guerrillas achieved "fine results" in harassing the rear of the Japanese line on the banks of the Salween, according to a Chungking communique.

In Washington, Edward R. Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, told the house foreign affairs committee that the United States will leave "no stone unturned" to get increased material aid to China. Stettinius answered charges by Representative Maas of Minnesota, a marine reserve officer who saw action in the Pacific, that "we are not getting all the aid we can to China."

MERCHANT SEAMEN:
Lauded by Marines

Charges that merchant seamen refused to unload ships at Guadalcanal were denied by a house naval affairs subcommittee which reported that in all cases American merchant seamen co-operated fully with marines in the Solomon Islands. The subcommittee's report included letters from highest marine corps officials praising "co-operation, efficiency and courage" of U. S. merchant seamen.

We've 3 Times 3 Victories Chalked Up for the Nehfs

NEW YORK.—First there were Art Nehf's own three World Series victories over the Yankees of the Ruthian years; no other pitcher can claim as many. Then came another three, obviously unmatched, two sons and a daughter. Now, in a drift of pungent smoke over the Solomons, Art Junior racks up three Zeros.

The friends who walked and talked with Old Art—he is barely 50—when he was about the best left-handed pitcher of the twenties, read of young Art's three-timer and began to think back.

Arthur Newcomb Nehf, Terre Haute-born and a graduate electrical engineer when John McGraw sidetracked him into the Polo Grounds, has lived so long in Phoenix, Ariz., that he is a legendary shadow across the big league trails, but the friends made him a man alive there once more. They made him a man to be remembered for more than baseball, too. They spoke of him as D'Artagnan, Porthos and Aramis spoke of Athos, the thoughtful, the just.

Art Junior did only what they expected of Art Senior's son when the Japs bore in from five compass points. He was scared but, "I knocked off three of those monkeys," and damaged the other two. Then, "They hit me and I couldn't do much so I ran like h—l," and crashed. Now, however, he is as fresh as new paint again.

In some such whirl of action Art Senior took his first game from the Yanks. For eight innings the bats of Ruth and the cocky others bore in from all the compass points. Nehf had a 1-0 score, one out and one on in the ninth when Home-Run Baker hit a ball like a bullet. A good judge who saw Johnny Rawlings race for it off second base still calls the stop the greatest play of baseball. High-pockets Kelly and the marvelous Frank Frisch, that day at third, finished the double play That was in 1921. Nehf won his other two in '22 and '23.

A Big Gun Man Starts Afresh and Engineers Profit

IF Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold hadn't decided 16 years ago that he was on the wrong track the army corps of engineers would jump for a different chief today. He was a big gun man then, ten years out of the coast artillery school at Fort Monroe; and come to think of it, pretty old to be making a fresh start, 42. But young enough.

Eleven years later, when the Mississippi went on a rampage and an army engineer was needed, he got the nod. The block and tackle he threw then has kept Old Man River quiet ever since.

Now a thick-set, firm-mouthed commander of 58, he directs all engineers through an encyclopedia of special jobs that this global war has added to the traditional bridge-building, map-making, camouflage and construction. Reports from Africa and Britain, where he has just been, are that nothing of any great shakes is lagging. Here and there the material may be a little short, but in such a pinch the army engineers work wonders with baling wire, shovels and the sergeant's motherly coaxing.

The general got his corps prepared for war a year ago when he streamlined it into nine divisional units, each overlapping those of the army's own nine service commands. • The honor lists already give General Reybold a Distinguished Service Medal.

How High Bobby Chief Has Climbed From How Low!

EVERY month fresh signs arise that after peace there will always be a better England. Now the word is out that this will be with some help from Ireland. King George taps Herbert Morrison, Londonderry born, Galway schooled in part, to be minister of town and country planning He is to see that dream cities become visible where Nazi bombs have now heaped rubble.

The new minister already is home secretary, head of England's police. Morrison's father was a London bobby.

In a dozen other posts over the years the home secretary and minister of planning has become known as one of the government's most able executives.

A pleasanter boss than he is seldom to be found, but, despite this, he gets the work out in jig time. And without a trace of nonsense! He fires backtalking aids on the spot without batting an eyelid, and makes all his hands dig in. Yet never any harder than he digs in himself. He often can be found on the job long after the time clock has run down.

As a younger man, his chunky figure, towsled hair made a fine target for conservative students at debates in Cambridge university.

EDNA MAE saw at once that the boy with Mel Fairfield, whom she had known since childhood, was new and different from any of the young men in Robinsdale. Not looking at them, she crossed the street, appearing to be interested in a store window, and almost collided with the pair.

"Why, hello, Mel!" she exclaimed with nicely gauged astonishment. "How are you, darling!" Which took Mel quite by surprise, because previously Edna Mae had always passed him by with a smile and a nod and a casual remark about the weather. Then he saw her glance at Ned Greer, and he understood.

"Hello, Edna Mae," he said. "This is Mr. Greer. Ned Greer, a song writer. Ned, this is Edna Mae Rogers."

Edna Mae beamed. "Why, how do you do, Mr. Greer. I've heard so much about you."

"Hello," said Ned. He didn't lift his hat, or even look pleased.

But Ned Greer attracted her, captivated her interest. She thought of him practically all the rest of the day and when that evening he called her on the telephone and asked her out to dinner, she accepted almost too eagerly. Later she excused her eagerness by telling herself he had regretted the incident of the morning and wanted to make amends. Edna Mae dearly loved to listen to men making amends.

But after Ned Greer arrived she changed her mind. Entering the elevator, she had to follow him, and when he accidentally allowed the door of the taxi to swing against her shin, he didn't apologize or even appear sorry. All of which increased Edna Mae's annoyance and stirred inside of her a resolve to teach this impudent young man a lesson.

She employed a dozen methods of humiliating him, all of which failed. Ned Greer ignored her direct thrusts, wasn't at all bothered by her own discourtesies, and continued on placidly in the manner which had characterized him as different at the start.

And so at last, in desperation, Edna Mae decided to resort to the age-old method. She would lead him on, and, when eventually he was hopelessly in the mire of unreasoning love, she would have her revenge. And to this end she dedicated her energy and skill and daily routine.

It took time, much longer than Edna Mae had anticipated. She was used to having men propose to her after a half dozen meetings. But with Ned Greer it was different. A year passed and his interest seemed to reach a peak of 70 degrees and stay there. Edna Mae became panicky. She cast about for new devices, was, in fact, on the verge of changing her campaign, when, wholly without warning, Ned Greer proposed.

His exact words were: "Edna Mae, you and I seem pretty well suited to each other, seem to get along — despite everything — and I think it would be a darn good idea if we got married."

And so she agreed to marry Ned Greer, and Ned kissed her and said, "That's fine. I'll bet we'll be happy together."

But Edna Mae was adamant in her resolve, and so she married Ned Greer. They went to live in a studio apartment, which had a great big, airy room with a piano, where Ned wrote his songs. He was already pretty famous, and Edna Mae, secretly, couldn't help feeling a little proud of him.

Edna Mae was a little puzzled about it all. She couldn't understand her contentment and happiness. She went around feeling annoyed half the time because the desire to leave Ned hadn't asserted itself. She assured herself that the reason for this was because she hadn't achieved her resolve to teach Ned a lesson.

Then one night Ned came home looking very sad. "Poor Mel," he said. "I warned the big ape before he married Alma that his theory was all wrong. But he wouldn't listen to me, and now Alma's gone to Reno."

"Theory?" said Edna Mae. "Whatever do you mean, theory?"

"Why," said Ned, "about how to treat women and make love to them. You see, Mel believes that when you're courting a woman you should put her on a pedestal, lead her to believe she's somebody much more important than she is. Well, that's wrong, because it's too hard getting her down off the pedestal after marriage. I mean, after marriage a man begins treating his wife like a human being; he shatters her illusions about himself and about him and it makes her miserable."

Edna Mae's mouth opened in wonder. "You mean, that's the way you felt about me?"

"Why sure. I've treated you just the same since we've been married as I did before, haven't I?"

"Better," said Edna Mae.

"Of course," said Ned. "I didn't want you to have any false impressions, so I tried to act as a husband would act. Therefore I haven't changed and you haven't been disappointed." He grinned. "You were the same. You were pretty nasty at times, for which I was glad, because I knew that after marriage you might improve, or at least not get worse. I was satisfied."

Civil Pilots Eagerly Await Army Assignments

Rapidly Expanding Air Force Will Be in Need Of 400,000 Aviators; Good Future in Skyways Seen in Time of Peace.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Washington, of late, has become increasingly air-minded and although the war has caused it, peace will benefit.

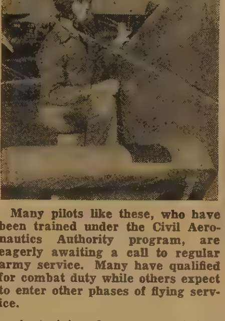
A recent advertisement expressed the idea strikingly. It said: "We exist upon one globe and inside another. Our planet earth is the center of a larger air-globe . . . both globes, as one unit, follow the same orbit. We take our air with us and always have."

It is our activity in that larger globe, the heavens, which is going to be vital to America when the war is over. Now we are concerned with small sectors of the sky, our scattered air fronts. Later we shall be concerned with linking them all together in peaceful and profitable air commerce.

In recent weeks, many members of congress have been giving thought to preparation for that day, and "x" thousand (the number is a military secret) young men who have in the past months learned to fly under the Civil Aeronautic Authority's War Training program—the boys who will be the nucleus of our pilots after the war—are fairly bursting with impatience to spread their wings.

Train Civil Pilots

America is planning a military air force of some three million men. Since the rule of thumb says eight men on the ground to one in the air, that means we are going to need some four hundred thousand pilots. The "x" in the "x thousand" men I mentioned as being civilian trained or in training does not equal four hundred thousand now but it will help. Before we went into the war, this need was visualized and the Civil Aeronautics Authority created the civilian pilots training courses to which there was a tremendous and enthusiastic response. Not only from boys and men of "fighting" age which is young for combat pilots but of fellows from 18 to 37 who could become flying instructors—or could pilot transport and cargo planes.



Many pilots like these, who have been trained under the Civil Aeronautics Authority program, are eagerly awaiting a call to regular army service. Many have qualified for combat duty while others expect to enter other phases of flying service.

Some of these civilian trained pilots are enlisted in the United States Army Air Force Reserves, those who passed the physical and age requirements for combat flying. The others hoped to get into some kind of military aviation service other than combat.

The army in January called all of its enlisted reserve except those who were in the midst of a college term (they will be called when the current term is over). But because of lack of facilities for training, the reserves who were in the air force have to be called slowly and those who are found to be eligible to qualify as flying cadets will begin their final military instructions by April first. The complete list of colleges where they will receive this training will soon be announced.

Meanwhile, the boys in the reserves and those who are training for transport flying are becoming very restive. They have been given free instruction and subsistence but they receive no pay as flying cadets do, and they have to furnish part of their own uniforms. Many gave up jobs to take the training or are hesitating to take jobs because they expect to be called. Some of them have been "expecting" a long time and their morale has sunk to the depths. I have talked with many of them and they have my sympathy for they are so anxious to spread their wings, so anxious to serve their country and so weary with waiting. Of course, some have been able to get into the air force, but not many have, and the brass hats of the army incline to look down their noses at anyone not army-trained.

Army Fliers Experts

Of course, there is no denying that flying a training plane and flying a combat plane are two quite different things. As one air force officer, who really is sympathetic with the CAA program, said to me:

"Remember that a man who has spent fifteen to twenty hours in the air is not a combat pilot. You might be able to take off from a field in a 60-horse-power crate and land all right but that doesn't mean you can handle a 25-ton, four-engine job with its 200 instruments and spend perhaps 12 to 14 hours in the air without seeing anything but those 200 instruments.

"Of course, you'll get along faster the first days in school if your mother has taught you your ABC's."

That is the attitude of the professional. It is hard to take and a lot of people in the army and out think it is somewhat cavalier. They think that if it hadn't been for leaning very heavily on tradition, a lot of these boys who have their "ABC's" would be showing their stuff right now instead of breaking their hearts waiting. They feel it is pretty hopeless. They are wrong there. It won't be long now. But it is easy to understand how that fine enthusiasm can fade when the effort, the time and the sacrifice of civilian plans seem to be passed over with little more than a shrug.

It is to be hoped that shortly after this appears in print, the boys will be on Uncle Sam's payroll. They have friends in Washington who are working for them. Then, even if they have to mark time a little longer, they will feel that their Uncle believes they are worth their salt.

Burma Air Road

It is easy to see the reason why these and a lot of other boys will be needed in the air now. We are going to open a Burma road of the air. Supplies are going to China by that route now but it is only a trickle. We have the transport planes and many more of them will soon be in service. And what the air traffic will bear is not to be sneezed at.

An airplane that can carry five tons, or ten tons, can make a run in a couple of hours which would take two weeks on the ground. Of course, moving freight by air isn't the most economical way but money doesn't matter in war. And it must be remembered that in peace time, it is cheaper to ship by water than by rail. But where would America be if it weren't for the railways? After the war, it will be the same with the airways, which are being blazed by bombers and will be followed by freight and passenger planes in a happier day.

Every time our bombers take off, something is learned that can be turned to peace-time profit. And so far, we have not begun our bombing in Europe. One observer who knows aviation said to me just after Casablanca:

"All we have done over Germany and France so far is really experimental. It is really a testing. A few sporadic daylight raids. The bombings by the American [illegible] force are insignificant compared to what will be done when we get under way. And remember: we've got good weather coming up."

And so the "x thousand" boys who have learned to fly—most of them—will soon have their chance. One of the enthusiastic supporters of the civilian pilot training program said to me:

"Don't worry. Unless the war stops suddenly, the army will soon be saying: 'Can you fly? All right, here's your plane, get in.' And when peace comes, civilian demand is going to keep 'em flying."

BIBLE TEACHINGS AGAINST DRUNKENNESS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 30:16, 17; Isaiah 28: 1-4, 7; Galatians 5:19-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it."—Isaiah 24:9.

Sowing and reaping is one of those universal laws which applies in all realms of life. What we sow we reap, whether in the farmer's field, in our national life, or in the life of the individual. It is true physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

How surprising then that intelligent Americans think we can go on with the use of intoxicants which have destroyed other nations and expect to escape the same sad consequences. Professional men have wrecked their careers, business men lost their hard earned positions, and rich men dissipated their inheritances; and at the same time each of them has fallen into moral decay —all through their inability to control their desire for drink. Yet we continue to license its sale, and so another generation of young men must meet the same temptation.

Our lesson presents three results of drunkenness.

I. Military Defeat (I Sam. 30:16, 17).

A crisis in the life of King David is related in this chapter. The Amalekites had taken Ziklag. The king and his family were prisoners, held by a host of barbarous men far too strong for them to oppose. He inquired of God and was told to attack. With his little army of 400 men he defeated them. Why? Because in a drunken debauch they were celebrating their victory of the day before.

This was not the first, nor the last, time that military defeat followed indulgence in alcoholic beverages. It has happened even in the present war. Have we learned the lesson? Will we avoid that danger?

In this country our armed forces and defense workers are constantly exposed to temptation—and how many of them fall, anyone may know who has eyes to see.

From distant battlefronts come disquieting reports that intoxicants are among the "supplies" which find quick transportation to the very front, where they are soon put to their destructive use.

II. National Decay (Isa. 28:1-4, 7).

Isaiah was a mighty voice against moral corruption, and for the righteousness of God. With true prophetic insight he saw beneath the outward prosperity and apparent glory of his people, and exposed the sins which would soon destroy them as a nation. Outstanding among these destructive forces was drunkenness.

Turning first to the northern kingdom of Israel (for the nation had now been divided), he tells them that though their valleys may be fertile and their cities resplendent, the collapse of all their boasted greatness will surely come if they live in revelry and drunkenness.

He speaks of the coming of "the mighty and the strong one" (v. 2) who will be like a destroying storm. He refers to Assyria—itself an ungodly people, but used of God to scourge His own people who had become indulgent and sinful.

There is a truth here which we need to learn. When nations forget God and fail in their responsibilities to Him and to their fellow men; when they become vain and self indulgent, God will bring judgment upon them. He may use as His instrument nations who are themselves pagan, to accomplish His purpose.

The people should be led in repentance and righteousness by their religious leaders. How sad that some set an example in the other direction. Others who live personal lives above reproach are silent on these important questions lest they give offense to someone who may make it difficult for them. How sad!

III. Eternal Destruction (Gal. 5:19-21).

Military loss and national declension should be enough to align every right thinking person against intoxicants. But far worse is the fact that they bring many, many men and women into eternal separation from God.

In this passage "drunkenness and revellings" find their proper place with the other works of the flesh which close the door to the kingdom of God. There is no use trying to dismiss or cover it up as the unfortunate weakness of an otherwise nice person, or the natural result of a bit of social fellowship.

America has too long regarded a drunken person as a joke—or at most a bit of a nuisance to be indulged and tolerated. The Bible says that "they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (v. 21).

That is plain enough, isn't it? Mr. Drinker, outside or inside the church, had you better not think about that before you drink again? Church of Christ, is it not time for you to do something more effective to deliver the young men and women of America from the constant temptation now placed before them?

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Trustees of Central AEC Meets At Prattville March 6

The Board of Trustees of the Central Alabama Electric Cooperative met in Prattville, Ala., March 6, 1943, and made some changes in the rules relative to collection of bills. In the past 5% penalty was added to the net bill if it was not paid by the tenth of the month following reading date. This penalty has been eliminated, effective April 10.

All churches and Public schools have had a minimum charge of $1.00 each month which permitted the use of 10 kwh without additional charge. The new regulation as passed by the board of trustees will give all churches and public schools receiving service from the Central Alabama Electric Cooperaive a credit of $1.00 each month on their light bill. The meters will be read and bills figured each month as usual but applying the credit of $1..00 to each church and public school. Those who do not use more than 10 kwh during the month will get free service. Should the bill figure more than 10 kwh for a particular month the amount charged will be the regular rate less the $1.00 credit.

Band Mothers To Play Basketball

"My mother and your mother, were hanging out clothes,
My mother bit your mother right
on the nose, etc."

The Clanton Band Mothers Club and the Jemison Band Mothers Club have decided to carry their differences to the basketball court.

The contest will be staged at the High School Auditorium this Friday night, March 12 at 7:30 o'clock. The proceeds will go to the band for some supplies.

The admission will be 15c and 25c and promises to be worth much more. Come to the high school Friday night and see the best exhibition of basketball that it has been your privilege to witness this season. The Clanton High School Champion Cagers will probably be on the sidelines taking notes and learning new tricks. But, honest, it's all in fun. Come out and help your High School Band.

J. T. Searcy Finishes Course To Train Bus Drivers

J. T. Searcy, Clanton, Chilton County supervisor of school transportation, was among representatives of 33 counties who have completed a course of instruction to qualify them to train school bus drivers, as part of Alabama's wartime program of conserving school transportation, according to word received from Dr. A. R. Meadows, supervisor of research and surveys in charge of school transportation, State Department of Education.

Forty-two county school superintendents, principals, teachers, transportation supervisors, mechanics and school bus drivers attended courses at the University of Alabama, given in two sections under sponsorship of the State Department of Education.

Mars Hill

We had a good crowd out for Sunday School and preaching Sunday. Bro. Cleo Cofer preached for us Sunday and Sunday night. He delivered two mighty good sermons.

Miss Leafie Smith spent the week-end at home. We are always glad to see Leafie.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Scott and Mrs. Everett Lawley and baby spent the week-end with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Mollie Holdsombeck is visiting in Birmingham for a few days.

Rev. Cleo Cofer, wife and children, also his mother, Mrs. Clyde Cofer, were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Cofer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Scott and children spent the day Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Scott.

RED CROSS DRIVE IN COUNTY LAGS

Reports reaching the News the first of this week are to the effect that Chilton County has contributed only about one-third of her 1943 War Fund quota. All workers are urged by the Committee to redouble heir efforts in reaching this amount.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—President Roosevelt, officially opening the 1943 Red Cross War Fund Campaign for $125,000,000 today, described Red Cross services to U. S. servicemen as "indispensable to victory."

Th President's statement, highlighting the observance of Red Cross Sunday, was read over the four major radio networks by Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis in the absence of the chief executive, who still is confined to the White House by a slight intestinal upset.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in North Africa, speaking from that theatre of operations, and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, joined in the appeal.

In his message, the President said:

"The American Red Cross begins today the greatest single crusade of mercy in all history. It is undertaking a task unprecedented—because this war is unprecedented. We undertake this greatest of all Red Cross crusades in the name of mercy—now that we are engaged in a war to decide whether all our concepts of mercy and human decency are strong enough to survive,

"In the Axis nations, mercy and decency are regarded as synonyms for weakness and decadence. In our land it is from our great tradition of mercy that we take part of our strength.

"Each one of you who has a friend or relative in uniform will measure the significance of this crusade in your own heart. You—at your house today—know better than anyone else what it means to be sure the Red Cross stands at the side of our soldiers or sailors or marines wherever they may be. All of us—one hundred and thirty millions—know how indispensable to victory is the work of this great agency . . ."

General Eisenhower, in his address declared:

"The Red Cross takes your subscription, transforms it into useful and practical aid, and brings it to the soldier freely, cheerfully and efficiently.

"I do hope that the Red Cross organization in this theatre will be expanded many times. We have need of it every day everywhere. In the brief moment I have had, I cannot possibly describe to you the extent to which all of us, particularly those magnificent soldiers who fill the American units in North Africa, depend upon

GREATER EFFORT NEEDED-REYNOLDS

March 9, 1943.

Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.
Dear Editor:

We just did make our quota for February. Our quota has been increased for March. I sincerely hope that we will make our quota this month and every other month for the duration of the war.

The radio and newspapers reports are encouraging to us back at home while hundreds of our boys are dying and sacrificing their lives that we might have freedom. We must each and every one buy every stamp and bond that we possibly can. Our brave boys are doing their best and they are making a wonderful record for courage and bravery. If we will compare the sacrifice and the efforts that we are making and then think of the sacrifice that our boys are making we will all feel like we have done nothing.

I feel like sometimes that some of our committeemen are getting a little indifferent. We must not get tired or discouraged. If we spend all we have got and have our freedom and liberty and Christian spirit which we have left, we will rise again. We hope every committeeman, every school teacher in the county will help in every way they can in this great effort.

I urge every person that is working out of the county and buying bonds will notify the parties that they buy the bond from, to buy the bond from the Federal Reserve Bank and give their post office address Clanton, Ala. If they will do this, this county will get credit for the bond. If they do not give the post office address and do not instruct the bond to be bought through the Federal Reserve Bank then the county where they buy the bond gets credit for the bonds.

The following notice is being sent out by the Peoples Savings Bank to their time depositors which says more than I could say in a week for the value and safety of the E bonds of the United States.

This is one of the most patriotic suggestions that I have seen since our campaign started.

Clanton, Ala.,__________

"Dear Customer:

"Your savings account balance is $______ Effective January 1st, 1943, the interest on savings deposits will be reduced to one per cent (1%). This applies to savings accounts now on our books. No new savings accounts will be accepted.

"We recommend United States War Bonds and Stamps. This is the safest investment on earth and the money will be used to buy the ships, guns, ammunition and planes America needs to protect your home, your freedom and your family.

"THE PEOPLES SAVINGS BANK."

I am very sorry that I was not able to help the Red Cross last week in the drive but I had a cold and the weather was so bad I could not get out and work.

I feel that Chilton County is under more obligation to the Red Cross than any other county in Alabama. I hope we will subscribe our full quota.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

Chilton County High Basketball Team Goes To State Tournament

James Foshee, Sports Reporter

The Clanton basketball team goes to the State Tournament at the University of Alabama this Friday and Saturday, March 12 and 13.

The Clanton "Cagers" won the District Tournament at Selma by defeating Albert G. Parrish High of Selma 35 to 26 in the finals Saturday night, March 6. The Clanton five won from the Lanier Poets in the semi-finals Saturday afternoon by a score of 30 to 27. Paul Smith, All-State forward, was the high point man for the Clanton "Cagers" with 12 points. The Clanton five proved to be very strong in the third district although seeded third with Selma and Lanier seeded first and second. The Clanton team won from Verbena and Jemison in the first round Friday with an overwhelming score. The Clanton and Selma team will represent the third district in the State Tourney.

The 16 teams from the eight districts are as follows with the score of each game in the finals:

First District: McGill 35, Murphy 15.

Second District: Elba 38, Enterprise 21.

Third District: Clanton 35, Selma 26.

Fourth District: Tallassee and Phenix City, co-champions.

Fifth District: Phillips 33, Woodlawn 18.

Sixth District: Oxford 28, Glascoe 18.

Seventh District: Rogersville and Hackleburg, co-champions.

Eighth District. Eva and Scottsboro, co-champions.

Eight of the 16 teams will be returning to the University for their second successive time. They are: Clanton, Selma, Woodlawn, Murphy, McGill, Tallassee, Eva and Elba.

The Clanton team will journey to Tuscaloosa Thursday afternoon, March 11, for the drawing Thursday night. The Chilton County lads have won the state championship three of the past four years. This is the sixth consecutive year that the Chilton County High School has been to the State Tourney and they are out to win the state crown again.

Samuel Allison Reynolds, 76, former sheriff of Dallas County and well known in official circles through the state, died recently.

A Mobile girl was born recently in an auto as her parents were enroute to a hospital. An ambulance transferred mother and babe later. The parents were trailer dwellers.

Rationing News

All motorists who have "A" gasoline books must have their tires inspected by March 31, 1943. This is IMPORTANT.

REGULATIONS: The laws governing local rationing boards were made in Washington, D. C., and sent out to state officers and from there to the local offices, such as yours here in Chilton County. There are certain definite things that a local rationing board can do and others it cannot do and stay within the law. When you, the public, makes a request of your local board and it is not granted, it is because your local board cannot grant this request, and stay within the regulations. Sherman once said that war is hell, and we are beginning to find out in this country that if it is not what Sherman said it was, it certainly is a great deal of inconveniences.

Ninety per cent of the people of this country are entering into the spirit of the government in putting everything else aside until the war is won. Your rationing board asks that you be a good citizen and do your part, and not ask special favors of the board, especially when this special favor would be a violation of the law.

The soldiers, sailors and marines are not asking special favors, neither are they asking that exception be made for their comfort or convenience. If thse boys who are making the extreme sacrifice are not asking for special consideration, then you and I should be ashamed of ourselves if we ask for favors when we are giving so little.

Your local rationing board appreciates your fine co-operation, and its main desire is to do a very undesirable job to the best of its ability for all concerned.

Jemison F. H. A, Met March 3

The Jemison Chapter of F. H. A. held its regular monthly meeting March 3, 1943. The meeting was called to order by the president, Annie Joe Norwood. The devotional was read by Emogene Waldrop. The roll was called and the minutes read by the secretary, Jimmy Ruth DuBose. A report was given by the treasurer, Barbara Hayman.

The president then told the members that the banquet for the parents was called off because of food rationing.

There being no further business the program committee took charge. A prayer was given by a small girl in grammar school. The state F. H. A. song was sung by the members of the club. The refreshment committee took charge and served delicious cookies. A game was played and enjoyed by everyone. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Floyd News

Sunday and Sunday night were our regular preaching days, the weather being cold our crowd was small.

We had two good sermons by our pastor. Just wish our entire church mewbership could have been there Sunday night and heard him.

Our communitw was saddened Friday by the death of Sister Mollie Manning. She was loved by all that knew her. She was buried at Floyd Saturday at 11 o'clock. To love her was to know her. We all miss her in our church work for she was true and faithful to her church. We all feel that our loss is heaven's gain.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Huett had as their guest Sunday Mrs. Cecil Huett of Coopers and Mrs. Mary Williams and children of Enterprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordy Morris had as their Sunday dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Prickett.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Taylor had as their week-end guests Mr. and Mrs. Sam Headley of Montgomery.

Let's all remember Sunday School next Sunday and be present and bring someone with you.—Reporter.

Senate Group Votes Farm Deferment; Rout of Jap Armada Near New Guinea Shows Rising U. S. Power in Pacific RAF Europe Drive Forecasts Invasion

JAPS PERSISTENT:

In South Pacific

The South Pacific had returned dramatically to the fore when the news was disclosed that the Japanese had marshaled great forces in their island bases north of Australia.

The approach of a powerful Japanese convoy of 14 vessels toward New Guinea under the protection of foggy weather, had lent weight to a previous warning by Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the enemy had been concentrating huge quantities of planes, shipping and men in their far-flung island strongholds ringing Australia on the north.

Allied warplanes were on the alert and in the decisive action that followed, they sank or damaged four of the enemy ships and scattered the rest of the convoy over a wide area. Among the Jap casualties were one 10,000 ton transport left sinking, another transport split asunder, two other vessels damaged and escorting warships hit.

This latest Jap offensive bid was apparently aimed to reinforce enemy forces in the Lae area of New Guinea.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO PLAN:

Would Withhold 20%

The new pay-as-you-go tax program was not the Ruml plan nor the proposal advanced by the treasury department. Somewhere between both, the new congressional plan would withhold 20 per cent of taxable income from the pay envelopes of the nation's 31,000,000 wage and salary earners beginning July 1.

Sponsored by Chairman Cooper of the house ways and means committee's subcommittee on pay-as-you-go taxation, the plan would provide for weekly, semi-monthly or monthly deductions from income which would be accumulated and applied to actual taxes computed at the year's end.

The proposed withholding levy would not change any person's tax obligations for 1942, 1943 or any year. It merely sets up a system for deductions from wages and salaries for accumulation against actual taxes to be computed at the end of the year. Taxpayers who paid their first installments March 15 would be expected to pay their second installment as usual June 15. Then in July, the withholding provision would be undertaken.

MANPOWER:

Services Need 12,000,000

Upwards of 12,000,000 Americans may have to don uniforms before the war is over in order to maintain an armed force of 11,000,000, congress was told by Col. Lewis Sanders, chief of the re-employment division of the selective service.

The 1,000,000 loss in manpower, he said, could be charged up to normal attrition, exclusive of battle casualties. In explaining his paradoxical set-up, Colonel Sanders said:

"You would put into one picture an armed force of 11,000,000 and then 1,000,000 men to replace the attrition of that armed force. In other words, it looks as if you have 12,000,000 men in service, but you don't. You always have 11,000,000."

FARM WORKERS:

Senators Vote Deferment

Forecasting deferment of farm workers from military service for the remainder of this year, the senate military affairs committee had voted approval of a measure exempting such workers from the draft.

Viewed as a stop-gap to relieve the current farm labor and food shortage, the committee's action took the form of a proposed amendment to the Selective Service act.

The amendment provides that "every registrant engaged in an agricultural occupation . . . shall be deferred from training and service" under the Selective Service act, and that "no such registrant shall leave such occupation" without special permission from his local board.

PRELUDE TO INVASION:

RAF Softens Naziland

As Allied bombers had continued their unprecedented aerial attack against western Europe and had wrought destruction in Berlin outdistancing even the havoc of 1940 Nazi assaults on London, this offensive appeared to be taking a major place in the overall Allied war plan.

Night after night the bombers had droned in an ever-rising crescendo over Berlin. In a single attack more than 900 tons of bombs—twice the weight of anything ever dropped by the Nazis on London—plummeted down on Hitler's capital. Returning fliers reported mountainous conflagrations in Berlin.

At the peak of the bombing attacks, Capt. Harold Balfour, British undersecretary of state for air, said the Anglo-American air offensive was "preparing the day for our united forces to invade Europe."

"I look forward to the time when there will be no hour of the day or night when the Axis can rest from the swoop of Allied aircraft," he said. "In the long view, the present raids are but the opening bars which will rise to the crescendo of a march on Europe."

RUSSIAN FRONT:

'Follow the Weather'

Although the thaws of spring had slowed down their offensive in the south, the doughty Russians were still on the march in the northwest. Into the headlines once more came Marshal Timoshenko, ace Russian commander, for his armies on the move between Moscow and Leningrad had recaptured 302 towns and settlements, freed 1,000 square miles of territory and had menaced German positions by the seizure of key points near Staraya Russa. The Reds had killed or captured 11,000 Nazis.

The timing of this newest offensive—the eighth launched by the Russians since last November—indicated the persistent character of the Russian strategy. Summed up it meant this: Shift the center of operations to follow the weather. If it thaws in the south, then attack in the north. But do not permit the Nazis a breathing-spell anywhere.

In the Donets basin the Nazi forces had retained the initiative in their counteroffensive. Moscow had admitted some local German successes, but had not confirmed a Nazi claim of the recapture of Barvenkiva, 82 miles southeast of Kharkov on the Kiev railway.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: Lieut. Com. Leroy C. Simpler of Milton, Del., whose navy fighter squadron is known to have shot down 77 planes and is said to have accounted for 16 more in operations in the Solomon Islands, will receive a third decoration, the navy reported. Already the recipient of the Navy Cross and Distinguished Flying Cross, he has been voted a Gold Star

ZURICH: Following a tour of Italy, a Swiss newspaper correspondent reported that United Nations' bombing planes had caused widespread damage and a majority of residents had evacuated large cities. In Milan, only one-third of the normal 1,200,000 population remains, he said. In Genoa, most of the city's important thoroughfares have been badly wrecked.

TUNISIA:

Axis Tries Diversion

As American pressure was intensified on Marshal Rommel's retreat from the Kasserine Pass region, other Axis forces had headed an attack toward Beja, 40 miles west of Tunis, in an effort to create a diversion and remove Allied attention from Rommel. The British, against whom this drive was launched, had successfully held the Germans off and the Axis attacks lost their momentum.

Meanwhile, the Allied forces' advance in central Tunisia continued with the capture of Sbeitla, 18 miles from the town of Kasserine. In the far south, too, war bulletins said, the British eighth army under Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery had attacked objectives on the Mareth line.

As the Allied air strength in North Africa had continued to grow, bombing raids against enemy positions gained in momentum. Widespread activity included raids on Palermo, Sicily, western terminus of the Axis supply route shuttling men and munitions to North Africa. The air assaults were likewise concentrated on the docks at the Axis naval base of Bizerte and on railroad bridges between Sfax and Sousse.

ANTI-JAP OFFENSIVE:

'Prospects Are Bright'

From both sides of the Pacific came indications that more effective American offensive action against the Japs was drawing nearer.

In China Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault declared that the prospects "are definitely brighter" for carrying the war to Japan, adding that the Allies can defeat the Nipponese in a comparatively short time when they turn their whole effort into the Pacific, and "there is an outside chance the job can be finished this year."

Emphasizing the possibility of eliminating Japan this year, the blunt-spoken Chennault added: "I think there are some men in high position who already realize this."

In Washington, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific fleet, said the navy was ready to start a drive toward the industrial heart of Japan.

OIL FOR SPAIN:

No U. S. Deprivation

Diplomacy is the business of Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and he showed he was well equipped for his job by the manner in which he smoothed over the controversial subject of shipments of American oil products to pro-Axis Spain.

SUMNER WELLES
. . . oil, on troubled waters.

Loud had been the outcry in the oil-scarce eastern states when the news of the shipments to Spain were made public. Quick to mollify the complainers was Mr. Welles who declared that such shipments were in line with the interests of the United States and "have had no effect whatever on the quantity of petroleum available to any consumers in the United States."

RATIONING PICTURE:

Regulations Expanding

As Mrs. Average Housewife got used to buying her canned goods on a point rationing basis, a survey of the rationing picture as a whole revealed the following regulations in force:

Coffee — one pound every six weeks; sugar—five pounds every 11 weeks; shoes—one pair between now and June 17, obtainable with Stamp No. 17 in War Ration Book No. 1; Tires—still closely rationed, but recaps obtainable; gasoline—all pleasure driving banned in 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia. A, B and C coupons worth three gallons weekly in the eastern area, four gallons in the rest of the nation; fuel oil—Period 4 coupons valid until about April 12.

Imminent on the ration schedule were meat and butter. Restrictions on clothing expected by many authorities before summer.

GANDHI:

Success and Failure

Weaker in physical strength but not in spirit, Mohandas K. Gandhi had successfully completed his 21-day protest fast.

While the fast had failed in its mission of forcing the Indian government to release Gandhi from custody, it did however, refocus the world's attention on the Indian struggle for independence and cause the British authorities some moments of anguished embarrassment.

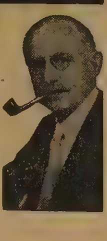
Pennsylvania Turnpike Aids 'Flight Strip' Boom



Super-Highway Serves as Ideal Emergency Landing Field for Planes; Postwar Advances To Emphasize Need for Runways.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The great bomber was in trouble. The pilot knew it. One engine was coughing like Camille in the last act. He looked down. Below him lay sleepy Somerset country, Pennsylvania. On the far horizon was a smoky blur he knew was Pittsburgh. He had been following the long, brown ribbon, wide and straight as a string for many hundreds of yards before it gently curved with hardly a grade—the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

The pilot picked a wide green field beside this highway, dropped down, made his landing and his repairs. A quick call to the state police and the road was ready, for it is a defense highway now, a vital part of the arteries of transportation of war supplies. But here was a new use for this wild dream that has become a stern reality.

Traffic was stopped, the great bomber taxied out of the field and onto the highway. The pavement made a perfect runway. The straight-way was of sufficient length, the cuts were low and the wing-spread passed over all appurtenances. The good ship rose and was on its way.

This was no flight of the imagination. It was a real flight which took place and was described a little over a year ago by Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, one of Washington's air-minded congressmen.

And so a super-highway becomes an adjunct of what is to be America's super airways. More than 35 planes, Mr. Randolph tells me, have taken advantage of this emergency landing highway.

New Chapter Opens

And so a new chapter opens in American roadbuilding. A new reason for the development of the countryside that is to come after the war—must come if we are to meet the demands of tomorrow's transportation, of tomorrow's demand for public works to take up the slack after the war until industry can absorb the returned soldier and the jobless warplant worker.

In spite of the many pressing war needs, congress is more awake today to the needs of the air and the collary developments on the ground than it ever has been before.

Today, a Pennsylvanian, transported to Washington, cons the press and listens to the radio each day (he is retired from an active business life in which he has amassed a modest fortune) for word of some new benefit that child of his, the Pennsylvania Turnpike, has given to the country. He is Walter Jones. The Turnpike was a peacetime venture. He obtained funds from the $29,250,000 federal grant and the Reconstruction Finance corporation purchased bonds amounting to $40,800,000. The first issue was oversubscribed by the public by 60 per cent. The Turnpike is a toll road and the first year of operation, the revenue was nearly three million dollars.

No wonder. It was an engineer's dream come true—and a motorist's, too. As near a curveless, gradeless, intersectionless, straightaway that one could wish. When war came with the overtaxed railways, it was a Godsend for it opened a veritable Volga of trucking from Pittsburgh, its western terminal, to Harrisburg.

Dual Purpose

"I feel confident," says Representative Randolph, "twenty years will liquidate the RFC loan."

So much for that highway which may well be the father of many.

It has served another purpose. The emergency plane landing merely symbolizes what can be done by the highway for the plane.

The answer is the "flight strip" for which congress appropriated ten million dollars as experimentation.

What is a "flight strip"? Officially defined, it is "an area of land with clear approaches located to an adjacent highway for use as an auxiliary landing area for aircraft."

The war advantage of this new institution is obvious.

We know what to expect in the increased number of planes after the war. We know the limitation in matter of space of the airports. We can guess what the men who have talked "flight strips" for years know, what the development of these runways will mean.

As Fred Schiepfe, special engineering consultant to the administrator of the Federal Works agency, says: "The congress, the state highway departments, and the contractors are pulling together toward the end that the projects will be built in the shortest possible time."

About Poached Eggs—And the Awe of a Kitchen

Only recently, when my wife was away for some time, did I learn to poach an egg, and in so doing, at last lost my awe of the kitchen. It was my early training that gave me that awe. Neither my grandmother nor my mother would permit "men in the kitchen" unless they had specific masculine business there.

"No, you sit down in the corner and read the paper to me. I can dry the dishes quicker without you helping. And there won't be any streaks on the cups."

Of course, there were times when a man's presence was permitted. Naturally, when he was allowed to eat there or when the kindling had to be brought in or the coal hod filled. But even then, only when Milana, the young Scandinavian giantess who was the hired girl, was otherwise engaged.

When I was quite small, I was allowed to play in the kitchen when traffic was light. But that was a special privilege. The bare scrubbed floor was excellent for tops. And, of course, was that much nearer the cookies, and if I was present during the early stages of cake-baking, there were the odd pieces of sweet dough that I loved, and sometimes, a chance to "lick the pan" which was not as unsanitary a practice as it sounds. It really meant a chance to scrape out the dish after the frosting had been mixed.

But there were bitter memories of cake-baking time, too, the stimulant for which added to my respect for the kitchen. Once, coming back from school, I leapt into the room and started to stamp the crisp snow from my rubbers. There was (oh culpa mea!) a cake in the oven. It fell and soon my pride followed for I was placed in a most embarrassing position — a horizontal position I might add.

Other Reasons

There were many reasons why my love of the kitchen was mingled with a respect that has not quite gone even though the graceful curves of the range whose covers could glow like a summer sun and whose isinglass eyes beamed so cheerfully, has long since gone. The kitchen table with its white oilcloth, with only a few scars at one end—another why men weren't allowed in these sacred precincts—"Now who has been cutting bread without the breadboard again?"

I am not, of course, describing the spacious room of the farmhouse when I talk about my kitchen memories for I lived "in town" although the orchard began just beyond the back fence and fields, an easy walk beyond the place where the sidewalk became two parallel planks with a space between (perilous to maneuver on a bicycle) and then ended in a pathway.

No, mine was not the spacious kitchen where half a dozen could eat at once. But it took care of the family with a little crowding of Sunday nights around the remnants of last night's baked beans and the other delicious leftovers.

Souvenir Calendar

We had room for the little rag rug under the rocker by the window and the Journal's bright "souvenir" calendar adorned the wall—that "annual gift" of the newsboy is about the only thing left in today's white kitchen where you can't tell the sink from the gas stove or the cabinet or the ice box. That and the dotted swiss curtains in my kitchen.

But you may break, you may shatter my dream if you will, when you open one shiny door, the scent of the spices cling about it still. I have lost my awe of the kitchen but loving memories linger and latterly it has, in a measure, increased my self-respect. At long last no one to stop me, I have learned to poach an egg.

In Crimean War There Were 'Horse Marines'

"Horse Marines" is an expression supposed to have originated in England. It means, as you know, stupid or impossible persons. When the present corps of British marines was formed in 1775, officers came from the half-pay lists of all sorts of army units, including cavalry regiments. And the idea of a cavalryman serving on the deck of a ship undoubtedly amused irreverent folk who started the expression.

In the Crimean war a certain Captain Brock actually did mount his marines when he was facing Cossacks.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

FOREWORD

This story was told me largely in the officers' quarters of the Motor Torpedo Boat station at Melville, Rhode Island, by four young officers of MTB Squadron 3, who were all that was left of the squadron which proudly sailed for the Philippines last summer. A fifth officer, Lieutenant Henry J. Brantingham, has since arrived from Australia.

These men had been singled out from the multitude for return to America because General MacArthur believed that the MTB's had proved their worth in warfare, and hoped that these officers could bring back to America their actual battle experience, by which trainees could benefit.

Their Squadron Commander, Lieutenant John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant-Commander) of course needs no introduction, as he is already a national hero for his part in bringing MacArthur out of Bataan. But because the navy was then keeping him so busy fulfilling his obligations as a national hero, Bulkeley had to delegate to Lieutenant Robert Bolling Kelly a major part of the task of rounding out the narrative. I think the reader will agree that the choice was wise, for Lieutenant Kelly, in addition to being a brave and competent naval officer, has a sense of narrative and a keen eye for significant detail, two attributes which may never help him in battle but which were of great value to this book. Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr., also contributed much vivid detail.

As a result, I found when I had finished that I had not just the adventure story of a single squadron, but in the background the whole tragic panorama of the Philippine campaign—America's little Dunkirk.

We are a democracy, running a war. If our mistakes are concealed from us, they can never be corrected. Facts are frequently and properly withheld in a war, because the enemy would take advantage of our weaknesses if he knew them. But this story now can safely be told because the sad chapter is ended. The Japanese know just how inadequate our equipment was, because they destroyed or captured practically all of it.

I have been wandering in and out of wars since 1939, and many times before have I seen the sad young men come out of battle—come with the whistle of flying steel and the rumble of falling walls still in their ears, come out to the fat, well fed cities behind the lines, where the complacent citizens always choose from the newsstands those papers whose headlines proclaim every skirmish as a magnificent victory.

And through those plump cities the sad young men back from battle wander as strangers in a strange land, talking a grim language of realism which the smug citizenry doesn't understand, trying to tell of a tragedy which few enjoy hearing.

These four sad young men differ from those I have talked to in Europe only in that they are Americans, and the tragedy they bear witness to is our own failure, and the smugness they struggle against is our own complacency.

CHAPTER I

"You don't understand," said the young naval officer, "we were expendable." He was very earnest as he lolled on the bunk in the officers' quarters of the torpedo station at Newport, along with the other three officers who had also just got out of the Philippines.

I admitted I didn't understand.

"Well, it's like this. Suppose you're a sergeant machine-gunner, and your army is retreating and the enemy advancing. The captain takes you to a machine gun covering the road. 'You're to stay here and hold this position,' he tells you. 'For how long?' you ask. 'Never mind,' he answers, 'just hold it.' Then you know you're expendable. In a war, anything can be expendable—money or gasoline or equipment or most usually men. They are expending you and that machine gun to get time. They don't expect to see either one again. They expect you to stay there and spray that road with steel until you're killed or captured, holding up the enemy for a few minutes or even a precious quarter of an hour.

"You know the situation—that those few minutes gained are worth the life of a man to your army. So you don't mind it until you come back here where people waste hours and days and sometimes weeks, when you've seen your friends give their lives to save minutes—"

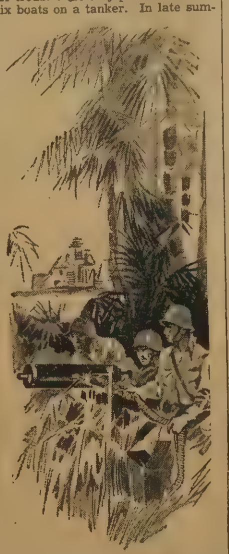
"Look, never mind about that," said Lieutenant John Bulkeley, the senior officer. "People don't like to hear about that. I've learned that in the week I've been back. Let's start at the beginning. And first a word about us.

"We four are what is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron three. Last fall there were six little boats—and about a dozen men to a boat. Each one is a plywood speedboat, seventy feet long and twenty feet wide, powered by three Packard motors which can send her roaring over the top of the water about as fast as a Packard automobile ever gets a chance to travel on a highway. So fast, in fact, that those motors have to be changed every few hundred hours. They should be, but what happens to that pretty theory in a war is another story—we lost every spare motor when our bases were bombed, and some of those in the boats had to do quadruple their allotted term before the boats were lost—but that's getting ahead of the story.

"Each boat is armed with four torpedo tubes, and four 50-caliber machine guns—firing in pairs from each side. As for armor, well, there's a story on that. The first time we tangled with the Japs one of our machine-gunners kept crouching down behind the shield which rose just under the noses of his guns. When it was over we asked him why he hadn't stood up to fire.

"'Hell,' he said, 'I didn't want to get nicked. I was crouching down behind that armor.' Then we had to tell him that shield was ⅜-inch plywood—keeps spray out of your eyes, but it can't stop anything the Japs might send. There isn't an ounce of armor steel on the boat—we're little eggshells, designed to roar in, let fly a Sunday punch, and then get the hell out, zigging to dodge the shells—but again I'm getting ahead.

"We went out to the islands last fall. I was commanding officer of the squadron—I'd picked every officer and man in the outfit from volunteers—told them we were heading for trouble. So they piled us and our six boats on a tanker. In late summer, we snuck through the Panama Canal one night, and were steaming up Manila Bay in the early fall.



"They expect you to stay there until you're killed or captured."

"On my way back here last week, I had a few hours in Honolulu, and the boys were still talking about how they'd been surprised on December 7. I don't know why they should have been, because they got the same warning we did in Manila. That war was maybe days, perhaps even only hours, away. The only thing that surprised us was that it was Pearl Harbor that got the first attack, not us.

"We'd been following the negotiations. We knew we needed sixty more days to put the islands in shape for decent defense. We needed planes and tanks. Most important of all, at least half the Filipino army had never had a uniform on until a few weeks before the fighting started. They needed training, and Washington knew this just as well as we did, and of course didn't want war.

"But now for a little geography. Here's Manila Bay—a big beautiful harbor twenty miles across. At the far end is the city of Manila, and if you were suddenly put down there, you'd think you were in Los Angeles, until you noticed the faces of the people. At the mouth of Manila Bay, the upper lip is Bataan Peninsula and the lower one is Batangas, with the Rock—Corregidor Island—a hard little pill between the two lips. And we are stationed at Cavite, the big American naval base on the lower side of the bay, about halfway between Manila and the harbor's mouth.

"We're under orders of Admiral Hart, who is Commander in Chief of the Far Eastern fleet, based there. Only how long will we stay? Because as war drew close, rumors began to fly. If it came soon, we might be getting out because we didn't have air superiority. The Japs could run down from Formosa and bag our little Asiatic fleet, so maybe we'd be pulling out for the southern islands, waiting for aircraft carriers which would bring fighters to protect us.

"The night of December 8 we were all asleep in the officers' quarters at Cavite," Bulkeley went on, "when my telephone rang about three in the morning and I first learned the Japs had struck at Pearl Harbor."

"When they shook me, I didn't believe it," said Ensign Akers. He's a tall, dark silent Texan. "I was sure they were kidding. I just said, 'It's a hell of a time to declare war,' and rolled over."

"The message said I was to come on down to the Commandantia," continued Bulkeley. "It's an old thick-walled Spanish building, and when I got there, Admiral Rockwell, who was in command at Cavite, and Captain Ray, his chief of staff, were already dressed. Dawn was just beginning to break over Manila Bay, and the Admiral was watching the sky. 'They ought to be here any minute,' he said. And then he told me to prepare my six boats for war stations. They were going to send us over to Bataan at the naval base in Mariveles Harbor, just opposite Corregidor."

"I was prepared for the war," said Kelly, the squadron's second in command, a tall blond lieutenant with quick blue eyes. "I'd heard about the secret operation orders—what the fleet would do under any of three eventualities, so the night before I'd gone over to the Army and Navy Club at Manila and put aboard the thickest charcoal-broiled filet mignon I could buy there, plus French fries and a big tomato with Roquefort dressing, finishing off with brandy and a cigar. I figured I'd at least have them to remember.

"We spent that first day fully manned, anticipating a bombing attack. Five of the boats were dispersed along the shore about a hundred yards apart—the sixth was patrolling. All day we loaded them with food—cans of corned beef, Vienna sausage, vegetables, and canned potatoes — don't laugh at that, it's better than rice—canned fruit, fruit, coffee.

"I saw the first planes about noon flying out over the bay. At first I thought they were ours, but after about a minute our shore batteries opened up. They were coming over at 20,000 and of course immediately we shoved all our boats off and out into the bay. But we heard nothing drop. It was probably just a reconnaissance raid—feeling us out.

"Of course there were all kinds of rumors — that Zamboanga and Davao, down in the southern archipelago, had been taken. Also that our navy patrol planes had gone up to Northern Luzon to intercept Jap transports gathering off Aparri there. We even heard our aircraft tenders had been surprised and taken, but that one proved false. Yet that morning, nothing was sure.

"About three o'clock orders came from Squadron Commander Bulkeley to send three boats, under my command, over to Mariveles on Bataan and report to the submarine tender there for food, water, and torpedoes, and to remain on the ready—available to go out and attack anything he ordered us to. By five o'clock we cast off. We had some passengers to deliver at Corregidor, so it was eight and plenty dark before we were outside the mine fields, feeling our way into Mariveles. We thought we knew those mine fields, but in pitch-darkness, with the mine-field lights turned off and of course no lights on our boats now, it was something else again.

"At this point the army took over. They heard the roar of our motors and thought it was Jap planes. Searchlights began winking on all over Bataan, feeling up into the sky for planes—our motors were echoing against the mountains on Bataan, so they couldn't tell where the noise was coming from. Every artillery post for twenty-six kilometers around went on the alert, and for a few minutes it was a question whether we were going to be blown to hell by a mine or by one of our own shore batteries.

"But finally we snaked through, tied up alongside our sub tender, and then its skipper delivered a piece of nasty news. Told us he had orders to get under way just before daylight, out to sea—didn't know just where they were sending him—maybe south, maybe the Dutch East Indies, anyway, he wouldn't be back.

"So then the fun began. There we were—no base, rations for only ten days, and a big problem in how we were to live ourselves and what in hell we would do with the boats when the planes came over. In addition to which, we were almost flat out of gas, and what would we do for fuel to fight this war?

"Pretty soon we began finding some of the answers. For instance just around the coast from Mariveles in Sisiman Cove was a native village—practically abandoned except for a few families—about twenty nipa huts in all. We moved in and took over. A nipa hut is a little contraption—single room with thatched roof and sides—up off the ground four or five feet on bamboo stilts. Under it the natives keep their pigs and chickens. The floor is split bamboo, and never very tight, so the crumbs and small pieces of garbage dropped on it can sift down into the pigs and chickens. In one corner of the hut is a sandbox, and on this sand they build a fire for cooking. There never is a chimney—the smoke just goes out the windows or through the floor cracks.

A PARTIAL DISCRIPTION OF A BOY

A fellow by the name of Herbert M. Smith is credited with the authorship of this partial description of a critter that may be found in many a home. Possibly you may be able to find one in yours.

"After a male baby has grown out of long clothes and has acquired pants and freckles and so much dirt that well-meaning relatives do not dare to kiss it between meals, it becomes a BOY.

"A boy is Nature's irrefutable answer to mankind's belief that there is no such thing as perpetual motion. A boy is a man minus pride, ambition, pretense, greed, and about one hundred and ten pounds. When he grows up he will trade romance, energy, bashfulness, warts, and a snag-proof stomach for these other possessions. But then a boy is usually getting the worst of it in some trade or other.

"The world is so full of boys that it is impossible to touch off a firecracker, strike up a band, or pitch a ball game without collecting about a thousand of him. Boys are not ornamental, but they are useful. If it were not for boys the newspapers of this country would go undelivered and unread, and a thousand circus elephants would die of thirst.

"Boys are useful in running errands. The zest with which a boy does an errand is only equaled by the spirit in which a twenty-year old Missouri Mule pulls a wagon loaded with bricks. With the aid of five or six adults, a boy can easily do the family errands.

"The boy is a natural spectator; watching things is his sport. He watches parades, fires, fights, ball games, dogs, ice wagons, mud turtles, bumble bees, automobiles, trains, boats, hand organs and airplanes with equal fevor. But he will not watch the clock. The man who invents a clock that will stand upon its head and sing a song when it strikes, will confer an inestimable boon on millions of families whose boys are forever coming home to dinner along about supper time.

"Boys are not popular except with their parents, but they do have many fine points. One is their trustworthiness. You can absolutely rely on a boy, if you know what to rely on Trust him to get into some kind of mischief every day, for instance, and he will not disappoint you.

"Boys are abstenious, eating only when awake. They are also very durable. A boy, if not washed too often and if kept in a cool, quiet place for a while after each accident, will survive broken bones, hornets, swimming holes, massacres, and nine helpings of pie at one sitting. If only some genius would invent a method of making a boy's clothes as durable as he is this old world would be a much happier place for boy-raisers."

ARCHIE'S CHAPEL

Annie R. Campbell, Pastor

Members and friends of the church are asked to come this Saturday to work again on the grounds. Please bring more shrubbery, bermuda grass, plows, rakes, hoes, etc, ready to work.

The following services and meetings will be held:—

SATURDAY:

9:30 Music lessons—Mrs. Irene Petersen.
3:00 Women's Missionary Society Pres.—Mrs. Lloyd Ray.
7:15 Church Services.

SUNDAY:

10:00 Sunday School Supt.—Mrs. Frank Cook.
.11:00 Church Service.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CLANTON:

Several members of the City Council have been requested that a news article from the Council be written calling parents attention to the danger of Children skating in the streets.

We appreciate the fact that the children have very few places in Clanton for recreation, but until some place can be provided, parents are requested to caution their Children not to skate in the open streets.

MOUNTAIN SPRINGS

Annie R. Campbell, Pastor

The Mountain Springs Church Services will be postponed from the 2nd Sunday to the third Sunday of this month.

SHILOH NEWS

Our services were very good Sunday and Sunday night. Rev. J. I. Bice, our pastor, delivered an inspiring message at each service.

The B. T. U. meets each Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock with a good program, but it seems that there should be a larger number at these services. Lets try to gete more of our members out to help in our church work, especially the young people. Our union enjoyed very much their quarterly social given at the home of Mrs. W. E. Owen, Saturday night.

We are sorry to report the sickness of Mrs. W. T. Henderson and Mrs. Olen Bice. We hope they will soon be well and back to church with us.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E Owen and Evelyn visited Mrs. Carlos Owen of Maplesville, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson and son spent Sunday night with relatives here.

Mrs. Jewel Wright and family visited her sister, Mrs. Olen Bice, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Glenn were visiting in this community over the week-end.—Reporter.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By JESSE CULP

Isabella students, like all others in Chilton County, are coming to school yawning and rubbing their eyes this week when school has started taking in one hour earlier than the usual 9 o'clock. Of course this works a hardship on some of the students who live on the ends of the bus routes, but it is a necessary measure, since it enables us to get out earlier to help in keeping the farms going under the strain of a great labor shortage.

March has in former years been short in its quota of births as is proven at Isabella. In checking up, I found only three students in the entire school who have birthdays in the month of March. Birthday greetings to these three, whose birthdays are listed below:

Mildred Chandler, March 31; Frances Edwards, March 30, and Elrie Wilson, March 18.

Now that tests are again over and the reports have been made, we find that I. H. S. students haven't done so bad in their scholastic accomplishments for the last six weeks. The Junior I Class seems to have led in the "A's" with Annie Lee Mizzell stepping up to claim fve of the coveted grading symbols and to lead the class.

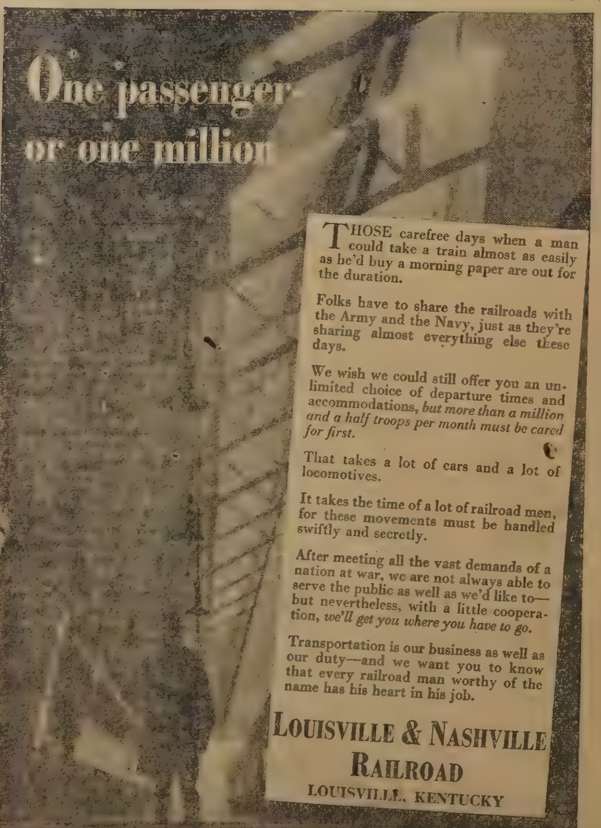
"RIGHT OF WAY FOR THE U. S. A."



THOSE carefree days when a man could take a train almost as easily as he'd buy a morning paper are out for the duration.

Folks have to share the railroads with the Army and the Navy, just as they're sharing almost everything else these days.

We wish we could still offer you an unlimited choice of departure times and accommodations, but more than a million and a half troops per month must be cared for first.

That takes a lot of cars and a lot of locomotives.

It takes the time of a lot of railroad men, for these movements must be handled swiftly and secretly.

After meeting all the vast demands of a nation at war, we are not always able to serve the public as well as we'd like to—but nevertheless, with a little cooperation, we'll get you where you have to go.

Transportation is our business as well as our duty—and we want you to know that every railroad man worthy of the name has his heart in his job.

EXTRA-MILEAGE RECAPPI

Two jobs of tire recapping may look alike and still be as different as black and white in performance. Reliable recapping takes time, skill, care.

That's the kind you get from us — reliable recapping, done the Goodyear way with Goodyear materials and by Goodyear factory methods.

But remember — you must not drive your old tire too long before having it recapped. It is too late when the tread is worn down into the fabric. The tire casing must be sound. If your old tire can be safely recapped, bring it here for Goodyear Extra-Mileage Recapping, to get many months more wear.

If your tire is too badly worn to allow recapping, you can apply for a replacement tire — a sou tire, a recapped tire, War Tire, or a new tire — depending on you age classification. Wh your tire needs, depend on getting th are entitled to here!

REES-HENLEY MARRIAGE

A marriage of much interest to a large group of friends in Alabama and Chilton County was that of Beulah H. Henley of Clanton to Harley Rees of Newark, Ohio, and Huntington, W. Va., on Thursday, March 4 in Montgomery by Judge Wm. H. Hill. The ring ceremony was used.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed Mullins are the proud parents of a baby girl, whom they have named Sophia Ann. The mother and new baby are in a Montgomery hospital and doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Grimmett of Birmingham visited the latter's mother, Mrs. Mark L. Tucker, last week-end and Mrs. Tucker went home with them for a few days visit.

Wilbur Prince is home from the University for the spring holidays.

Little Dianne Sm,th, daughter of Lt. and Mrs. Dan Smith, celebrated her fourth birthday recently with her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. C. O. Lawrence, and a group of her little friends.

Mrs. Chas. Plyer is home now and is rapidly recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

MRS. J. P. HAYES STUDY CLUB HOSTESS

The Study Club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. J. P. Hayes as hostess. Baskets of buttercups and hyacinths were artistically arranged in the living room.

In the absence of the presdent Mrs. M. C. Hayes, vice president, presided. This being the annual meeting intersting reports of the year's activities were read by various officers and committee chairmen. The hostess served a delightful salad plate and tea to 10 members.

Circle Four of Clanton Baptist Church held their first meeting for this month at the home of Mrs. Mell Martin with 12 members present. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. Houston Nivens, and Mrs. J. P. Hayes brought the devotional message. Mrs. Nivens read an article on the life of Dr. Plainfield. A very brief business session was held and the meeting dismissed by repeating Mispah in unison.

A delightful social hour was enjoyed by those present and the hostess served a delicious salad plate with hot chocolate. She was assisted in serving by her little grandson, Donald.

Circle Four of the Methodist W. S. C. S. met at the home of Mrs. Oscar Jones last Monday afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. R. C. Williams. Prof. Patterson Hicks, the visiting speaker, gave a most interesting Bible lesson and Oscar Davis rendered a very lovely trumpet solo. The meeting was dismissed with the Lords Prayer repeated in unison after which the hostess served a delicious salad plate

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Morton and children, Miss Lois West and Mrs. A. J. Chappell, visited in Tuscaloosa last week-end. The Mortons attended the wedding of his brother, Max Morton. The bride and groom were guests of the Mortons here the first part of this week.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MILITARY experts contend that "Singing soldiers are fighting soldiers"—so American army men on all fronts and in camps at home are to receive army hit-kits each month, with the lyrics of six top songs selected by the soldiers and a committee headed by Fred Waring. As chairman he conferred with Mark Warnow, director of NBC's "Your All Time Hit Parade," Lanny Ross, Jimmy Dorsey, Connie Boswell, Major Howard J. Bronson and Captain Harry Salter. Kate Smith and Guy Lombardo are also members of the committee.

Laraine Day, Cary Grant's leading lady in RKO's "Mr. Lucky," has her biggest opportunity in that picture, but she had to be killed off to get it. Remember her as Dr. Kildare's nurse in the Kildare series? She became so popular in that role that they did away with her in "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day" so that she'd have a chance to go on to bigger and better things.

For some time the major motion picture companies have been eyeing "One Man's Family"—it's been a leading radio serial for 11 years, and has an estimated weekly audience of 21½ million listeners. Charles R. Rogers finally captured the screen rights, for United Artists release, by paying Carleton R. Morse the highest price ever paid for a radio program!

ODDS AND ENDS

Vera Vague, of the Bob Hope radio program, who's made several Republic pictures, has been signed by Columbia to appear in a special series of short comedies next season . . . Columbia's picked up its option on Ann Savage: after completing a three-weeks' tour of army camps and naval stations she was given the second feminine lead in "Right Guy" . . . Bill Tuttle, make-up expert, made Donna Reed up for her first screen test, which won her a long-term contract with Metro: their recent wedding was one result. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BY HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

IN THE UPPER ROOM

LESSON TEXT—John 13:12-20; 14:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Calvary and crucifixion were just ahead. Jesus gathered His disciples for a time of communion and instruction as they spent their last evening together. On the morrow would come betrayal, but now they and their Lord were together in the upper room.

But even here strife and dissension had apparently come in. There was probably some difference of opinion as to who should have the place of honor. To teach them the virtue of humility Jesus gave them an example, after which He continued with the precious counsel and prayer which are found in John 14 to 17.

Our lesson presents three things which our Lord gave to His disciples and to us (see John 17:20).

I. His Example—"Do as I Have Done" (13:12-20).

The act of Jesus in washing the disciples' feet placed Him, their Lord and Teacher, on the level of the most menial servant. It was an astonishing thing that He did, lowering Himself below their level to serve them.

His application of the object lesson was equally startling. "Ye call me Teacher and Lord, and ye say well," said He. Then as learners and servants He required of them the humility which would make them eager to do lowly service in His name.

There are more than enough folk who are willing to do the nice, pleasant things in the church, where they will be given recognition and praise. All too scarce are those Christlike folk who will serve in the hidden places where darkness, suffering, disease and sin make the natural man recoil in distress or fear.

II. His Assurance—"If I Go I Will Come Again" (14:1-3).

Following His resurrection Jesus was to go to the Father. He wanted them to be prepared for that time by making known to them the fact of His coming again. In that day His own shall be received unto Himself to abide with Him forever.

The second coming of Christ is not a strange doctrine held by little groups of people who are riding a theological hobby. It is one of the most blessed truths of Scripture. The hope of the Christian—yes, the only real hope of this disordered world—is the coming of Christ to reign. The New Testament is full of plain and helpful teaching on this subject.

While we await His coming, then, is there any encouragment for us as the burdens bear down and the way seems long? Yes, He says: "Let not your heart be troubled" (v. 1). There is little question that this passage has comforted more people than any other word in Scripture.

Countless bewildered and broken souls in all lands and times have here found the steadying assurance of the one who has the power to give them rest and comfort.

There is good foundation for their composure of heart in a troubled world. They believe in God, and in Christ, who is one with the Father. Here is real security—infinitely superior to aught the world can give.

Then at the end of the road are the eternal dwelling places. What they are like is sufficiently revealed in the fact that they are in the Father's house. How shall we reach them? That is our last point. We have

III. His Guidance—"I Am the Way" (vv. 4-6).

To Christ's declaration that they knew the way, Thomas responded with a request for a definite statement. He wanted to be sure, and Christ responded by reminding him that He, their Lord, is the "way, the truth, and the life." Surely there could be no more complete provision for the guidance of the heavenly pilgrim.

Christ is "the way." If one takes the right road he will reach the right destination though he "cannot at first see it clearly. Perhaps this is the commonest mistake of the Christian. He frets too much about what lies ahead . . . and not enough about taking the right road" (Lesson Commentary).

He is "the truth." He is the final and complete revelation of God, and is therefore the One who will lead all those who walk the way by faith into the fullness of the truth. To know Christ is to know God.

He is "the life." He is life, and He alone can give eternal life to man. There is none other to whom man may turn for life, but in Christ it is found, and from Him it may be received by faith.

We have only touched the briefest beginning of what took place on that remarkable evening in the upper room. It was a time of richest spiritual significance, of dark betrayal, but also of closest communion. We continue next Sunday.

Not Meat Loaf . . . But Pea-Potato Loaf!
(See Recipes Below)

Menu Magic

New life for your meals—without meat. That's a problem which concerns us more day after day. A balanced diet dictates we must have a serving or more of meat or fish or beans or peas—one of those will fill our protein need—and give us energy, build and repair our tissues.

To homemakers who for years have used generous quantities of meat—this use of other protein foods may be a new, but a delightful lesson in cookery.

Vegetable dinners, please — and make attractive platters. Consider the excellent possibilities of strips of green beans, carrots, clusters of white cauliflower and diced beets in orange sauce—topped off in the center with a poached egg on toast.

Or, here is a loaf made of iron-supplying potatoes and protein-supplying peas fashioned in a loaf gaily garnished with egg dice amid broiled bacon:

Pea and Potato Loaf.
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons vitaminized margarine
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1 cup fresh or canned peas, mashed
1 cup cooked potatoes, mashed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup thick white sauce
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Broiled bacon, if desired

Brown crumbs in vitaminized margarine and sprinkle ½ of them into a well greased loaf pan (8½ by 4½ by 2¾ inches) to form a lining. Mix together peas, potatoes, remaining crumbs and seasonings. Add white sauce (2 tablespoons vitaminized margarine, 2 tablespoons flour and ½ cup milk), and mix well. Alternate layers of peas and potato mixture and sliced eggs until all is used. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 25 minutes, or until set. Serve with Tomato Sauce made by the addition of 2 tablespoons of vitaminized margarine and a bay leaf to a can of undiluted tomato soup and cooked together several minutes. Garnish with eggs or broiled bacon, if desired.

Your family will exclaim pretty-pretty when you serve this au gratin dish—ringed attractively with carrot slices. The cheese-white sauce combination can make it a main dish:

Cabbage and Celery Au Gratin.
(Serves 6)

5 cups raw cabbage, shredded
3 tablespoons butter or other shortening
1 cup diced celery
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 cup thin cream or top milk
1 cup cabbage cooking water
1 cup grated cheese
½ cup sliced carrots

Cook cabbage in small amount of boiling salted water for eight minutes. Drain and reserve 1 cup liquid. Melt butter in saucepan. Add diced celery and cook about 3 minutes. Remove from heat and blend in flour. Combine cabbage water and cream or top milk. Scald and add gradually to the mixture. Stir constantly and continue to cook until mixture is smooth and thickened. Add ½ cup of the grated cheese and cook until melted. Remove from heat. Place alternate layers of cabbage and sauce in a greased casserole. Top with carrots and sauce. Sprinkle with remaining grated cheese and dot with pimiento. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Pork and Parsnip Luncheon Dish.
(Serves 6)

1 pound fresh pork, diced
1 medium onion, minced
3 cups boiling water
3 cups diced cooked parsnips
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons minced parsley

Brown the pork cubes in their own fat in a hot skillet. When well browned, add the minced onion and simmer for 3 minutes. Add the water and cook gently until the meat is almost tender, then add the salt, pepper and parsnips. Continue cooking for 10 to 15 minutes. Thicken the remaining liquid and serve on a hot platter, with the gravy separate. Sprinkle with parsley.

Another pork dish makes use of hearts, one of the unrestricted cuts of meat:

Baked Stuffed Pork Heart.

3 or 4 pork hearts
3 slices bacon
1 cup fine bread crumbs
1 small onion
Salt
Pepper
Flour for dredging
Lard for browning

Wash hearts and remove enough of center portion to permit addition of the dressing or stuffing. Dice bacon and fry until crisp. Combine with bread crumbs. Season with finely minced onion. Season cavity in hearts, fill with stuffing, and fasten with skewers. Roll in flour and brown quickly in hot lard, in a heavy kettle. Add a small amount of water. Cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until the hearts are done —2 to 2½ hours. Thicken the liquid for gravy if desired.

Baked Spinach.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 pounds spinach
6 tablespoons flour
5 tablespoons fat, melted
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons grated cheese
¾ cup bread crumbs

Wash and chop spinach. Arrange in layers in baking dish, sprinkling flour between layers. Mix fat, milk, salt and pepper and pour over spinach. Combine grated cheese and bread crumbs and place over top. Bake in moderate (350-degree) oven about 45 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Meaty Facts: If beef supplies are low, learn to use pork, for it's one of the best sources of the B vitamins. It also contains high quality proteins and minerals and is 96 to 98 per cent digestible when cooked long, at low temperature.

The non-restricted meats, liver, heart, kidneys, oxtails, etc., are as nutritious as the restricted cuts. Learn to use them by themselves or by combining them with restricted cuts so you can s-t-r-e-t-c-h that meat budget.

Tougher cuts of meat will be on your menus often, because they take less points than the expensive cuts. Most of them can be cooked by braising—that is, browning in hot fat, then adding water or another liquid, and cooking at long, slow heat until the meat is tender.

Cake Making? Bread Making? Cookie Baking? Budget Fixing? Housekeeping? You name the problem and explain it. Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice if you write to her, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your reply, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill.

Buck Private Felt That Promotion Was Due Him

Accompanied by a driver, an American major in a motor vehicle was stopped by the sentry on guard at a cross-roads.

"Who goes there?"

"One American major, a one-ton truck of fertilizer, and one buck private."

They were allowed to proceed, but at every cross-roads they went through the same formula.

After a time the driver asked if they were likely to be stopped again.

"I guess so," replied the major.

"Well, major," said the private, "the next time we are stopped would you mind giving me priority over the fertilizer?"

Help your Grocer
Let's Get Behind Him and Make Rationing a Success–Start Now to use more of the plentiful NON-RATIONED FOODS

THE man who runs your grocery store has his headaches these days. For months, in the face of shortages and lack of experienced help, he's been trying to carry on . . . trying to give you the kind of service you've always expected of him.

Now he has a brand new problem—point rationing. He has to collect the stamps from you as well as the cash.

It's a burden for him—sure—and for you. But he knows and you know that it's got to be done. It's the only fair way of making sure that everybody gets a fair share. That's our way of doing things.

So it's his job—and your job—everybody's job—to make point rationing work . . . as smoothly, as efficiently as possible. Traffic jams in food stores aren't going to help anybody.

Now there are a number of ways in which you can give this grocer of yours a real hand . . . in a good, neighborly American way. You can shop early in the day, early in the week. You can shop as infrequently as possible—once a week only, if you can manage. You can always make sure to have a shopping list, and to have your "point values" added up before you go to the store.

And you can help yourself as well as your grocer by using the plentiful, non-rationed foods as much as you can, instead of the scarce, rationed foods. Foods such as cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, home-cooked soups, home-canned fruits and vegetables are not rationed and they deserve an important place in your wartime meals.

☆ ☆ ☆

Because cereals are one of these abundant unrationed foods, we here at the Kellogg factory in Battle Creek have been doing everything we possibly can to meet the unprecedented demand for our products. We're sending millions upon millions of packages of crisp Kellogg Cereals to the boys in our armed forces. We're packing K-ration for troops in the front line of fighting. Even our machine shop is making gun parts! And we're short of help, too. There are 423 stars on the big service flag hanging in the lobby of the Kellogg building.

Other ways to help your Grocer...
1. Shop early in the day.
2. Shop early in the week.
3. Shop only once or twice a week.
4. Prepare a shopping list.
5. Add up total "point" values before going to the store.

But in spite of these wartime difficulties, we've doubled our efforts to be sure that we can supply Kellogg Cereals to the millions of American families who are depending on cereals more than ever.

☆ ☆ ☆

Always famous for marvelous flavor, every Kellogg Cereal [illegible] made of WHOLE GRAIN or is restored to WHOLE GRAIN NUTRITIVE VALUES through the addition of thiamin (vitamin B_1), niacin and iron. With milk alone, or with milk and fruit, a bowl of crisp, delicious Kellogg Cereal gives you vitamins, minerals, protein, food-energy in one dish!

And remember this about cereals in your daily meals. They're quick and easy to prepare. No cooking, no pans or skillets to clean up. Even the dishes are easier to wash.

Cereals save time—work—fuel—other foods. Used in hamburger, meat-loaves, croquettes, etc., they help you stretch your meat . . . and they make milk go farther, too.

Think of cereals as one of your best, most nutritious, non-rationed foods and think of Kellogg Cereals as the finest you can buy.

FROM O.P.A. CONSUMER INSTRUCTION SHEET
"EAT MORE CEREALS—There is an abundance of cereals and, as you know, they are mighty economical. They are nourishing and delicious—what's more, cereals can be used to stretch your rations when mixed with vegetables and fruits."

How Farmers May

used in calculating fertilizer requirements exceed the Alabama Experiment Station recommendation (except in the case of soybeans and peanuts) and in no case can a farmer buy and use more fertilizer than his calculated fertilizer requirements.

Procedure farmer should follow in registering complaint concerning amount of fertilizer he received.

All complaints should be registered with the County War Board. If the County War Board cannot arrange a satisfactory settlement, they will refer the case to the State War Board. Mr. Warren Belser, 708 Narrow Lane Road, Montgomery, Ala., has been assigned to Alabama by F. P. A. to help clear up difficulties that may arise.

Does tonnage of fertilizer that a farmer bought in 1940-41 or 1941-42 season determine amount he can buy in 1943?

The total tonnage of fertilizer bought by a farmer in the past does not govern the amount of fertilizer he can buy in 1943. The fertilizer requirement should be calculated as described in the first part of this article.

Can a farmer always purchase all the fertilizer he is entiled to according to the calculated fertilizer requirements for his farm?

Calculating the fertilizer re ments of farms is simply a meth putting all farms on a common Whether a farmer will be able to chase the total amount of fer necessary to meet his requiremnt depend on the total supply fo state. A farmer should be able t enough fertilizer to meet the re ments of the "A" crops he will but it is not expected that he w able to buy enough to satisfy th quirements of his "B" crops. In bama it appears at present th farmer should be able to get at 70% of the amount required fo crops. More may be available season progresses.

Moon, the milkman, is now in the cold drink business. He is operating a truck and acting as salesman for Tom Burdette who has taken over Hobson Mahan's drink business. Now the first time Johnnie gets mixed up and leaves me two orange crushes and a bottle of grapico instead of my three bottles of sweet milk, well, you just watch that cold drink truck turn hot.

BUDETTE'S PURCHASE COLD DRINK BUSINESS

Mr. T. R. Burdette and son, Jarrell, have bought the interest of Hobson Mahan in the cold drink business operated by him for the past several years.

Johnnie Moon will act as salesman and make deliveries. Orange Crush and Grapico are the popular drinks handled by this company.

Isabella Chosen For Apprentice Teaching

The Isabela Agricultural Department is one of the departments selected by the supervisors of agricultural education in which apprentice teaching will be done this year.

Each year the seniors taking agricultural education at Auburn are sent out to do four weeks apprentice teaching with various experienced vocational teachers. This valuable experience serves them well in later years after they secure a regular job.

The men selected to do apprentice teaching at Isabella are G. W. Osburn and T. B. Tompkins. They have been in Isabella since March 9th.

Visitors To Gragg Field

(EDTOR'S NOTE: In the past the Clanton Airport, or Gragg Field, has been sadly neglected as to information to the general public of the happenings there. With the aid of Marvin Marcus, who is now in charge of the field, The News will publish the visitors to the field as well as some of the sidelights and interesting events transpiring there each week.)

Landing at Gragg Field during the past week were: W. B. Ray and brother of Birmingham; Chas. Preston and Ed Goss, both of the Magic City, but in separate planes.

On Saturday Everett Hollingsworth and Miss Maye, of Meridian, Miss., were visitors en route to Columbus, Georgia.

Chas. [illegible]. Remus, a student at Tuskegee, a negro pilot, was a visitor Sunday.

Tuesday morning Maj. A. F. Herzburg of Waco, Texas, brother-in-law to Norman L. (Buck) Roberts, landed at the field for a short visit of an hour. Major Herzberg is the husband of the former Edna Roberts.

Chas. Wade made an interesting trip last week to Vicksburg, Miss., when he flew Dr. I. Q., the nationally known radio character there. Chas. has flown Dr. I. Q. several times before.

Incidentally, Marvin Marcus, superintendent at the airport, painted the first automobile that was painted in Clanton or Chilton County in 1912. It was the property of Dr. V. J. Gragg. Tuesday afternoon he was painting the first airplane ever to be painted in the county. Marvin says that it's a dead giveaway that he's getting old.

THE CALL HAS SOUNDED

The Chilton County Chapter of the American Red Cross has failed so far to reach its 1943 quota.

This is because so few stop to realize the great work that is being done by them and also the failure of many to stop and think of the need of this great organization.

A high-ranking Army officer who is now serving in a foreign country but who recently spent a short furlough at home was in conversation this week with one of the county chairmen. He made a generous contribution to the Red Cross against the advice of his friend who thought that he was giving enough when he offered his life for his country.

Said the Army officer, "I know what the Red Cross is doing. I know that a good portion of the money that is donated stays right here at home. I know that a part of it goes to sending a box of food each week to a Chilton County boy who is now imprisoned in a Japanese concentration camp. I can rest assured that if any trouble comes to my family here at home while I am away on foreign duty, the Red Cross will take charge and give them every assistance. And last but not least, I know what the American Red Cross has already done for Chilton County. Because of these things I am glad to make this donation."

If a man who is offering his life for his country can talk like that, surely we, who are safe at home, can afford to dig just a little deeper into our pockets and put Chilton county over the top in our 1943 quota. The amount is $4,900.00. Less than half has been contributed at this writing. We must not fail to reach our quota.

To those who have not been approached it is their patriotic duty to mail or bring their contribution to Grady Heflin at Peoples Saving Bank, Leo Thompson at Clanton Laundry and Cleaning Company or Dock Levine at Levine's Dry Goods.

We hope the people of Chilton County will realize the necessity of bringing in their contribution at once. WHAT WILL YOUR ANSWER BE?

RETAIL MERCHANTS TO HOLD WAR CONFERENCE

Farm Agent Says Good Seed Give Better Crop

County Agent P. H. Smith this week urged farmers in Chilton County to use good planting seed that have been tested by experiment and experience. He pointed out that it takes as much labor to prepare the land for and to cultivate a crop with a poor stand as it does one with a good stand.

Likewise, he continued, it takes about the same amount of machinery, equipment, fertilizer and other materials for the poor stands as it does the good stands, and for the low yielding varieties as it does the high varieties.

"Experiments and experience have shown that poor stands never give the highest yields and that low yielding varieties often yield one-half less per acre than those of higher yields," Mr. Smith said. "In order to get stands and have plants capable of using labor, machinery, fertilizer and other materials to the best advantage, farmers should:

'1. Plant seed of the variety the nearest experiment station and experience of farmers have shown to best. (Do not be the first to lay the old aside nor the last by whom the new is tried).

"2 Secure enough seed of the variety desired from a dependable breeder or seedman to plant a seed patch for next season's plantings.

"3. In purchasing seed, study the seed tag and buy on quality. Seed should germinate high, be free of noxious weed seed, be of high purity, and should be from a source adapted to the section where it is to be used.

"4. To be sure of germination, run germination tests on seeds at home. This can be done by counting out 100 seed, placing them in moist sand, between layers of mostened paper towels, or rolling in a warm place. The number of seed germinating out of the 100 is the per cent of live seed present.

"5. Seed treatment is essential with many seeds and should be used when recommended and according to instructions."

Farmers Urged To Plant Idle Land

Mr. Marvin Durbin, county supervisor for the Farm Security Administration, cooperating in the all-out Mobilization of farm effort, today called on all Chilton County farmers to help bring idle land, and farmers short of land, together for all-out production.

Mr. Durbin urged landlords with vacant farms, large farmers with more acreage than they can work with present labor, and farmers without enough land for full scale production, to register their needs at the county FSA office.

"We must bring land-puower and man_power together," Mr. Durbin warned. "Every acre not working for food production will be working for the Axis in 1943."

"Right here in Chilton County," Mr. Durbin said, "there are plenty of small farmers who can work additional acreage. At the same time there are some operators forced to reduce production because of labor and machinery shortages. We want to bring the two together."

Farmers and lardlords can secure assistance in working out leases and farm plans through the County War Board or the FSA office, Mr. Durbin said. He aded that war loans for the purchase of equipment, livestock and other operating goods are available through the FSA and other lending agencies, and every farmer who can increase his production will be aided by one or more of the agricultural agencies, concluded Mr. Durbin.

UNION MEETING

The Mt. Pleasant Farmers' Union Local will meet Saturday night, March 20th. All members are asked to attend this meeting.

RURAL WAR PRODUCTION TRAINING PROGRAM

Farmers Repair and Build Farm Machinery and Equipment At Clanton Vocational Agricultural Building

Under the Rural War Production Training Program, courses were offered to the farmers for the repair and construction of farm machinery. They took full advantage of it at the Clanton Vocational Agricultural Building. The farmers worked on their own equipment under the supervising of a blacksmith, Tom Bates. Through this program they learned to do a repair job, save vital materials that are needed in war production, plus putting several thousand dollars worth of equipment to working again.

They were well pleased with their classes. A number of them have said that was the first real thing the government had done for the farmers.

So many things were made and repaired, it will be impossible to list them all. But below are some of them:

Made: 6 haybalers, 32 doubletrees, 103 singletrees, 78 plow beams, 6 meat boxes, 4 wagon beds, 1 trailer bed, 3 pickup beds, 1 stalk cutter, 1 lime spreader, 5 tables, 15 butcher knives (out of crosscut saw).

Repaired: 16 fertilizer distributors, 43 one-horse steel beams, 2 middle busters, 8 two-horse steel beams, 22 one_horse cultivators, 2 wagons, 31 single_stock plows, 2 planters, 300 plows sharpened.

Permit Is Needed To Slaughter For Market

The Chilton County USDA War Board announced today that in order to combat "black market", which are wasteful and a health menace, and in order for every American to have a fair share of the food, that the secretary of agriculture had, on March 5, 1943, issued Food Distribution Order No. 26 covering the Purchase and Sale of Livestock and Food Distribution Order No. 27, Slaughter of Livestock. Both of these orders will become ffective at 12 o'clock midnight, March 31, 1943.

Under Food Distribution Order No. 26. Each person engaged in the handling of livestock as a dealer or agent, is required to have a permit. The term "dealer" does not include bonifide producers who are engaged in dairy, wool or meat production or in breeding, feeding or finishing livestock and who keep such livestock 30 days or more. Dealers and agents are required to establish inventory as of the effective date of Food Distribution Order No. 26, and keep complete records covering all purchases and sales of livestock. These records to be subject to audit and inspection of the director of food distribution. Every person subject to this order shall execute and file such reports upon such forms as the director may from time to time request or direct. Farmers are not required to obtain a permit to buy and sell livestock but are expected to keep records covering purchases and sales of livestock.

Food Distribution Order No. 27, Slaughter of Livestock, provides that local slaughterers must have a permit covering any cattle, calves, hogs and pigs, sheep and lambs slaughtered after the effective date of this order. To qualify for a permit, the local slaughterer or butcherer shall certify that he has adequate sanitary and other facilities for slaughtering. Farm slaughterers shall follow practices for the slaughter and care of meat which are reasonabe in conformity with practices common in the locality. Each wholsale cut of meat must be identified. The identification should be the permit number assigned to the local slaughterer, butcherer or farm slaughterer, or the established number assigned under federal, state county or city inspection requirements.

Each local slaughterer, butcherer or farm slaughterer shall collect rationing points and make required reports for all meats sold or transferred by him after meat rationing goes into effect. Farmers who slaughter exclusively for home consumption on their farms are not covered by Food Distribution Order No. 27. Permits for the purchase and sale of livestock as an agent or dealer and permits for the slaughter of cattle, calves, hogs, pigs, sheep and lambs will be issued by the war board. Applications for permits can be obtained at the AAA office and further information on these subjects can be obtained from the War Board and AAA office.

For the Chilton County USDA War Board:

Calling All Men! Calling All Men!

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party.

If you are too old to answer Uncle Sam's call for help in the armed forces, don't let that discourage you, and don't think for a minute that you can't help right here at home. You don't need any money, ability to shoot a gun, any fishing tackle or neither will you be put on K. P. duty. All you need do is answer the call for help in the Red Cross Room, next door to Broadhead's Market. Some few ladies have been working there very hard and faithful, but, Mrs. Browder needs M-O-R-E help and she says she believes the men in Chilton County who do have some spare time (and lots of them do) will come and help these ladies.

This is an emergency call that must not and will not be neglected, but, are we going to let only a few people do all the work. Yes, we know that everyone feels that he or she has just about all they can do, but let's remember this when somebody needs "First Aid" they need it "promptly" and they also need, in most cases, bandages, gauze and other items, to get this first aid treatment safely and sanitarily done. We mean "Our Armed Forces," and they cannot have these things if we fall down on our job here in our Red Cross Room.

We know what the Red Cross is doing wherever it functions, at home or abroad, so come on ladies, men and girls, and lets do our part towards helping Mrs. Browder and these other faithful few in doing our job.

Yes, Mrs. Browder says, if the High School girls, sixteen years old or older, wil lcome on Mondays and Fridays with their hair covered and wearing a cotton dress, she will be very grateful to them and they can help with this emergency call to no great end.

Dr. P. A. Hayes Opens Office Here

P. A. Hayes, veterinarian, recent graduate of Auburn, has opened offices in Clanton and is ready to aid the farmers of the county in taking care of their livestock.

~~For the time being Dr. Hayes says~~ that calls will be received at Calloway Drug Co. during the day and at his home in Thorsby at night.

The News welcomes Dr. Hayes to Clanton and wishes him well in his profession here.

HOMEMAKERS CLASS TO MEET NEXT MONDAY

The Homemakers Sunday School Class of the Clanton Baptist Church will meet next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Leo Thompson. All members are asked to be present.

INFANT DIES

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Reed Mullins died Monday night at a Montgomery hospital. Burial Tuesday afternoon at Mullins Cemetery. Services were conducted by Rev. O. C. Lloyd. J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge. Surviving are the father and mother and one sister.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE public is cheated because Paramount doesn't always shoot Susan Hayward in technicolor; her red hair and reddish-brown eyes that almost match it are something to look at! Visiting in New York when "Reap the Wild Wind" was being released nationally, Susan was interested in seeing old friends from Brooklyn, her home town, buying clothes, seeing the new plays, rather than being formally introduced as a successful young star. She's remarkably pretty — without benefit of makeup, except lipstick. Clara Bow was the first Brooklyn redhead to make motion-picture history; Susan Hayward has the looks, talent and personality that should make her the second.

Michael Harvey, husky six-footer making his screen debut in "So Proudly We Hail" with Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake, is the third of three "youngsters" who grew up together in Atlanta to hit motion pictures. The others are Evelyn Keyes and Dixie Dunbar. The girls beat Harvey to the screen; he stacked up a record in Broadway plays before Hollywood got him.

All of a sudden Turkey has become very important to motion-picture makers; three studios have announced that they'd do pictures with Turkish backgrounds. Columbia's is "Constantinople," Paramount's "Dateline—Istanbul," Republic's either "Istanbul" or "Ankara."

Marilyn Maxwell, Metro starlet, returned from a five-week Victory Caravan trip for work in "Salute to the Marines" with this advice about how to rate A-1 when visiting the 1-As. Be gay, wide awake, peppy and active; be sure your hair is combed, your make-up fresh, your stocking seams straight; be yourself—there's only one Hedy Lamarr! Don't wear slacks; be interested in the man, not his uniform; know how to talk; don't dish out a line—he probably knows yours better than you do.

Thirty-four-year-old Edward Dmytryk, director of "Hitler's Children," has had 20 years' experience in pictures. He started as an errand boy in Paramount's laboratory, working after school and vacations, was a projectionist when he entered college, and two years later went to Hollywood as a cutter. Three years ago he turned director.

Dick Keith, the "Bright Horizon" actor was so well liked by the fans of another radio serial that letters piled in demanding that he marry the heroine. That was impossible, since he played a character so wealthy that, if the heroine married him, she'd have no troubles—and there'd be no more serial. The problem was solved by killing him off at the wedding ceremony.

Peggy Allenby, actress on Phillips H. Lord's "Counterspy," regrets the realism which Jay Hanna, the director, brings to his work. He and Moss went into a huddle, and when the program went on the air Moss really slapped Peggy, and hard!

SPEECH DEFECTS

A pupil at public school was a member of a special group preparing for scholarships. This class, of which I was a member, remained in the classroom until 5 p. m. and attended Saturday morning 9 to 12. When the results were announced this girl stood first despite the fact that she stammered so badly that she was unable to read in front of the class. As she was very brilliant I was not surprised at her beating the rest of us, but I figured she would lose so many marks in her reading that some of us might overtake her. The explanation was that when she took her reading examination she read before the teacher only and read clearly and distinctly without stammering in the slightest.

Dr. Barton

Despite the fact that school teachers knew this fact that stammerers did not stammer amid home or familiar surroundings it is only within recent years that the general public and stammerers themselves are learning that while some speech defects are due to some disturbance of the structures that control speech, most cases of stammering are due to nervousness and self consciousness.

I am writing about stammering at this time as I have at hand a handbook of the Chicago Speech Correction society. The society was organized by a group of speech correctionists in the Chicago area, its purposes and qualifications being in accordance with the standards and ethical codes of the American Speech Correction association. The purposes of the society are to foster ethical principles and practices in the field of speech correction. To this end the qualifications demanded for membership are very high.

"The speech correctionist or therapist is one whose technical training has been such as to enable him to conduct the examination, make the diagnosis (find the cause of the defect) and direct re-education of (1) individuals whose voice or speech problems call unfavorable and embarrassing attention to themselves and constitute an educational, social, or business handicap; and (2) individuals who suffer from voice or speech conditions that are abnormal to such a degree that they are able to converse with others to a very limited extent."

My thought is that as the stammerer or a sufferer with other speech defects can now be helped, he should look well to the qualifications of the speech correctionist he consults.

Why Overweights Dislike Exercise

It is estimated that about nine of every ten cases of overweight are due directly to overeating, another 5 per cent to inactivity of certain glands, and the other 5 per cent to overeating combined with lack of gland activity. This means that 95 of every 100 overweights should follow a reducing diet containing an insufficient number of calories, the extra calories really needed to do the body's work being made up from the excess fat in and on the body.

What about exercise?

If overweights realized the benefits derived from exercise, they would be more willing to take it regularly. All that most of them find is that exercise increases their appetite and so little or no weight is lost.

Why do overweights so greatly dislike exercise? Exercise means effort and there is less than the normal desire for effort in overweights. Every movement they make—walking, jogging, bending—means the lifting or carrying of much more weight than for one of normal weight. So, rather than use this severe effort, they are willing to do without some of their daily intake of food. They simply choose the lesser of two evils.

If, however, they are willing to take the exercise instead of doing without the food, they will not only use up the excess fat and so bring their figure back or nearly back to normal, but will get rid of their dislike for exercise and be more willing to take it regularly. As they grow lighter and more "limber," they may actually develop a desire for exercise.

Remember, exercise is useful in reducing weight before middle age. After middle age, cutting down on food is the safest method.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Do nerves cause shortness of breath; if not, what is the cause?

A.—"Nerves" can cause shortness of breath. Other causes are: Blocked nose, too much acid food; heart muscle getting weak.

Q.—What type drug is hyoscyamus and what are its uses?

A.—Hyoscyamus belongs to the belladonna group. It is used as a "quieting" drug and to relax tight nerves and muscles. Used in bronchitis also.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

OUR LORD'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—John 17:1-8, 18-26.
GOLDEN TEXT — "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17:11.

There are some times and places so sacred that one is instinctively hushed into reverent devotion. When Christ prayed in holy intercession (as recorded in John 17) on the night before His suffering His disciples must have been lifted into the very presence of the Eternal One. It was a holy experience.

He prayed for Himself, but even more did He pray for His believing followers. To know that someone is praying for us is indeed an anchor in a time of storm, a strong help in the hour of conflict or of service for Christ.

But to know that the Master prayed for you and me—that is enough to send us, like the disciples of old, out to face an unbelieving world in His conquering name. He prayed for Himself—and He prayed for me!

I. He Prayed for Himself (vv. 1-8).

He looked up and said: "Father," and then He was ready to pray. So close was He to God that there was just this simple recognition of their communion. In Christ are we not as close as He?

What did Jesus ask for Himself? At first thought it seems a little unusual that He asked

1. For Recognition of His Divine Glory (vv. 1-5).

Why would He who had just given the disciples an example of and an admonition to humility desire to have His glory manifested? Be sure it was not a matter of selfish pride. He had finished His work (for He counted redemption as complete throughout His prayer), and now the glory which He laid down when He came to earth (Phil. 2:6-8) was to be resumed.

He wants man to see Him now not only as the compassionate Son of man, but the glorious Son of God, able to save. It is right that the glory of Christ should be magnified and recognized by the whole creation. He is worthy!

2. For the Manifestation of His Grace (vv. 6-8).

The Father had given Christ the heart devotion of those who believed in Him. Note that their faith rested on the name of God (v. 6), and upon His Word which had come to them and to us through Christ.

He recognized their position and standing in Him and established it before God and man. He then prayed for them (read vv. 9-17) that they might be kept in an evil world as a testimony to the grace and power of God in the human heart.

This leads to His intercession for all believers.

II. He Prayed for All Believers (vv. 18-26).

Christians are not simply the avowed adherents to a particular form of belief, they are "sent" ones. As the Father sent Him into the world, "even so send I them into the world," said Christ.

Christ has gone to be with the Father, but He has left those who believe in Him as His witnesses, His representatives. For this they need holiness. He prayed:

1. For Their Consecration (vv. 18, 19).

For their sakes He consecrated Himself. Surely if He needed it, we do far more. It is not only His will for us, but His prayer. How wonderfully that prayer was answered we see as we look back over the intervening 19 centuries, from His immediate disciples on through the martyrs, the missionary pioneers of all ages, the faithful preachers and teachers of the gospel, yes and "livers" of the gospel too. He knew, He prayed, God answered. Are you in that blessed host of consecrated believers?

2. For Their Unity and Glory (vv. 20-26).

There is a refreshing simplicity about the Christian faith which is utterly different from all the complications which man has prepared and superimposed upon it. Essentially it is a matter of God having sent His Son into the world to be the Redeemer of men. He and the Father are one, He and His followers are one, and so we are all one. We who today believe are included (read vv. 20-23).

This is an inward unity of the Spirit, not an outward union of organizations. The answer to our difficulty is not the dissolution of denominations (although there do seem to be far too many subdivisions, too), but the uniting of all groups in a oneness of love and devotion to Christ, and a united emphasis on the gospel.

There is something more here. This unity puts Christ's followers into the place where His glory may be revealed in and upon them. It is His prayer that we should behold in our Saviour the glory which God had given Him because He loved Him before the foundation of the world.

Today's Cake Fixings Are Simple, Food Saving
(See Recipes Below)

Bake Your Own!

Those of you who have chosen homemaking as a career can set aside a half day for baking your own goodies right in your own oven. There are few things nicer than coming into a kitchen full of busy bustling, testing the cake, plumping fat loaves of bread on racks to cool, or packing cookies in fresh wax paper for pantry shelves—for those fine boys in the service!

When sugar rationing first came into the picture, most of us feared that it would not allow enough for home baking needs, but we have found ways to make sugar stretch. Or, perhaps we should say, corn syrups and honey to make baking possible.

With eggs up in price and fats becoming scarce, we have changed our recipes to fill these needs, too! Today's recipes may not call for the quantity of materials that yesterday's did, but they can make just as tempting a product.

Hot Water Sponge Cake.
(Makes 2 8-inch layers)

1 cup sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon lemon juice
6 tablespoons hot water

Home Lyn! Fido

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat eggs until thick and fluffy, about 10 minutes. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly until thick enough to hold a soft peak. Beat in lemon juice, add hot water, and beat until thick after each addition. Fold in flour in small amounts. Bake in ungreased tube pan or lightly greased layer-cake pans in a moderate (350-degree) oven. A tube cake takes 45 minutes to bake, layer cakes 25 to 30 minutes.

Ever tried a fragrant gingerbread baked in a ring? The slices can be fairly thin and the cake will really go far! Or, you can fill the center with apple sauce and serve as a dessert!

Gingerbread Ring.

1 cup molasses
1 cup sour milk
2¼ cups sifted flour
1¾ teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons ginger
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup melted shortening

Mix milk and molasses. Sift dry ingredients. Add to milk and molasses, then mix in egg and shortening and beat until smooth and creamy. Pour into a greased pan and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes.

It might be said of this cookie that it's spice and all things nice—but you'll notice I didn't say sugar, because it uses corn syrup:

Raisin Cookies.
(Makes 50 to 60 cookies)

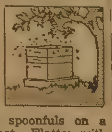
½ cup shortening
1 cup white corn syrup
1 egg
½ teaspoon cinnamon extract
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup apple sauce
½ cup chopped nutmeats
½ cup chopped raisins

Cream shortening with corn syrup and egg. Add flavorings. Sift dry ingredients together and add to creamed mixture. Alternate dry ingredients with apple sauce. Fold in chopped raisins and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven 15 to 18 minutes.

Who ever heard of carrots in cookies? Well, the surprise is a nice one, and the cookies are popping full of vitamins when you make:

Honey-Carrot Cookies.
(Makes 5 dozen)

2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2 cups quick-cooking oatmeal
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped nutmeats
⅓ cup shortening
1 cup strained honey
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup grated raw carrot



Sift dry ingredients together. Sift again. Add oatmeal, raisins and nutmeats. Mix well. Cream shortening, add honey, creaming thoroughly. Add eggs, then carrots, beating well. Stir in dry ingredients and blend thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Flatten with a floured fork. Bake for 15 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Store only when cold.

Whole grain, especially oatmeal, is rich in that important morale vitamin, B1, or thiamin, as it is sometimes called.

Oatmeal Refrigerator Rolls.

½ cup shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
1¼ teaspoons salt
½ cup boiling water
1 cup quick-cooking oatmeal
1 cake yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
1 egg, beaten
2¾ cups all-purpose flour

Add boiling water to sugar, salt, shortening and oatmeal. Stir well. Cool to lukewarm. Soften yeast in lukewarm water, then add with beaten egg to oatmeal mixture. Stir in half of flour, add rest of flour. Place in a greased bowl. Cover with waxed paper and store in refrigerator. When needed, remove from refrigerator and form into cloverleafs in greased muffin tins. Cover and let rise in a warm place until almost double. Bake 12 to 15 minutes in a 425-degree oven.

Lynn Says:

Tie a String Around Your Finger: The technique's different when you do your own vegetables—and you must keep these pointers on tap if you would get the most out of them:

Peel potatoes thinly—their mineral treasures are hidden right under that skin.

Use green vegetables as soon as possible after buying. They lose quantities of their vitamin C just sitting and being exposed to air.

Add dressing immediately to vegetables and fruits after cutting them. The coating prevents some vitamin loss.

Put away the soda box when cooking green vegetables. It's alkaline and destroys vitamins.

Shell peas or lima beans only just before using. Wash leafy greens just before cooking. The percentage of vitamin loss will be lessened.

Start cooking frozen foods before thawing. It is believed that less vitamin C is destroyed by that method.

Doomed Dogs Expensive To Reprieve in England

In England, the owner of a dog that has been condemned to death pays a daily fine of one pound or about $4 as long as he refuses to have the animal destroyed, says Collier's. In one recent case, a family has so far paid $2,300 to keep their dog Rowley alive.

In another case, a man has paid $500 to keep Bobbie, most of this money having been raised by a Bobbie Club, consisting of neighborhood children who organized themselves specifically for this purpose.

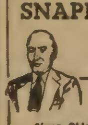
Admirals may be admirable, but that isn't where the word comes from. It comes from an old Arabic word "amir-al" meaning "commander of." That's what the Admiral is, the top-ranking officer in the Navy. Top-ranking cigarette with our Navy men is Camel—the favorite, too, with men in the Army, Marines and Coast Guard, according to actual sales records from their service stores. Camels are their favorite gift, too. Local dealers are featuring Camel cartons to send anywhere to any member of our armed forces. Today is a good time to send "him" a carton of Camels.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Akron, Ohio had its beginning as the WORLD'S RUBBER MANUFACTURING CAPITAL in 1870 when its first rubber plant was started by Dr. B. F. Goodrich.
The switching of Dakar, French West Africa, to the side of the United Nations meant the establishment for the Allies of an important port for the shipment of crude rubber, among other important war essentials.
Atabrine, the chemist's answer to the war time shortage of quinine, is serving to step up the collection of rubber in the malaria-infested jungles of Brazil. Here is a case of a synthetic product being used to stimulate the gathering of a natural product that is rapidly being replaced by synthetics in the United States.
Ordinary tires are now cured in molds at factories in 40 to 50 minutes. Before organic accelerators were developed by B. F. Goodrich it took about five hours to vulcanize a tire.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

The Junior Class presents a four-act comedy entitled "Romance In A Boarding House" this Friday night as their dramatical contribution for this year. They are remembered for their successful presentation of "Little Woman" last year.

Mr. Smith, playel by Hansel Grooms, is a very likable character despite the fact that he has an aversion for manual labor. He would be supremely happy were it not for the fact that his wife compels him to wear shoes all the time.

Mrs. Smith, alias. Frances Kincaid, is an industrious small town woman who runs a boarding house. She is rather careless with her English because her education was interrupted when she was quite young.

Mary Anne Smith, (Mary Ann Oden), their daughter, is very attractive and will readily capture the hearts of the audience. She is the leading character in the play.

Bill, played by Ernest McCary, readily admits that he is the only person in the world for Mary Anne. He is very much in love with her, but all her affections for him are stricty taboo.

Miss McGillicuddy, portrayed by Evelyn Oden, is an old maid who is always on the watch for a prospect in the way of husbands. She is always interested in everybody else's affairs and freely expresses her opinions on all matters.

Hettie is the hired girl in the boarding house and has only one redeeming feature—her ability to cook. Esther Lee Mizzell plays this part.

Mrs. Benson is very hard of hearing and misunderstands almost everything. The audience will get plenty of laughs from her actions. Alee Culp effectively transforms herself into this role.

Mr. and Mrs. Throttlebutton (Jesse Culp and Pauline Williams) are New York aristocrats who always display perfect manners. Because Mr. Throttlebutton bows so much, Mr. Smith accuses him of "having a hinge in his back."

Mortimer their son (Ods Ousley) is very well groomed and shows his intelligence all the way through.

The Duke of Essex, alias Earl Wright, is a French nobleman, and is the object of the luring power of the two old maids, Miss McGillicuddy and Hettie.

"Romance In A Boarding House" is a barrel of laughs and we feel sure you will enjoy it. So come on out to the Isabella School Auditorium Friday night, March 19, at 8:00 and let's have some laughs.

The Beta Club met last Friday and discussed several business matters. They decided to join the Book-of-the-Month Club in order to improve the library. It was also decided that the club would sponsor a "Miss Isabella" contest in the near future. Watch fol further announcements.

Three new members were invited into the club. They were Irma Durbin, Annie Laura Calfee and Ruth Carter.

The agricultural department now has two practice teachers from Auburn who are teaching the first and third year classes. They are Mr. Tompkins and Mr. Osburn. After these boys finish at Auburn this summer they will be prepared to accept positions as agriculture teachers in some high school. They are very likable fellows and you really should make their acquaintance if you have the chance.

NEWS OF OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

Private First Class Frank C. Cox of Robertsdale has been promoted to corporal at the Ordnance Unit Training Center, Flora, Miss., where he is assigned to the 520th Field Service Unit, Uncle Sam's all-Alabama Ordnance Company.

Phares Henderson Raybon, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Raybon, of Thorsby, Ala., has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the United States Army upon successful completion of the Officer Candidate Course at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Joseph T. Green, son of Mrs. Joseph S. Green, Route 3, Clanton, has arrived at the Jefferson Barracks, in Missouri. where he will receive training either for technical school or specialized occupations in the Army.

Pvt. Louie L. Wright of Camp Polk, La., was home on a three-day leave recently, visiting his wife, Mrs. Alcie Lee Wright, of Thorsby.

Pvt. Shelton W. Bean, son of Mrs. W. T. Bean, was graduated March 11 as an airplane mechanic from Keesler Field's B-24 (Liberator Bomber) School. Private Bean completed a 17-week course which is divided into 14 phases, the last phase being an eight-day training period under simulated battle conditions in the open. He must know how to apply what he has learned in school, how to camouflage his plane and even how to provide his own shelter against attack.

Pvt. James Arnold of Gunters Field is home on leave before entering the Officers' Training School at Fort Benning, Ga.

W. D. Hocutt received a message from the War Department stating that his brother had been seriously injured in active battle somewhere in the Pacific on March 3rd. The brother, Capt. Ealon Hocutt, of Auburn, has many friends here who would like to know something about what Captain Hocutt has been doing. In a report given by his mother, Mrs. A. M. Hocutt, to the Bulletin in Auburn, she says, "Even though he participated in the Battle of Midway. in which he was credited with hits on a battleship and a cruiser, and was also in the Battle of Bismarck Sea, I believe his training will bring him through if anything will."

Captain Hocutt graduated from Love, Randolph and Kelly Fields, all in Texas. He won his wings in June, 1941, after which he was sent to Hawaii as an instructor and he was there at the time of Pearl Harbor. He is also credited with snaring the first three Zeroes at Rabaul early in January. He is commander of a Flying Fortress in New Guinea and he praises his crew, which was transferred with him from the Midway area, as being a highly skilled crew. Captain Hocutt has a brother, Capt. A. M. Hocutt, Jr., who is stationed in Colorado.

A PRAYER FOR A SOLDIER

I ask you not for worldly gain,
  Nor for an earthly joy;
But Lord, I ask you once again
  To bless my soldier boy.
He's in service for this land,
  To bring us victory.
But won't you guide him by Thy hand
  And give him peace with Thee.
Yes, he's a Christian—that is true;
  But earthly cares are strong;
So won't You give him strength anew,
  To triumph over wrong?
May through his life shine out Thy love
  Among that camp of men,
To point them to the Christ above,
  A Savior and a Friend.
Then may we all look up to Thee,
  And trust Thee till the end:
To bring this nation liberty,
  And keep us free—Amen.

REPAIR FARM BUILDINGS for greater production

How to do it with CONCRETE and save scarce materials

To increase food production to meet war requirements it is essential that buildings used to house livestock and store crops be in good repair.

Concrete foundations under barns, hog houses or poultry houses will restore these buildings to usefulness and provide protection against rot, termites and waste and damage caused by rats.

Free booklet, "Restoring Old Farm Buildings With Concrete" tells how to make essential repairs with the use of little or no steel or other scarce materials.

Soldiers.. ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

YOU hear more and more today about the ground crews—the boys back-stage who keep them ticking . . . and upon whose skill and energy successful prosecution of war and production so much depends.

Just such groups compose the maintenance forces of Greyhound Lines. They, too, are the unsung-behind-the-scene stalwarts to whom we owe so much of our ability to "keep 'em rolling."

Yep—they are all fine performers . . . intelligent, hard-working, loyal . . . specialists as a result of years of training. These boys are in there swinging with both hands to squeeze every ounce of performance out of existing equipment—irreplaceable equipment. For war's extra burden on transportation takes heavy toll and brings hard hours to keep Greyhound fleets up to Greyhound's standards of safety and comfort.

You can just lay your "hard-earned" on these fellows to do a bang-up job. They're real soldiers . . . good, solid Americans who have shown a willingness to work like fury, when few will ever know the importance of their labors.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Counter Drive in Kharkov Area Wins Back Part of Russ Winter Gains; Wallace Warns of Future War Menace; Allies Tighten Ring on Rommel Armies

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

NORTH AFRICA:

Rommel Rages

Like a wild animal in a cage, Marshal Rommel had struck out at the forces hemming in his 250,000 army in Tunisia. His principal offensive had been a heavy thrust at Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth army before the strategic Mareth line in Southern Tunisia.

But the wary Englishman had anticipated the German move and his deadly artillery fire had repelled repeated Nazi attacks with "very heavy losses."

Rommel, a master of tank warfare, had attempted to break through the British lines with his heavy mechanized equipment, but when he was forced to withdraw wrecked German tanks were strewn over the battlefield.

In the north the British First army had regained the initiative and was pressing the enemy, while on the central front the American forces were moving steadily to hem the Axis in.

DRAFT:

Plan to Save Farmers

Plans of the administration to take the pressure of the draft off the nation's shortaged pool of farm labor apparently contemplate the induction of unmarried men over 38 or those in that age group without dependents. This, at least, was the interpretation of Washington observers concerning orders by the War Manpower commission to the selective service to reclassify such men 1A beginning May 1.

The Manpower commission's action followed the announcement of a four-point plan for the deferment of essential farm labor. It came at a moment, too, when the congressional farm bloc had launched a drive to clarify the farm labor confusion.

Local draft boards were under orders hereafter to place no more men in Class 4-H and to reclassify out of 4-H into 1-A all such men now deferred because over the military age limit. At the same time draft boards were ordered to begin reclassification immediately of all men over 38 who may become eligible for class 2-C or 3-C deferment because connected with essential farm work.

U. S.-RUSSIA:

Need More 'Trust'

Although the storm over Ambassador-Admiral William H. Standley's complaint concerning Russia's failure to inform its people fully about the great extent of American aid had subsided and future lend-lease shipments on an ever-bigger scale were assured, the need for greater mutual confidence between the two Allies continued.

This need was stressed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace in a speech which coincidentally enough was delivered at the time Standley's statement was made public. Mr. Wallace had stressed the fact that a third World war might result unless the western democracies and Russia reach a satisfactory understanding.

"War will be probable in case we doublecross Russia," Wallace said.

VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE
. . . beware World War III.

"Such a war would be inevitable if Russia should again embrace the Trotskyist idea of fomenting world revolution, or if British interests should again be sympathetic to anti-Russian activity in Germany and other countries."

RUSSIA:

Nazis Uncoil

Three reasons were cited by military observers for the initial success of the sudden German counter-offensive west of Rostov and south of Kharkov which in its early stages had swept forward 100 miles and resulted in the capture of eight key cities in the Donetz basin which had been taken earlier by the Soviets in their great winter drive.

One reason was the use by the Nazis of 25 fresh divisions. Twelve of these had been rushed from western Europe and the others replenished after previous action. A second reason was the draining of troops from this southern sector by the Russians to supply momentum to their drive on Orel and Vyazma to the north. The third was the superiority of Axis supply lines and communications in the Donetz area.

The serious extent of these early German successes was evident in the fact that Russian official communiques had admitted the loss of the cities the Germans had claimed. Russ reports disclosed that the German move had actually started late in February.

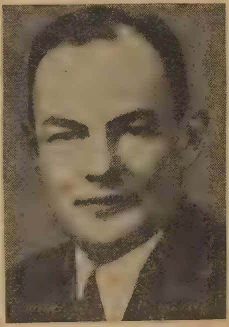
The setback in the south had not prevented the Russians from continuing their drive on Vyazma. Red communiques had reported the capture of Tiomkino.

FOOD SUPPLY:

Nutrition Level Dips

That the food situation in the United States is rapidly bringing the American people down to the Canadian and British level of nutrition was the opinion voiced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Mr. Wickard likewise disclosed that the amount of food available for civilians "is going to be something less than it is at the present time," in testimony before the senate appropriations committee.



CLAUDE WICKARD
. . . more vegetables, less meat.

Because of the increasing demand for proteins and fats — including meat, dairy products and some oil crops—from our military forces and our Allies, Mr. Wickard said the American people will probably have to live more on vegetable fats and proteins than they formerly did. "We have about reached the place now where we cannot expand our meat production any more," he said, "because we are not going to have enough of the basic element—feed—to support much more increase."

LABOR MANHUNT:

French Fight Nazis

Adolf Hitler's desperate need for manpower had caused the Nazi to put more than usual pressure on the collaborative Laval regime for more French workers.

The German demand had been for 400,000 men. When Nazi soldiers abetted by the Vichy government set out to meet this goal, the trouble started.

Street fighting, guerrilla tactics and sabotage were the French Patriots' answer to this effort to bolster Germany's waning manpower resources. Reports received by the Fighting French in London indicated that in a single 72-hour uprising, more than 350 German soldiers had been killed.

Swift and cruel were the reprisals taken for this insubordination. But the repressive measures only served to fan the flames of French hatred against the German conquerors.

Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Chile.

The above chart shows at a glance which nations of the world have declared war against the others. Of all the United Nations only three—Britain, Czechoslovakia and China—have declared war on the entire Axis tribe. The United States excepts Finland which yet may be induced to quit the Axis.

PACIFIC FRONT:

Jap Power Wanes

In the Far Eastern war theater, reports from China disclosed that the main Japanese offensive in Western Yunnan province along the old Burma road had been halted on the west bank of the Salween river. Waning enemy air power in the Burma-China area was indicated by Allied reports that repeated attacks by American and British fliers on Jap objectives had failed to lure any Nipponese planes into battle.

On the Solomon Islands battlefront, American planes roved to the northward raiding Kahili, Buin and Ballale in the Shortland Islands area and Viru Harbor in New Georgia. The Japs retaliated with a raid on Tulagi close to Guadalcanal.

Summarizing the situation in the Pacific, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said that American forces are stronger than ever before in the Solomon Islands sector while throughout the South Pacific, the Japs are having increasing difficulty in supplying their island bases.

Without adequate shipping, the secretary explained, the Japs cannot maintain their South Pacific bases and face further retirement.

ANTI-VICHY:

Action in No. Africa

Increasing evidence that Gen. Henri Giraud's North Africa regime will move steadily further away from Vichy influences and ever closer to the democratic methods of the United Nations was seen in the high commissioner's summary action in repudiating all Petain decrees relating to African colonial affairs and liquidating the entire government bureau concerned with restrictions on Jews.

"A decree signed in Vichy has no effect in North Africa," was Giraud's terse explanation. "The German occupation interrupted the free exercise of national sovereignty."

General Giraud's action followed that of Governor General Nogues of French Morocco reinstating government workers dismissed under Vichy's orders and repealing the ban on listening to certain foreign broadcasts. In repealing the Vichy anti-Semitic decrees, High Commissioner Giraud ordered General Bounty, who dealt with Jewish problems, to be removed from office.

CHINA:

Destiny's Crossroads

A 10-year reconstruction program for China, including the building of 20,000 transport planes, was proposed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in his book, "China's Destiny."

While his wife, Madame Chiang, was busy winning friends for China on her visit to the United States, the Generalissimo disclosed plans calling for 2,460,000 graduates from various grades of technical schools to aid in developing postwar China.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CHICAGO: With an abundance of billing and cooing, 5,605 fast-flying doves were drafted in Chicago for the army, reducing the city's peacetime pigeon population by one-sixth. The war first drafted a big group of racing pigeons from the city a year ago. These traditional symbols of peace were reported in action from Bataan to Britain, according to a report received here.

WASHINGTON: How Lieut. Chester W. Nimitz Jr., son of the Pacific admiral, won the silver star medal was disclosed in a navy report. The citation made public here says young Nimitz served with "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity" as torpedo and gunnery officer and later as executive officer on two war patrols. During a third patrol near Java, he also won distinction.

NEW YORK.—The biggest tenth of the 1943 Red Cross War Fund is being raised by Chester M. Colby who knows as well as Morgenthau how to make the money roll in.

It's in the Cards That Colby'll Top Red Cross Quota

A nation-wide drive for $125,000,000 is now on in full swing and the Colby assignment is to find just a nip under $13,000,000 in New York city for Americans on all the fighting fronts.

Thirteen makes a lot of millions, and more when they buy blood plasma, not to count lesser benefits, but Mr. Colby goes after them without blinking. Over 20-odd years in an ascending spiral that finally reached the chairmanship of the board of General Foods corporation, he has learned to deal easily with even millions.

They may fill his day, but come evening they have small chance against Lincolniana or, for lighter hours, a crossword puzzle.

Just the same he will probably work day and night for the Red Cross since the money is all for the army and navy, and tradition joins the Colby family with both services.

Mr. Colby, 65 now and handsomely gray, was a major in that littler World war although, oddly, he was born at the Naval Academy and was practically raised on sea water. His father was Rear Admiral Chester M. Colby and his son, third to bear the name, is in the Naval Air service.

Fresh out of the army, Mr. Colby was mulling over three proffered jobs when a fortune teller said that she saw him at the head of a big food concern. He joined the old Postum Cereal company shortly, and deftly pyramided that into General Foods.

SOME day the world may worry over geologic-politics as it worries now over the geo-politics of Maj. Gen. Prof. Doktor Karl Haushoffer whose rarebit of Heartlands, Crooslands, with Bridges and Offshore Islands gave Hitler dreams, and all the rest of us nightmares.

Geologic Politics To Control World Peace—Prof. Leith

If this happens, another professor, bony C. K. Leith, may get chief praise, or blame. He comes up now to take the Penrose Medal for "eminent research in pure geology," but he has been broadcasting the political virtue of his subject for a quarter of a century.

As far back as 1919 at Paris he was advisor to the American Commission to Negotiate Peace, and every word he let fall must have packed political dynamite. Next he said, and probably wishes he hadn't, that lack of ore for steel permanently removed Japan as a world war menace. Later he warned, more wisely, that world peace was sadly endangered by prohibitions against the free search for minerals. These days, as advisor to the administration in Washington, he insists that by controlling the world's minerals the democracies can control the peace.

The professor is 67 years old. His face in repose is severe, but his full lips meet lightly as lips do that smile easily. Born in Wisconsin, he was graduated from the state university and has taught there for 40 years. His wife and 2 sons complete his family.

IF THE United States should, after peace, nip Britain in a race for sea power, Sir Archibald Hurd's quarter-century and more of worry will be vindicated.

Warns Britannia Is About to Pass Her Trident to Us

His warning in London that "Britannia is about to pass her thousand-year-old trident across the Atlantic" is only the last of a long series of warnings. As he sees it surely, the United States will be stronger all around, in men-of-war, in ships, in airplanes.

Sir Archibald is 73 years old now. He added the knighthood 15 years ago, but even before that other naval experts were quiet when he wished to speak. The son of a modest solicitor, he wrote himself into such fame that admirals of the sea did not snub him. His books fill a big shelf, and cover an unrationed range of subjects as wide as the Atlantic itself.

His most vigorous pieces, however, have contemplated the future of British sea power and have not been happy about it.

He always had qualms, but his first major alarm was raised just after the 1914-17 or sample World war. He was sure then that the U. S. Shipping board was out to cripple the British merchant marine. While the fighting still raged he had called upon the United States for men and material to replace British bottoms sunk by German submarines, and presumably some replacement had been made.

THIS cover was a twofold conservation measure in the most literal sense. Its purpose was not to cover shabby upholstery but to protect handsome damask from everyday wear and tear.

If you have an especially difficult chair to cover, you will save time by fitting a muslin pattern first. Then you can snip until it fits perfectly around arms and other supports and, if you make a mistake in the pattern just stitch a patch over it and start over again. Before removing the pattern from the chair, plan the openings so that they will lap neatly and be sure they are long enough. In the finished cover either bindings or facings may be used for irregular edges.

HE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION, CHILTON COUNTY, ALAB

DELOS P. CULP, Superintendent

For Year Beginning October 1, 1941 and Ending September 30, 1942

BOARD OF EDUCATION

J. P. Payne
W. A. Gulledge
B. F. Boockholdt

Dr. W. L. Parrish
T. L. Lecroy
J. C. Page, Custodian of Funds

In compliance with Section 92 of Title 52, Code of Alabama, I am herewith publishing a financial report of the Chilton County Board of Education for the year beginning October 1, 1941 and ending September 30, 1942.

The report shows that the year was ended with a balance of $1388.71. This balance resulted from money secured by warrant sales held in 1940. The General Fund of the Board was overdrawn $1400.18 at the close of the year. This amount is to be paid from 1942-43 revenue.

The total warranted indebtedness of the Board on September 30, 1942 was $183,000.00. Total interest due on these outstanding warrants was, on September 30, 1942, $37,250.00. Thus, the total indebtedness of the Board at the close of the year was $220,250.00. Annual installments are paid on the principal of the warrants and interest is paid semi-annually. The last payment on these warrants is due February 1, 1958.

The physical conditions of the school system in Chilton County compare favorably with other counties in Alabama. There are pressing needs, however. Many of our school busses are overcrowded. Many buildings need repairs or additions. Furniture is needed in most of the school buildings.

The teaching staff in Chilton County ranks well above the average in professional preparation and in general efficiency. Relatively few of our teachers have left the schoolroom for better paying positions in industry. This condition will become less favorable, however, unless we find a way to increase teachers' salaries.

Too many of our schools are not equipped to serve proper lunches to the children. It is a well known fact that adequate nutrition is necessary for efficient learning and we must provide more lunchrooms for our and girls.

The war has brought many problems to our schools. No par the entire system has escaped th fects of the war and the succe operation of our educational pro will challange our officials, teac children and parents.

Respectfully,
D. P. Culp
Superintendent.

Moral Echoes

Not long since I read a letter from a soldier boy to the editor of a prominent church paper, in which were many unkind charges made against the writer of an editorial on the harmful affects of whiskey in our soldier camps. The young soldier charged that the editor was giving out "destructive criticism" and he was showing his teeth because the editor did not say nice things about the camps. Some people seem to think that a preacher should never cry out an alarm. When Aaron was sent out as God's man, he was ordered to wear bells as well as pomgranates. The prophets of God were commanded to cry aloud with the trumpet and tell Israel about their sins. The sentinel sleeping at his post may be the cause of the destruction of the city. When sin is destroying our people it is right that editors and preachers should cry aloud and spare not. Serve pomgranates, but do not forget to ring the bells.

One day a doubting Thomas came to the Duke of Wellington and asked of him: "Is it any use to preach the gospel of Christ to the Hindu?" This man thought it to be useless. The Duke replied, "What are your marching orders? What does your Christ have to say on the question?" "Oh," replied the man who had no faith in the Hindu, "Our Christ has said to, 'go into all the world and preach His gospel to every creature'." "Very well," replied the man who had led in many a battle. "You must obey the command. It is not a matter of yours as to whether the Hindu will be saved." Many of us who profess to have faith in the Son of God would gladly go anywhere and make any sacrifice, if we only knew that we would get results. When Christ speaks, it is our duty to obey. We have nothing to do with results. It is obedience that God wants.

One Saturday afternoon a visiting minister was being shown around in a penitentiary. He was carried into the auditorium where the next afternoon he was to speak to hundreds of convicts. Over on one side he saw two chairs draped in black. He paused before them and asked the meaning of those two chairs in black. He was told that there were two men who would sit in his audience the next day, and after the service they would be led to the chair of death. Said the guide to the minister, "Your sermon tomorrow will be the last words that will ever be spoken to these two men." That night the minister could not sleep. He was overwhelmed with the idea that he was going to talk to two men and never again would they be spoken to about his Christ. The next afternoon that preacher did not have anything to say about Emmerson and Browning, but he spoke of Christ alone. In almost every audience sitting before the ministers of today, there are chairs of death draped in black. Oh how we should speak as a dying man to dying men.

There was a well known Welsh preacher who lived to a ripe old age in an inland community. He was loved and honored by all. One day the good old man sickened and died. Men and women came from far and near to attend his funeral. A noted churchman was invited to conduct the funeral service and as he arose before the audience there were no sounds other than suppressed sobs. The churchman stood silent for a moment and then in a clear tone his voice rang out, "My brethren, the greatest obstacle on your road to hell has been removed." For a moment there were indications of astonishment, but later the audience understood what the preacher meant. Fathers and mothers remembered how that man in the casket had met their son on the road of prodigality and turned him around. All of them could recall the time and place where they were directed toward God's narrow road of righteous living by the one who was cold in death. Nothing more honorable could be said of any one than was said of that grand old man of God. Truly it is great service to block the road to hell for old and young.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. After learning that Pearl Harbor had been bombed, Lieut. Bulkeley ordered Lieut. Kelly to take three of the six torpedo boats to Bataan where they would get provisions and fuel from a submarine tender. But when they arrived, they found that the tender had been ordered away. So they set up headquarters in Sisiman Cove.

CHAPTER II

"For the most part we lived on our boats—had to, because we never knew when we would have to haul out into the bay in case of a dive-bomber attack. Anyway we had a base again.

"Next, we found our barges loaded with gasoline in drums which had been towed out into the bay for us by the navy—if they got smacked by bombs, they didn't want them burning near the wharves. There was nobody in charge but a watchman. Each boat holds two thousand gallons, and of course it was a job pouring all that through a funnel.

"We noticed, as we poured, that this gas had both water and rust in it—yet there was no way to strain it out; we had no chamois. What we couldn't then know was, this gas had been sabotaged. We'll never find out when or where—the guy who did it is safe, if he's alive. But someone had dissolved wax in it—wax which congealed inside our gas tanks in a coat half an inch thick—wax which clogged our filters so that sometimes we'd have to stop and clean them after an hour's run. That's the fuel we had to fight the war on, we were to find out.

"Then I went over to the section base to make arrangements for our food, and we got another bump. The navy already realized a food shortage was coming and cut us down to two rations a day—breakfast and supper. All you got for lunch was stomach cramps about noon. There was plenty of them.

"I also thought I'd better have the doctor look at my finger. I'd snagged it a few days before and hadn't paid much attention, but now it was swollen about as thick as a walnut. I guessed maybe it was a minor strep infection. What I didn't know was that out East the streptococci are bigger and meaner than bulldogs and not to be fooled with. He took one look and began to talk about the hospital, but I said the hell with that. I was the second officer of the squadron and badly needed.

"We settled that I'd come over to see this doctor daily.

"The big alarm came at noon on December 10—we'd pulled up alongside a mine sweeper for water when word came that a large flight of Jap planes was headed toward the Manila area, coming from the direction of Formosa. We pulled away from the tender, out into open water, and fifteen minutes later we saw them—several formations—I counted about twenty-seven to twenty-nine planes in each—two-motor bombers — lovely, tight, parade-ground formations, coming over at about 25,000 feet. But, I thought, when our fighters get up there and start rumpling their hair, those formations won't look so pretty. Only where were our fighters? The Japs passed on out of sight over the mountains, and then we began hearing the rumble of bombs—only first we felt the vibrations on our feet, even out there in the water, and we knew something was catching hell. But what? Manila? Maybe Nichols Field? Or even Cavite, our own base? We couldn't know."

"I did," said Bulkeley laconically. "I was there, at Cavite. The Admiral sent us a two-hour warning that they were coming—from Formosa, and headed on down in our direction across Northern Luzon. So we hauled our boats out into the bay. They kept beautiful formations, all right. The first big V had fifty-four planes in it, and they came in at about 20,000, with their fighters on up above to protect them from ours—only ours didn't show! We couldn't figure it. First they swung over Manila and began to paste the harbor shipping. It was a beautiful clear day, and I remember the sun made rainbows on the waterspouts of their bombs. They were from a hundred and fifty to two hundred feet high, and it made a mist screen so dense you could hardly tell what was happening to the ships. It turned out nothing much was—they only hit a few.

"But then that big beautiful V pivoted slowly and moved over Cavite—began circling it like a flock of well-disciplined buzzards.

"They were too high to see the bomb bay doors open, but we could see the stuff drop slowly, picking up speed; only as we watched we found we had troubles of our own. Because five little dive bombers peeled off that formation, one by one, and started straight down for us. When they were down to about fifteen hundred feet, they leveled off and began unloading. Of course we gave our boats full throttle and began circling and twisting, both to dodge the bombs and to get a shot at them. Our gunners loved it—it was their first crack at the Japs. I remember Chalker's face; he's a machinist's mate from Texarkana—a shootin' Texas boy. He was pouring 50-caliber slugs up at them, cooler than a pail of cracked ice, but that long, straight, pointed jaw of his was set. Houlihan, who was firing the other pair of 50's, was the same. They'd picked out one plane and were pouring it up into the sky, when we saw the plane wobble, and pretty soon she took off down the bay, weaving unsteadily, smoking, and all at once, two or three miles away, she just wobbled down into the drink with a big splash. So we know the 35 boat got one. Meanwhile the 31 boat had shot down two more. After that the planes didn't bother strafing the MTB's. Guess the Jap pilots back at their Formosa base passed the word around.

"We went on back to Cavite and offered to carry more wounded. The big base was one sheet of flame except for the ammunition depot. Only a piece of the dock was left, and through the shimmering flames you could see only jagged walls. Then we saw Admiral Rockwell—he was directing the fire apparatus which was trying to save the depot. He is a tall man, a fine figure of a sailor, but his head was down that day. In a dead voice he told us we'd better get out—that the magazine was liable to go up any minute. We offered to take him with us to Mariveles, but he said no, his job was here, to do what he could to save the magazines.

"Later I found out what the Japs apparently already knew."

"So we picked up from the gutters and streets a lot of cans of food we knew we would need—they were from the bombed warehouses—stacked them in the boat, and set out."

"I was back there a couple of days later after the fires were out," said Ensign Cox, a good-looking yellow-haired youngster from up-state New York. "They were burying the dead—which consisted of collecting heads and arms and legs and putting them into the nearest bomb crater and shoveling debris over it. The smell was terrible. The Filipino yard workers didn't have much stomach for the job, but it had to be done and done quick because of disease. To make them work, they filled the Filipinos up with grain alcohol.

"That raid gave me my first big shock of the war," said Lieutenant Kelly, "but it wasn't the damage they did. From over in Mariveles I couldn't see what was happening after the Jap bombers disappeared over the mountain. I got my shock after they had unloaded and flew over us on their way home—the same beautiful tight formations—not a straggler. Where was our air force?

"From over towards Cavite we could now see that huge column of smoke rising into the sky as the Japs left the scene.

"But it wasn't until Lieutenant DeLong dropped in at four o'clock in the 41 boat that I knew how bad off we were. He said the Cavite base was a roaring blast furnace—the yard littered with those mangled and scorched bodies—and furthermore that all our spare parts for the MTB's—engines and everything—had been blasted to bits. Machine shops completely gone. Not so much as a gasket left to see us through this war, with the factory halfway around the world.

"Also he said the Cavite radio had been hit. That still left the short-wave voice stuff to talk with Manila or Bataan or the Rock, but of course this couldn't be secret from the Japs, so they would be depending on our six boats for courier duty to relay all confidential stuff."

"So I wasn't surprised," said Bulkeley, "when early the next morning I got a hurry call to report to the Admiral in Manila. As our 34 boat cleared the mine fields around Bataan, looking over toward Manila I saw something very queer—shipping of all descriptions was pouring out of that Manila breakwater into the open harbor—destroyers, mine sweepers, Yangtze River gunboats, tramp steamers, all going hell for breakfast. And then I saw them—a big formation of about twenty-seven bombers. By then I was beginning to learn that if we saw planes in the air, they would be Japs, not ours. Then came another formation of twenty-nine, and still another of twenty-six.

"If they were after shipping, we shouldn't get too close to the other boats, so I changed course. They wheeled majestically around the bay's perimeter, and each time they Passed Manila a load would go whistling down and presently huge columns of black and white smoke began rising—we could even see some fires, although we were still eleven miles away.

"'Where in hell is our air force?' our crew kept asking me. 'Why in Christ's name don't they do something?'

"But the thing that really got me was that these big Jap formations, circling the bay like it was a parade maneuver, each time would sail impudently right over Corregidor! Didn't they know we had anti-aircraft guns?

"They knew all right, but it turned out they knew something I didn't. For presently all twenty of Corregidor's 3-inchers opened fire, and it made me sick to see that every one of their shells was bursting from 5,000 to 10,000 feet below that Jap formation. Those pilots were as safe as though they'd been home in bed. Later I found out what the Japs apparently already knew—that the Rock's anti-aircraft guns didn't have the range. And only then did it begin to dawn on me how completely impotent we were.

"When the Japs cleared out," continued Bulkeley, "Kelly and I headed for Manila and docked about three o'clock. When we reported, Commander Slocum told me the Admiral was considering sending our three boats on a raid off Lingayen, and were we ready? We said we were rarin' to go. So he said to stick around a couple of hours, and meanwhile to load the boats with files, records, and so forth, because they were moving headquarters. It had escaped so far, but right here on the water front it was too vulnerable — sure to get smacked. Through the open door we could see the Admiral conferring with his chief of staff.

"But just then," said Kelly, "Commander Slocum looked down at my arm, which was in a sling, frowned, and said I should get over to see the fleet doctor. The doctor took off the bandage and began to talk tough. Said he couldn't do anything, and that I was to get that arm to a hospital as fast as I could.

"I was dead set on that raid, but I decided it wouldn't be tactful to bring that up, so I said, 'Aye, aye, sir,' and skipped it. We loaded the boat with records, and then went back to headquarters, where we were told that the Jap convoy off Lingayen included eight transports and at least two battleships (one of these must have been the one that Colin Kelly later got), but that we weren't going to be sent. They were saving us for 'bigger things.'

"'My God!' my junior officer said later, 'I didn't know they came any bigger! What do they think we are?'

"Anyway the Admiral patted Bulkeley on the shoulder and said, 'We know you boys want to get in there and fight, but there's no sense sending you on suicidal missions—just now.'

"So that was that, and we went on out across the bay, to our thatched village.

"You might call the next few days quiet for us, although my arm began giving me hell.

"Presently Bulkeley dropped in on us in the 41 boat, bringing us some stuff issued by the navy to replace everything we'd lost at our quarters in Cavite—a shirt each, underdrawers, a few tubes of toothpaste, and razors—two for each boat, one for the men and one for the officers. But with each razor there were only three packages of blades, so we saw beards in the offing.

"Bulkeley had heard about my hand from a pharmacist's mate and asked me if I could stick it for two more days until he could relieve me. He himself had to be on call for consultation with the Admiral, while they needed DeLong and his boat for courier duty. I said 'sure.'

"But the next few days were hell. The whole arm began swelling, and my hand was the size of a catcher's mitt. The nights were worse because I couldn't lie down for any length of time. Also I had to keep my arm held up, or blood running down into it would drive me nuts, and it stiffened that way. The doctor at Mariveles kept offering me morphine, but I didn't dare. There might be an emergency where we'd have to get the boats out to sea quickly. Bulkeley had left me in charge, and morphine might make me sleep so hard I couldn't waken for an air-raid alarm. The worst thing was the flies—they kept buzzing around trying to get into that open incision in my finger as I held my hand up in the air. And also I was running a little fever—about four degrees.

Hitler in Mental Decline? Close Observers Say Yes

Reliable Reports Indicate Fuehrer Subject to Uncontrolled Emotions; German Physician Believes He Will Have Mental 'Explosion.'

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Where is Hitler?

That question can't be answered with any certainty at this writing and nobody seems to care. For more than a month, the communications from the German High Command have not borne the Fuehrer's signature. The anniversaries of two of the great events in Nazi history have come and gone, the celebrations were held with very little display in comparison with other years and entirely without appearance of the No. 1 Nazi himself. Hitler has made no public appearance for months.

It is true that communications supposedly from the Fuehrer have been made public but always through a second party, notably the speech on the anniversary of the founding of the National Socialist party. The set excuse is that Hitler is with his troops in the Russian front. But at the rate that front is moving these days, it is doubtful if he is very near it. It is quite possible that he is elsewhere or even nowhere but the interesting thing is that this man, who has managed to turn the world upside down, does not seem at all essential to the great political and military machine he has built up. It may be functioning without him and this would seem to indicate that if he is not dead, but should suddenly die, it wouldn't make much difference.

Some time ago, a report received from underground sources was received in London. It said that "Hitler either has been given an ultimatum by his generals, who pointed out his military blunders, or he is suffering from one of his hysterical fits and is in ill health as a result of his Russian reverses."

Recent Developments

What about these fits? They are no fiction but well-authenticated events. Before several witnesses he has frequently burst into tears, and in other ways given vent to utterly uncontrolled emotions. But these fits are of less importance than certain other likewise well-substantiated but not widely known developments which have taken place within the last year or two.

There are several stories which I heard from the lips of a man who has closely watched Hitler's career from its earliest beginning. The man is Fred Oechsner, a former colleague of mine. In fact, I was instrumental in having him sent to Berlin as correspondent for the Consolidated Press just about the time Hitler was beginning his political career.

Long before anybody else took Hitler seriously, Oechsner wrote to me: "This man is some day going to be the bull in Europe's china shop." Oechsner, who is now in Washington, told me the following story which he also repeats in his excellent book, "This Is the Enemy."

As you know, Hitler was always a teetotaler. He never drank anything but some very weak beer especially brewed for him and he only took sips of this pale beverage.

Recently his habits changed.

"Persons who visited him at his headquarters early in the winter told me," Oechsner says, "that he was becoming grave and irritable and that it was not uncommon for him on a cold night to drink three or four glasses of grog. He also took occasional drinks of a Bavarian liquor called Enzian which is not unlike gin."

Now Oechsner is an exceedingly reliable reporter and when he says the Fuehrer finished three grogs in an evening, I believe it—also I believe that a man unused to taking alcohol must have been higher than Berchtesgaden when he went to bed.

Oechsner also said: "There is a German physician of international repute who believes that some day Hitler will have a brain disturbance of a serious nature. This physician has treated Hitler since 1921 and knows his physical condition as well as his personal life. It is his opinion that Hitler is an outstanding example of a half-trained, half-educated person with a phenomenal talent for absorbing and co-ordinating information and detail gleaned from other sources. This attention to detail and pattern, he says, is obvious in Hitler's drawings, in his speeches, his military campaigns. It is a phenomenal mental power but some day it is going to explode."

Suicide the End?

Without revealing the source, I have heard the opinion expressed by a man who has seen and met with Hitler many times and is exceedingly familiar with his life, that it is quite possible that a mental decline has started which, he believes, may end in suicide.

On my own score, I may say that when I heard Hitler deliver his famous speech at the start of the war in 1939 in which he said that he was going to the front and would lead Germany to victory, that he would not take off his uniform until this had been achieved, and in the next breath named his successors, I thought he was preparing for suicide.

I doubt if he is now dead. He may not even be ill but the thing is, there has been no report of any public appearance for a long time.

That, of course, is hearsay evidence—or long-distance diagnosis but what Oechsner reports comes from first-hand authority.

So Hitler may already be in a padded cell—and nobody seems to care!

Fourth Term— Does FDR Want It?

Will the President run for a Fourth Term?

A number of cross currents are definitely in motion, some directly moving toward an attempt to draft Mr. Roosevelt as candidate in '44; some which at present seem to be carrying him in the opposite direction.

One thing that many people fail to realize is the fact that when the precedent against a man serving in the White House for more than two terms was broken, the first olive was out of the bottle and the chief obstacle to a fourth term was removed. As has been pointed out, the American people never before wanted a man for a third term candidate, although twice before candidates would have made the attempt—Grant and Theodore Roosevelt.

When the first whispers for a possible third term for Franklin Roosevelt were heard, I talked to a seasoned political observer. He said: the President doesn't want to run again but he will be persuaded to by his friends.

I make bold to state at this juncture that exactly the same statement can be made today with one modification: The President doesn't want to run for a fourth term but his friends are trying to persuade him to.

I feel sure that the President does not want to run again. I do believe he passionately desires to preside at the peace table. But some of his friends have a different view. As Joseph Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, once remarked about the White House: "It's a nice boarding house, you hate like the dickens to move out."

Friends' Demands

Two things are acting in favor of persuading the President: One, this earnest and insistent demand of his "friends" who don't want "to move out" and some of whom honestly believe that it would be for the general good if the President stayed on. Their arguments are many.

The second factor and the one which could elect Mr. Roosevelt for a fourth term, if he does run again, can be expressed in the well-known slogan, "Don't swap horses while crossing a stream." It is the reasoning behind this homely expression which, of course, provides the most persuasive argument to any President.

On the other hand, if by 1944 Hitler has been defeated, the President might feel that he could serve even better at the peace table if he were not the head of a political party, if he were not bound by certain domestic policies which the head of an administration must administer with one eye on the votes in the next election.

I believe that if the President felt positively that he would be allowed to play the principal role in the peace-making, even though someone else were in the White House (perhaps a Republican), or if he felt that as President, he would be less effective as a peacemaker, he would not consider a fourth term.

Carl W. Hollis, Complainant, vs. Susie Mae Hollis, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Omar L. Reynolds, Attorney of Record, that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that her place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort: and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Susie Mae Hollis, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 19th day of April, 1943, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Clanton, Ala., this 16th day of March, 1943.

CARD OF APPRECIATION

We wish to express our very deep appreciation through this paper to our many friends and relatives for the many deeds of kindness shown us during the illness of our mother, Mrs. Willis Hicks Hathcock, and during the illness and death of our sister, Miss Grey Hicks. Words fail to express our gratitude and it is most impossible to write each individual separately, so by this means we hope to reach most every one. We kindly thank both Maplesville and Chilton County High Schools and each family and each individual for the beautiful flowers. Also to each one who sent cards and letters of sympathy. Many who so untiringly administered help in every way possible, again we thank every one and pray our Heavenly Father's blessing upon each one of you. Signed: Lumon, Layden, Philip and Blanche Hicks, Lawley, Ala.

Shiloh

We are proud of our church attendance both Sunday and Sunlay night, but let's try and see if we can make it lots better.

Misses Dorothy and Martha Mims of Billingsley spent the week-end with relatives here.

Misses Louise Keen and Polly Carter visited friends in Bessemer Sunday.

Mrs. Morris Keen of Mobile visited Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Keen over the week-end.

FSA Borrowers Increase Food Production

More than a third of the nation's increase in milk production in 1942 came from 463,941 farms of Farm Securty Administration borrowers, the Department of Agriculture reported today.

In terms of the nation's total increase, milk topped the list of production by these borrowers, according to results of a survey of their production. The Farm Security Administration, on the basis of its survey, reported that these families, constituting 7.6 per cent of the 6,097,000 farm operators listed by the 1940 census, increased their milk production by 1,419,000,000 pounds or 36 per cent of the total increase for the nation. This was a 20 per cent increase over their 1941 production, compared to a 3 per cent increase made by all farmers. All of this increase may not have been, of course, a net increase since some of the cows purchased in 1942 by FSA borrowers would have been milked by their original owners.

Significant increases by Farm Secur borrowers also were shown for other war-needed food crops. In terms of their own production the year before, these 1942 increases ranged from 20 to 106 per cent. In terms of the nation's total increase, they also contributed 27 per cent of the nation's increase in dry beans and 10 per cent of the total increase in eggs, chickens and peanuts.

These families were from the smal lfarm group unable to get adequate credit from other sources. They operated with Farm Security Administration credit and supervision. Early in 1942, following anuary revision of the nation's war food goals as a result of the attack on Pearl Harbor, the families revised their farm plans to provide greater increases of the foods called for.. Many of them plannd substantial production of war-needed crops, such as peanuts, dairy products and poultry, of which they had previously produced little or none.

HEALTH COMMENTS BY G. E. NEWTON COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER

Our Teeth and Health

Since our entrance into the war we have become greatly disturbed by the large number of decayed teeth found in young men who should be in the prime of health. Approximately forty-two out of every hundred men examined for Selective Service from all parts of the United States suffered sufficiently from bad teeth to cause them to be disqualified from military service at the beginning of induction. At the present time the army is taking the men and trying to fix their teeth though at a tremendous cost and lost of man hours. As surprising as this fact was to the public the condition has long been familiar to the dentists and health workers.

Repeated examinations of the teeth of children show that, at the age of six, or the starting—to—school age, the average child has three or four cavities in his mouth. It is said that approximately 35% of the young men rejected because of physical defects after being appointed as midshipmen in the United States Naval Academy over their failure to make the grade to the condition of their teeth. The over-whelmingly large number of men called for military service during the World War, whose teeth showed the tragic effects of neglect, appalled the examing boards and directed attention to a condition that called loudly for correction. Dr. P. G. Puterbaugh, prominent Chicago dentist, declared in a radio broadcast sometime ago that 95 out of every 100 children in public schools have decayed teeth. He was referring to children in the entire United States, but, in the absence of actual figures, it is safe to assume that this percentage is as true of Alabama as it is of the country as a whole.

Since cleanliness is the first essential in the preservation of good teeth, it is necessary that the teeth should be brushed at least twice a day, preferably after breakfast and immediately before retiring.

In the matter of mouth hygiene, remember that it is the brush, and not the dentrifice, that is most important, as the dentrifice merely acts as a lubricant for the brush.

In the selection of your dentrifice, be sure that it contains no acid or gritty substance. In order to insure that feeling of mouth comfort and cleanliness which is one of the functions of good dentrifice, the one you select should have a pleasant flavor.

The proper brushing of food particles from the teeth has been compared to the sweeping of dirt from a hardwood floor. As a careful housewife sweeps the dirt along the cracks, rather than across them, so the person who has mastered the correct use of the tooth brush uses it to sweep these food accummulations from between the teeth, brushing the lower teeth upward and the upper teeth downward, thus he removes every particle of food from the spaces between the teeth, which are most susceptible to decay.

It should be kept in mind that gums are much in need of being brushed especially in this period of soft food, which requires little chewing and therefore robs the gums of the stmiulation they need. Neglected, unbrushed gums in time become flabby and soft bleed easily and fall victim to various forms of infection, which, if not checked, may result in the loss of the teeth.

SELFISHNESS, LOVE AND PRAYER

A Letter From Maplesville, Chilton County, Alabama

—By J. O. Mize

My friends I want to tell you to begin with, please do not expect much of a letter from me as my education is limited, due to the fact that in my boyhood days circumstances were such at my home that it was impossible for me to go to school but very little. I am not telling you how old I am but in those school days there were only three months school in the year. And due to the nature of the affairs at home I only got to school about three days each week.

I cannot remember even having my mother and my father was an invalid most all of his life after I was about twelve years old, so I did the best I could to make a living for my two sisters and a stepmother.

Now friends, when God created the world he furnished it with everything that now exists and then gave us knowledge to improve and make this world of his beautiful for our pleasure and through his desciples he gave us his law to be governed by so that we could have plenty of everything that we need for our pleasure—namely: Coal, iron, copper, brass, tin, gold, wood, horses, mules, hogs, cows, sheep, in fact everything that now exists.

Every person on this earth should be happy and have a joyful good time, so everything moved along very well for a time, then the people began to get very wicked just as they are today. The God got Noah to build him an ark so he could destroy that first beautiful earth and try out a different plan. He destroyed his first earth with a mighty flood of water. Just think seriously what a horrid death those wicked people experienced in that vast expanse of water, clinging to each other—grabbing at anything they could to keep them out of that mighty flood of water—some of them on house tops—just anywhere they could get for safety and there was no safety for them, because due to their selfishness they had forgotten God. And they were everyone drowned except Noah and his family.

Part No. 2 Love and Prayer

After God had destroyed his first world, due to the sins of that world, he created this present world that we now live in and furnished it wih everything similar to His first world and gave us a commandment to go forth and replenish it—he also gave us knowledge to build beautiful houses gardens and farms and everything we would need to make ourselves happy. We did very well for a while then selfishness and hatred started again. We people failed to honor God and pray to him for forgiveness of our sins. God had only one child and that was Jesus Christ, so he sent his only son of his right here on earth to teach us just how to love His father and serve Him and to love our neighbors as ourselves. Some selfish people have wanted to gain the whole world and rule it themselves, they killed this only Child of God. So today it is just about as bad as it was when God had Noah to build the arc.

Now friends, I, for one believe in prayer and do not care who knows it, and I do not believe that the various troubles that we are having now are here on this earth will ever be much better than it is now, until

FROM MIAMI

Dear Ben:

I am always glad to get the good old Chilton County News. I know most everybody and I like to know what they all are doing. I read the letters the soldiers write the first thing. I am a soldier's wife. He was drafted the 29th of November but I am proud to say he is willing to do any thing to help his country. He has been a good many places and he is now stationed in Florida. I came down a month ago and I am working and I am willing to do anything to help out.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams, Verbena, Ala., and I am the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Barrett, Thorsby, Ala., and I want our friends to know we both are willing and I thought they might want to write him. He would like to hear from all of them. All soldiers like to get mail. Well, I don't know much to write, so I will say thanks to The Chilton County News. Written by Mrs. Jewell Williams, 781 N.W. 55st, Miami, Florida.

Rev. and Mrs. Owen, pastor of Clanton First Baptist Church, and who are returned missionaries of Palestine, will speak at Pleasant Valley Church Friday night, March 26th. Everyone is invited to come out and hear them.

THOMAS JUNIOR WINS COUNTY JUNIOR TOURNAMENT

James Foshee, Sports Reporter

The Thomas Jr. School basketball team won the County Junior Tournament last Friday and Saturday, March 19 and 20. The Thomas Junior "five" won from a fast team from Coopers in the finals Saturday night. Thomas Junior won first place, Coopers second place and Mount Pleasant won third place by defeating Collins Chapel in the consolation game.

Wildlife Week Is Proclaimed By Gov. Sparks

Alabamians are this week observing "Wildlife Conservation Week," a proclamation by Gov. Chauncey Sparks setting aside March 20-27 for this purpose. Bird Day, which has been observed annually since its inception in 1907, was proclamed for observance on Friday, March 26. Governor Sparks' proclomation called on all Alabamians to unite with the Alabama Wildlife Federation, its sponsor, and the Department of Conservation in the proper observance of both events.

Chairman Reports War Bond Drive Far Behind

Gentlemen:

We are a long ways behind on the sale of bonds this month. Many of our committees are busy. We all seem not to have the time to give to help in this great struggle. We rush in the morning to look over the casualty lists and see who has made the great sacrifice. Each mother, father and relative hopes that their boy will be saved, but each boy that has made the supreme sacrifice represents some father, mother, brother and sister, but, for someone the war is over. For that mother, father, brother, sister or wife there can be no happiness in victory.

Let us each one ask ourself these questions: "Have we done our full duty toward our boys and our country?" Have we contributed every effort to bring success and to save the life of our boy?" Only those who have felt the strain knows what it means to read the indefinable word "Missing." The Red Cross is begging for means to furnish nurses, medicine and supples to help our boys that are wounded on the fronts.

We hope every individual in Chilton County will give a few moments time to think of what a little sacrifice they have made compared to what our boys are making. Let us not complain of the few things we have been deprived of if it is for the benefit of the soldiers on the fronts.

We are expecting our boys to win this war for us and some of us have made very little effort to help in this great struggle. We have over three million dollars on deposit in Chilton County. Banks tell the depositors that they can not use the money and that the government bond is the best security that we can get and we get three per cent interest.

I wish that I had the time to see more people personally and make a personal appeal for the purchase of bonds. I hope and trust that we will buy at least $16,000 more bonds in the next ten days to make our full quota. Won't you do your part?

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Executive Chairman.

Rationing News

RATION NEWS

Meats, fats, oils, shortenings and butter were frozen Sunday night of this week. No one may deliver any of these commodities to an indivdual consumer or family this week. Any of these commodities produced on the farm may be sold to institutions during this week, such users of foods as hotels, restaurants, cafes, camps, jails and other similar institutions.

The Office of Price Administration is due to have ready for distribution in the near future instructions as to how farmers and other producers are to dispose of their produce coming under this regulation. The local office hopes to have this information available next week.

The rationing of meats will begin Monday, March 29. The red stamps in Book No. 2 will be used for the purchase of meats that are rationed.

Food ration stamps D, E and F good for 48 points per person for April will be cashable beginning March 25. Food stamps A, B, C will expire April 1, and will not be cashable after that date.

Automobile Tires

With the coming of warm weather the demand for tires for automobiles and trucks has increased. It is true that the quota of tires has been raised, but not enough to offset the increase in the demand. Your local rationing board would remind you that many of the tires on essential vehicles have been in constant operation for three and four years. Naturally these tires are beginning to give way. Trucks of Chilton County engaged in hauling lumber, crossties, coal and farm produce must be kept rolling. Your board is anxious to serve the greatest number of people with the limited amount of tires and tubes at its command, and at the same time promote the war effort first, last and all the time. It is provoking and inconvenient to have an automobile or truck and not be able to run it just whe you want to, but if the United States were to lose this war, all of us realize we would not have a car or truck of any kind, now or at any time in the future.

The office hours of the local rationing office are 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Sugar Stamp No. 12 for five pounds of sugar cashable until May 31.

Coffee Stamp No. 26 for one pound of coffee good until April 19.

Auto accidents in England have proven twice as deadly as German bombs.

The Methodist Church at Childersburg has dedicated a service flag.

Farm Meetings Held At Concord Junior High School

Each year the Vocational Agriculture teacher of Chilton County High Schools hold form meetings at one or more of the rural communities. This year the meetings are being held ot Concord each Wednesday night at 8:00. At these meetings current farm problems are discussed.

The purpose of these meetings are to keep the farmers posted on new farm happenings, to increase farm production and to make farming more economical.

Much interest has been shown in the previous meetings, won't you farmers of Concord Community come out on Wednesday night at 8:00?

ATTENTION ALL FRIENDS OF FOREIGN MISSIONS!

The W. M. S. of the First Baptist Church of Clanton invites all friends to an open meeting to be held in the Church auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Monday night, March 29.

Miss Irene Jeffers of Roanoke, Ala., recently repatriated missionary from China, will be the guest speaker. A cordial invitation is extended to the W. S. C. S. of the Methodist Church, as well as to all friends and young people and business men in the community. It is also hoped that many friends from the neighboring churches in Unity and Chilton [illegible] find it possible to attend this meeting. All are cordially welcome.

ALABAMA MILL BOY SCOUTS HOLD MEETING

Troop 52, Boy Scouts of America, sponsored by the Alabama Mills, will hold a community night program at the school in the village on Monday night, March 29th, at 7:30 o'clock. Scoutmaster Mid Robinson and his Scouts will have a part of the program and Field Scout Executive Charles B. McKee of the Montgomery Area Council will give a talk on the part of the Boy Scouts in the war effort and how the Mill Troop can participate with the proper support of the entire community. Everyone is invited to hear Executive McKee and to enjoy the Scout program.

SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM

The following members of the Registrants' Advisory Board will assist registrants in preparing questionnaires on the days appointed:

Monday—V. J. Heard, Joe Mullins.
Tuesday—L. F. Gerald, Sr., L. F. Gerald, Jr.
Wednesday—Grady Reynolds, Omar Reynolds.
Thursday—A. B. Foshee, Percy Pitts.
Friday—J. B. Atkinson, C. F. Jones.
Saturday until 3:00 p.m.—V. J. Heard, Joe Mullins.

Each member will be at his own office except Mr. C. F. Jones who will be at the City Hall.

CHILTON CIRCUIT
(Pleasant Hill Church)

The Second Quarterly Conference for the Chilton Circuit will be held at the Pleasant Hill Church Saturday, March 27, at 11:00 a.m. with Dr. G. S. Frazer presiding. Since I have not yet obtained an accurate official roll of the Quarterly Conference since I acquired four new churches, I am taking this opportunity to say to the following churches: Antioch, Concord, Mt. Pisgah, Pleasant Grove and Pleasant Hill, please attend and make good reports. The churches I serve I would like for them to make as good a report as possible on the benevolences.

Please remember that I preach this fourth Sunday on my round: 9:30 a.m. at Mt. Pisgah, 11:00 a.m. at Cedar Grove and again that night at Cedar Grove.—Rev. Reese Farnell.

CHLITON COUNTY HIGH GRIDDERS GO TO WORK

James Foshee, Sports Reporter

The Chilton County High football team get under way with spring practice for the coming 1943 grid season. After going undefeated for the last two years the "Tigers" are out to keep the pace in the coming season. With the loss of the first eleven last year the boys are determined to make another winning team. Coach S. C. Porch had 40 out for the first drill in spring practice. A lots of promising material has been found on the grid field in the few days of practice.

Out of the squad now coming out not a one is in the drafting age, so this proves to be a fast team with plenty of power on the gridiron next fall. With the loss of the fast backfield of last years team there are some promising backs to fill in and keep the backfield with plenty of speed and power.

Savannah, Ga., has a street called "Victory Drive."

Rationing Of Fats Oils And Meats Starts Monday

Point value that consumers will pay beginning next Monday, March 29, for meats, cheese, fats and oils, and canned fish under the new rationing program are announced this week by the State OPA office.

Almost all popular meat cuts have point values of eight points a pound and less. Butter is assigned a value of eight points a pound, and a similar point value is given to all rationed cheeses. All canned fish is valued at seven points a pound.

Examination of the official point tables indicates that the meats-fats rations are relatively more liberal than the rations of canned and processed foods. The weekly allotment of 16 points per person, represented by red stamps in Ration Book 2, compares with an average weekly allotment of 12 points per person under the canned goods program. On a "per pound" basis, the point values of items under the meats-fats program are sharply lower.

A list of the principal items on the official point table follows:

Eight points per pound—Porterhouse (T-bone) steak, sirloin steak, round steak and flank steak; standing rib roast (seven-inch cut); veal loin chops, veal cutlets and calves liver; loin lamb chops and boneless lamb shoulder; center cut pork chops and roasts, fresh or cured sliced ham, boneless picnics and boneless butts; bacon (rind off), by piece or sliced; butter; hard cheeses.

Seven points per pound—Standing rib roasts and steaks (10-inch cut), boneless chuck or shoulder; veal rib chops and veal sirloin; lamb rib, leg and shoulder chops; pork loin end and shoulder chops and steak, whole or half pork loins, whole or half hams (fresh or smoked); bacon (rind on) by slab or piece; pork sausage, weiners, bologna and liver sausage; all fish in hermatically sealed containers, including sardines, tuna fish and salmon; tins or glass jars of beef, lamb and veal tongue, and vienna sausage.

Six points per pound—Standing blade rib roast (10-inch cut), chuck or shoulder roast (bone in), brisket; beef livers and tongues; veal shoulder chops and veal rump and sirloin roasts (bone in); leg and shoulder roasts of veal; leg and shoulder of lamb and lamb sirloin roasts (bone in); pork bellies (fresh and cured only), pork shoulder (shank half-bone in); ready-to-eat spareribs; meat spreads in tin and glass containers; salad and cooking oils (one pint equals one pound).

Five points per pound—Rump roast of beef (bone in); hamburger; pork regular plates and pork livers; smoked plate and jowl squares; lard and other shortening; oleomargarine.

Four points per pound—Beef short ribs, plate, brisket and shank (all bone in); veal breast and shank of veal (bone in); pork spareribs, fat backs, clear plates, chitterlings and headcheese; tin or glass containers of potted and deviled meats and sausage in oil.

Three points per pound — Beef brains, ox tails and tripe; lamb breast and flank; pig hocks and knuckles, pig brains, hearts and tails; tin or glass containers of brains, boned pigsfeet; chile con carne.

Two points per pound—Pork kidneys and snouts; pork neck and backbones; tin or glass containers of pigsfeet(bone in); tamales.

One point per pound—Fresh pigsfeet (bone in) and pig ears.

Only one cut of beef—boneless sirloin steak—has a point value above eight. It is nine points per pound. Two items—ready-to-eat boneless ham slices and Canadian bacon—are 11 points per pound. Dried beef is 12 points per pound.

FELLOWSHIP NIGHT

The six regular circles of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist Church of Clanton are planning a Fellowship night and church supper Monday evening at 6:30 with members of the Business Women's Circle as their honor guests. Every member of the society is urged to be present in order to make this hour of fellowship a success.

Appreciation is expressed to members of the Y. W. A. and to Miss Nell Rockett, their counsellor, for services graciously rendered in prepaartion for this evening's entertainment.

EXTREME PUNISHMENT

Little Johnny started the day by introducing the cat to the canary. Next he upset the bowl of goldfish, twisted a knob off the wireless, took granddad's watch to pieces to see what made it tick, spilt ink over the carpet, let the bath overflow, and kicked his nurse on the shins.

"The little fiend!" his mother said when she was told; "I'll punish him for that. Now he shan't go to Sunday school!"

TAKE IT EASY

A parrot lived in the bar of an inn, and was accustomed to note the rush of business every Saturday night.

One Saturday it left its cage to explore the neighborhood, and was eventually found in a field surrounded by crows, who were busily depriving it of its feathers.

When the rescue party arrived, the parrot was heard ejaculating: "One at a time, gentlemen, if you please. One at a time; you'll all be served."

TRANSLATE IT

One dark night in Prague a Czech policeman spotted a man who appeared to be chalking something on a wall. Going closer he saw, written in Czech, the words: "Perish Hitler!"

Immediately the conscientious policeman stopped and shouted indignantly at his countryman:

Technicality

The old school Southerner, brimming with pride over his farm in the Alabama coastal region, was extolling its merits to a northern friend.

"Why, man," he said proudly, "the trees grow so thick on that land that you couldn't put your arm between them. Deer are so big that their antlers have a spread of ten feet!"

The Northerner's eyes looked questioning. He said: "It's interesting, Colonel, but how in the world do the deer get their antlers between those trees?"

Crisp, Cool Salads Bid Spring Welcome

This Week's Menu

Vegetable Platter: Tomato Stuffed with Cottage Cheese, Carrot Strips, Asparagus, Cole Slaw, Potato Salad
Hot Biscuits Honey
Cherry Pie Beverage

Use a lemon juice dressing for these orange slices, salad greens and tomatoes, thus saving oil for other household uses.

Outdoors it may be little tufts of green grass and tender shoots on the trees that let you know spring is on the wing, but indoors you can do the trick by bringing fresh vegetable plates and crispy salads to your table.

Salads and vegetable plates are truly the first harbingers of spring when it comes to menu - making. Oh, yes, I know you've been serving salads and vegetables during winter, but with spring you have many more choices and fresh colors from which to choose.

Several attractive combinations of vegetables on a single platter—or salads—can tide you over many meatless days. Then, too, they'll bring life-quickening vitamins and minerals to your diet to help get rid of whatever winter's cobwebs you may have accumulated in your system!

Speaking of salads brings up the problem of dressings, and with that the scarcity of fats for salad oils. There are several alternatives, the first of which is lemon juice either alone or with a bit of sugar as dressing for fruit salads.

Many of you perhaps like simple vinegar dressing with just a touch of salt and pepper. This perks up flavors in vegetables, inexpensively, too!

Your french dressing of course can be made with mineral oil in the absence of other oils. Long used in reduction diets, mineral oil makes a nice dressing for light spring salads. It is not absorbed by the body, so if you're trying to gain weight, be sure to include other fats for body use.

If it's mayonnaise you like, here's a recipe which requires only a half cup of oil and a single egg yolk.

Cooked Mayonnaise.

1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 egg yolk
½ cup salad oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Melt butter, blend in flour. Add water slowly and cook until thickened. Cool, then add salt, mustard, pepper, paprika. Beat in egg yolk, then add oil slowly, beating all the while. Last add lemon juice.

Vegetable Plate.

Stuff tomato with cottage cheese and chives and place in center of platter. On either side place a mound of crisp carrot strips and asparagus, cooked or canned, with a ring of lemon rind. Potato salad and crisp cole slaw complete the plate.

Cole Slaw Dressing.
(For 2½ cups cabbage)

¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Combine ingredients in order given and mix thoroughly with cole slaw.

If hot slaw is your favorite dish, here is the ideal dressing for it:

Hot Slaw.

2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup cold water
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded cabbage

Combine egg yolks, water and vinegar. Add butter, sugar and salt. Cook on low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Add cabbage and reheat.

With the absence of pineapple often these days, we like something to use to give tartness to salads. In the following recipe you can use grapefruit to good advantage:

Grapefruit and Carrot Salad.
(Serves 8)

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
½ cup grapefruit juice
¼ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups grated carrots
½ cup chopped grapefruit

Add hot water to gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add fruit juice and vinegar. Chill until slightly thickened. Add carrots, grapefruit and salt. Pour into mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise or french dressing.

A heavy dinner calls for a green leafy salad with loads of crunchiness:

Lettuce-Spinach Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 head lettuce
½ pound spinach
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons vinegar

Chill and chop spinach and lettuce. Add salt, pepper, vinegar and chopped hard-cooked eggs to ½ cup of the sour cream. Just before serving, add to spinach, lettuce and remaining sour cream.

This vegetable plate tastes as delightful as it looks and adds plenty of spring color to your table. Stuffed tomato, carrot strips, asparagus, cole slaw and potato salad are used.

The cottage cheese in this salad contributes calcium to the diet, the apples and celery give vitamins and peanuts are a surprise in flavor and in their contribution to nutrition:

Apple-in-Cottage-Cheese Salad.

3 apples, coarsely diced
1 cup diced celery
½ cup diced cucumber
¼ cup sharp french dressing
Lettuce
1 pint cottage cheese
½ cup chopped, salted peanuts
Mayonnaise

Wash and dice unpeeled apples. Toss apples, diced celery, cucumber in french dressing, until well coated. On each salad plate place crisp lettuce, and then with a spoon shape ⅓ cup cottage cheese into a ring. Fill ring with apple mixture, and sprinkle with peanuts. Top with mayonnaise or a fluffy salad dressing.

Carrot, Cabbage, Peanut Salad
(Serves 16)

4 cups carrots, shredded
3 cups cabbage, shredded
3 cups diced, unpeeled apples
2 cups peanuts
Cooked salad dressing

Have all ingredients cold. Combine in order given and add just enough salad dressing to combine lightly together. Garnish with sprigs of parsley and chopped peanuts.

Lynn Says:

Vitamins Plus or Minus? It all depends upon how you handle them. To retain maximum amounts of vitamins in cooked foods, use as little water as possible—just enough to prevent from sticking.

Get on your mark, start quickly. Not a track race, but a vitamin race. You start with boiling water for cooking, and cook rapidly—thus cutting cooking time to a minimum and saving precious food values.

Covered utensils without stirring are prescribed. Stirring and uncovered utensils put air into foods and destroy vitamins.

Avoid violent, furious boiling This is modern, streamlined, protective cookery—to preserve valuable vitamins.

THE APPEARANCES AFTER THE RESURRECTION

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am alive for evermore.—Revelation 1:18.

The most important day in all history was the first day of the week following the crucifixion of Christ. Then He appeared to His disciples as their risen Lord. All the hope of all mankind for all eternity depended on His victory over death.

By eventide news had come to the disciples of His resurrection, and half in hope and half in uncertainty they had gathered to talk over these matters. Fearful of the Jews, they met behind closed doors. All at once He was there—the Lord Himself. What a wonderful change came over them as He made Himself known to them. They went

I. From Fear to Gladness (vv. 19, 20).

Their eyes had been upon their enemies and they were afraid. Now they "were glad, when they saw the Lord." We need to learn that lesson. If we look within we are ashamed and discouraged. If we look around us we are confused and fearful. If we look to Christ we are glad and strong.

Notice that their joy was not based only on an emotional impulse. They saw Christ in His resurrection body—the very One who had died. The evidence was there before them. Now they could understand the things He had said to them. The whole realm of spiritual truth was now in focus again, and they were glad. So are we when we really see Christ.

II. From Weakness to Strength (vv. 21-23).

The disciples who were called to be witnesses for Christ had lost their testimony when He died on the cross. Unbelief and discouragement had so weakened them that they were in hiding instead of being out proclaiming His truth.

Now the risen and victorious One sent them forth with the Father's blessing. They were empowered by the Holy Spirit, and given great authority (v. 23). Note that it was given not to one man or to the leaders, but to all the disciples. It was "a declarative right, and it belongs to every true disciple. Those who have received the gift of the Holy Spirit are in a position to declare to men that their sincere repentance brings forgiveness" (Douglass). The opposite is also true.

III. From Doubt to Faith (vv. 24-28).

Thomas, who had doubts and who cultivated them by his stubborn attitude (v. 25), did himself and his brethren a serious disservice by being absent from the meeting on the evening of the first Easter Day. When he did appear he had only doubts to contribute. Let those who make a custom of absenting themselves from the place and hour of service beware lest they do likewise.

His doubts were honest ones—and God always meets such questions, honestly and intelligently. When the evidence was before him, the heart of Thomas leaped the chasm from doubt to faith in one cry of complete devotion (v. 28).

It is significant that down through the ages many doubters have been won to Christ by the proof of the resurrection of Christ, which is by the testimony of historical scholars "the best authenticated fact in all history." The risen Christ stands before men today and says, "Be not faithless but believing." May many respond with Thomas, "My Lord and my God."

IV. From Death to Life (vv. 29-31).

Christ arose from the dead not just to show that He had power to do so, but, as Paul puts it, "for our justification" (Rom. 4:25). The reality and dependability of the entire plan of salvation hinged on the return of Christ from the dead. Had the grave held Him, His claims of deity and of the ability to forgive sin would have been entirely discredited. Because He lives we shall live.

The experience of regeneration is therefore likened in Scripture to a passing from death to life (John 5:24). Thomas saw the Lord, and believing, passed from doubt to faith. We cannot see Him now, but we have the blessed privilege of believing and thus receiving life (vv. 29, 31).

This was the mssage which the now radiant and empowered disciples went out to preach. The book of Acts tells us how effectively they did it, and shows how much of their preaching centered on the fact of the resurrection.

The command and the commission was not to them alone, but also to all of us who believe in Christ. May God take out of us the fear of men, overcome our weakness, and send us out with renewed faith to make this life-giving message known to our fellow men.

Why Creased Pants

It is interesting to note that the crease down the front of trousers is the result of a royal accident. King Edward VII of England, having slipped from his horse and fallen into a ditch, a local tailor was hurriedly asked to supply fresh trousers. These he so tightly packed in a box that each leg was neatly creased. The king "adopted" creased trousers, and thus started a lasting fashion.

He Ate His Own Words, But Cooked Them First

"It isn't what you eat—it's how you cook it!" That was the contention of Grimod de la Reyniere, the famous French gourmet who died in 1838, and to prove it he once literally ate his own words. He took a copy of his own book, "A Manual of Gastronomy," cooked it, and ate it! He suffered no ill effects.

Nearly 300 years ago, Theodore Reinking wrote a book which King Christian IV of Denmark held to be too democratic. The unfortunate author was eventually sentenced either to eat his own book or be executed. He chose to tear up his book and put the scraps in soup, which he ate!

Wives in Camps

In British units of native troops along the Gold Coast of West Africa, the soldiers are permitted to have their wives with them in the barracks, privates being allowed one, sergeants two and sergeant majors four, says Collier's. When the men are transferred to another camp, the transportation costs for the ladies are also borne by the British government.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

The Junior Players successfully presented the four-act comedy, "Romance in a Boarding House," last Friday night. A large crowd was present, even though the weather was rainy and threatening.

All the characters played their parts effectively with no great amount of prompting being necessary. Mary Ann Oden did a good job of playing the leading part. The story kept the audience guessing all the time, and had a very pleasant ending. Plenty of laughs were afforded by most all the characters, especially Mrs. Benson, an old lady who was hard of hearing (Alee Culp), and Mr. Smith, a lazy guy who insisted on keeping his shoes off all the time (Hansel Grooms).

Between act numbers were rendered by the newly organized Sunshine Quartet at Isabella. This group consists of Bill Veazy, O. F. Davenport, Sr., Dorothy Oden and James Veazy with Mrs. Kirby Summers at the piano.

Chapel program last week was held Friday morning with the Senior II class in charge. Devotional was by Mildred Chandler. The group presented three short skits from the play.

Also it was pointed out by Mr. Turner that the furniture that was used to furnish the stage for the play belonged to the school. The P.-T. A. and the other groups who raised the money to buy this furniture are to be thanked sincerely for their efforts. All the students are urged to take the best possible care of the furniture and make it last as long as possible.

The local F. F. A. met last week and discussed several items of business. The program was a debate on, Resolved, that agriculture is more important than manufacturing during time of war. The affirmative side won.

It was also reported that the amount of scrap iron sold by the organization recently was over four tons. The members have not yet decided just what use to put the money to, even though there has been some discussion about buying an electric fence and raising hogs.

Malcolm LeCroy, a former student at I. H. S. and now a member of the U. S. Army, was a visitor at school recently. Also visiting Isabella last Friday were Sara and Bill Matthews who are at present students at Thompson High School in Silura. We like to see all these old students and friends back at I. H. S. and welcome them to come back more often.

Floyd News

We are glad to report that the health of our community is fine at present. Everybody seems to be getting along nicely.

Last Sunday was our regular preaching day. Our crowd was small on account of the weather. There was a lot of visitors out of the community. We had Brother Leo Latiker from Rockford, Brother Joel T. Prickett and Brother Barrett from Wetumpka with us and had Brother P. H. Headley and family from Pleasant Valley. We invite them to come again. Brother Edward Wilkin brought the message which was highly appreciated by all.

Sorry to say we had to postpone our singing as the weather was so bad and no wood for the heater. We are going to try and do better next time. If the weather will permit we will try and hold our singing Sunday afternoon.

Brother T. A. Prickett had as weekend guests Mr. Joel Prickett and family, Mr. Latiker and Mr. Barrett of Wetumpka and Rockford.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hudmon had as their Sunday dinner guests Mr. P. H. Headley and family.

Glad to say that we have our Sunday School books ready for the next quarter and want every one on hand next Sunday so they can get their books.

We are looking for a better Sunday School now for we think that winter is about over and it won't be so bad for us to get out on Sunday. Let's everybody remember that Bro. J. L. Culpepper will preach for us next Saturday night and Sunday. Let's all come out and hear him.

HAS SEVEN FACES

Seven sons fighting all over the world for the one thing that ONLY AMERICANS HAVE

These fighters for freedom are the sons of Robert M. Jenkins, formerly station agent at Deatsville, Alabama, who served the L & N for over fifty years. That fifty-year record of loyal service is unusual but he gave to the war something matched by hardly any other parent in America—six fighting sons with the seventh in a war industry.

What inspired this group from a single family to leap to the defense of home and country? What steeled that courageous father to see them go with never a quaver in his last goodbye, never a shrinking from his major sacrifice?

It was the American Spirit! And the sons of this typical American are just seven of one hundred and thirty million of such symbols.

That spirit has grown strong on two freedoms which ONLY Americans have to the full . . . Freedom of the Individual and Freedom of Industry.

1. Freedom of the Individual means . . .

Freedom of speech and worship. Freedom to progress faster by working harder, doing more. Freedom to save and venture money, time, or labor, for the sake of greater gain. Freedom to do and dare, to seek the highest rewards—or, for that matter, freedom to refrain from doing those things.

2. Freedom of Industry means . . .

Freedom of the thrifty to invest in business. Freedom to seek a fair profit—and to create an enterprise that gives labor more jobs at better wages. Freedom of business to operate under the management of men selected by merit.

It also means freedom to plan, to employ research and invention, to stimulate and supply new wants, to lower costs of production, to do as Free Enterprise has done in raising living standards in the United States higher than those of any other country in the world.

These are the fundamental freedoms — born with America—which have nurtured the American Spirit—given our country its unmatched development. It is that spirit which sustained Robert Jenkins through his long career, and now sustains his seven sons at their wartime posts. Those seven sons are fighting now to maintain those freedoms and all the things for which they stand . . . fighting for all the things we, too, at home must keep alive.

The L&N, like other railroads which share in today's wartime marvel of transportation, is a product of the American Spirit. Because of this Spirit, the Old Reliable has been able to help mightily in the South's development; aiding alike the merchant, the miner, the farmer, the manufacturer, and (far from least) the laborer; contributing materially in taxes to fine schools, good roads and other public services; serving now the cause of victory for all America.

W. M. S. CIRCLE NEWS

Mrs. Joe Higgins was hostess to the Georgia Ogburn Circle on March 22. The business session was presided over by the circle chairman, Mrs. Edwin Mullins. Reports were made.

On April 12 a new study course, "Guide for Community Missions," will begin under the leadership of the Mission Study chairman, Mrs. Propst. Plans were made for the service on next Monday when a Baptist Missionary from China, Miss Irene Jeffers, will speak. Miss Jeffers returned to the United States on the Gripsholm and is a forceful speaker. The public is invited to this meeting.

Mrs. Higgins served refreshments to Mrs. Ed Mullins, Mrs. W. C. Golden, Mrs. Ed Propst, Mrs. Horsley White, Mrs. Earl Reeves and Mrs. Reese Mullins.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mrs. Ed Wagner wishes to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of her dauhter, Mary Niel Smith, to Fred Elliot of Opelika, Ala. The wedding to be on March 31.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bowden have returned to their home in South Clanton from Eufaula where they were called last week because of the illness and death of the former's mother, Mrs. N. A. Bowden. She was 67 years of age, March 8th, and died on March 18th. Her health had been bad for the past year. She is survived by eight children, four sons and four daughters and 12 grandchildren. Funeral services were held Sunday at Eufaula.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy during the illness and death of our dear wife and mother. Especially do we thank the Spigener Funeral Home and the doctors and nurses of the Central Alabama Hospital. May God's richest blessing be on each and every one.—The husband, A. L. Chandler, and Family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to those who were so kind and helpful during the sudden illness and death of our darling little son and brother, William Lawrence Mims. He was laid to rest at Liberty Hill Cemetery. He is survived by his mother and father, four sisters and four brothers. We also thank Rev. Homer Carroll and Dr. Gragg.—His sister, Mrs. Jimmie Mims.

Circle No. 2 of Baptist Church met Monday afternoon, March 22, at the home of Mrs. J. L. Teel. The meeting was called to order by the circle charman, Mrs. John T. Ellis. The devotional was given by Mrs. Billingsley. Then Mrs. J. L. Teel taught the book on Community Missions which was very impressive.

Mrs. John Mullins will teach on the book at our next meeting. Then the business was taken up on different phases. After the program was over we enjoyed a social hour. The meeting closed by repeating Mispah.—Mrs. A. D. Martin, Sec.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

On Friday evening the Philomathic Club presented the one-act play, "Squaring it with the Boss," by J. C. McMullen, and the Pushmataha Club followed it with "The Pampered Darling," by Beatrice H. McNeil. Both plays were amusing and greatly enjoyed by the audience. The point for perfect attendance was won by the Pushmatahas, and the judges gave the award for merit in performance also to the Pushmatahas.

The regular monthly meetings of the Philomathic and Pushmataha Clubs will be held on Friday, March 26th, during the seventh period. These are open only to members, for whom interesting programs have been planned.

The Christian Endeavor meeting held in the Congregational Church last Sunday evening was led by Ed Barham. His topic was "How Jesus Met Persinal Defeat." Those who took part on the program were: Lillian Peal, Ann Collins, Betty Atkinson, Charlene Williams, Barbara Renfroe, Catherine Henley, Loretta Peterson, Oran Marcus, Robert Milner, Ralph Parker, Jack Renfroe and Leslie Duke.

It is less than two weeks now to the Christian Life Conference to be held at Thorsby Institute on April 2 and 4. If you can attend, please notify the secretary, Mable Wood, Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Alabama, of your plans, time of arrival and number of group. The expense is but seventy-five cents, or the equivalent in produce. Among the speakers are to be the Rev. Howard Kester, secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen; Dr. Hotalen, secretary of the Alabama Temperance Alliance, and Mrs. Edythe Saylor, head of the Physical Education Department at Alabama College at Montevallo.

Come On Out And Watch 'Em Fly At Gragg Field

OUR LOCAL PILOT STILL FLYING DR. I. Q.

Mr. Chas. Wade flew the big five-passenger Waco to Mobile, Ala., accompanied by Mr. B. P. Autry (owner), president American Life Insurance Co., of Birmingham, and Mr. Jimmy McClain (Dr. I. Q. of Radio), where Mr. McClain had an engagement at the Mobile Army base Friday night. They were due back in Clanton Saturday morning but were grounded there until Sunday noon on account of bad weather, arriving in Clanton at 2:00 p.m. en route back to Birmingham where Dr. I. Q.. made his regular radio broadcast Monday night.

Mr. Bruce Shaw of Calera flew to Birmingham and back Friday.

Mr. Delphin Popwell flew his Luscomb in from Birmingham for a short stop Friday.

Mr. John Worland of Indianapolis, Ind., flew in Saturday in a Luscomb. Mr. Worland's plane will be hangered here for several days as he is in and around Selma looking over some of the Back Belt country.

Mr. Leo Williams, test pilot of Maxwell Field, flew the Commandair of Lieutenant Colonel Reese (which is based here) to Tuskegee Airport for a hundred hour check, as all planes must have after having been flown a hundred hours.

There was less flying on the field here Sunday than has ever been noticed due to bad weather, so you can look out for some real flying soon as the weather gets pretty. Those boys sure hate to get behind with their flying, as some can notice by the Army activities on the feld at the present. The field has been full of Army planes for the last two days. Come out and watch 'em fly.

Bankhead Forest Gobbler Hunters To Have 10 Days

While the spring wild turkey hunting season is now in full blast in open areas of the State, it will not open until April 1 in the Black Warrior wildlife management area of the Bankhead National Forest, according to Chief Ben C. Morgan, of the Game, Fish and Seafoods Division, Alabama Department of Conservation. A 10-day season, the first in several years, will close April 10 in that North Alabama wild turkey stronghold. The hunt will be conducted under the joint supervision of the Game, Fish and Seafoods Division and the United States Forest Service.

NEGRO HEALTH WEEK APRIL 4th THROUGH 11th

The Chilton County Health Department has been supplied with printed material for use in the 29th annual observance of National Negro Health Week, April 4-11, according to announcement today by Dr Douglas L. Cannon, Director of the State Health Department's Bureau of County Health work.

The special objective of this year's observance, Dr. Cannon said, is "Health on the Home Front . . . Victory on the War Front."

The annual observance of National Negro Health Week is the outgrowth of a movement begun by Dr. Booker T. Washington, Negro educator, and for many years president of Alabama's famed Tuskegee Institute. The week chosen for this observance is always the Sunday-through-Sunday period which includes his birthday, April 5.

TURN IT DOWN
After Liquids Start
Boiling and Your Electric Range Burners
Should Last Longer

WHEN cooking liquids reach 212° temperature the water vaporizes into steam. Increasing the heat to make them "boil faster" therefore gains nothing more than causing the liquids to evaporate faster.

If after liquids begin boiling you will turn the switch on your electric range to "low" or "medium," they will continue to boil and cook just as satisfactorily as they would were you to finish the job on "high." Turning the switch to "low" not only saves current for you but eliminates some of the wear on your electric range burners.

Another cooking hint: Don't use soda with green vegetables to retain the green color; it will do that, but it will also drive off some of the vitamins.

It's not too late to make your contribution to the Red Cross.

In Russia

Kharkov had fallen once more to the Nazis and still they pushed eastward. This was the story from the Ukraine sector of the broad Russian front. In another important sector, further to the north, the Russians were having the better of it as their four-pronged offensive swept swiftly through the area around Smolensk.

This and the fighting around the anchor point of Orel were more immediately important to the Russian cause than what happened at Kharkov. For Orel serves as the turning point between the southern and central fronts. Hitler could ill afford to lose this base.

While Russian sources admitted that Kharkov was important they also pointed out that a strong defense line had been established beyond the city and further claimed that Hitler's troops found nothing but dead Germans on the city's streets when they took it. Military experts reasoned that Hitler had thrust about 25 fresh divisions into his drive for that point. Moscow said that the reason Germany wanted the city was to atone for the great losses suffered by the Nazis at Stalingrad in midwinter.

TUNISIA:
Aerial Action

Bad weather which has slowed ground activity in Tunisia has been no barrier to the growing Allied Air force.

As a prelude to General Montgomery's expected push against Marshal Rommel, Allied planes have been pounding the Mareth line. An elaborate system of fortifications hewed into the mountains, this line stands between the bulk of the opposing armies.

After a month of offensive operations against the American and British lines in central and north Tunisia, Rommel has pulled in his wings. Although the Allies restored much of their original position, they have concentrated their effort on softening up the enemy from the air.

Allied air operations have been particularly extensive over Sicily. American and British bombers have been pounding the great Axis base at Palermo. Prosinone and Pozzallo were the latest Sicilian centers hit.

MORE TIRES:
On April 1

Liberalizing tire rationing for the second time, Price Administrator Prentiss Brown expressed the belief that all motorists would be able to keep their cars on the road as the result of the release of additional tires by Rubber Administrator William Jeffers.

Effective April 1, grade 2 tires will be available to drivers with gasoline mileage allowances exceeding 240 miles a month. This includes most B, C and T card holders. Motorists eligible for 560 or more miles will be allowed a limited number of grade 1 tires, the highest grade casing. However, all must be obtained with certificates issued by local ration boards.

These changes do not affect A card holders, who are eligible for used or recapped casings. Most of the rationing formalities on recapped tires have been removed by Brown.

SKIP-YEAR TAX:
Battle Lines Drawn

When House Democratic leaders decided to support a tax collection system, without abatement, as approved by the ways and means committee, their action presaged a pay-as-you-go tax battle which may reverberate in the 1944 political campaign.

Party lines in the house were well defined, for the most part. Republican leaders were lined up for and Democrats against the Ruml plan to skip an entire income tax year. However, there was some cause for worry among opponents of the skip-a-year proposal. In addition to the powerful Republican membership which had lined up for abatement, some Democrats indicated they would vote with the Republicans.

THUNDER:
Over Germany

Since the RAF staged its first colossal 1,000 plane bombing of Cologne last spring, Nazi industrial and communications centers in both Germany and the occupied countries have been subjected to concentrated pounding from the air. Out of 500 bombers, 475 returned after the last shattering attack on Essen.

Railroad lines and the big automotive center of Rouen have been the principal targets in France. The extensive system of canals has been bombed in Holland and Belgium. And in Germany, the great naval base at Wilhelmshaven, the big port of Hamburg, the steel industries of the Ruhr, and the engine factories of Dusseldorf and Nuremberg have been steadily plastered.

In flights into the interior, the RAF has been using giant Lancasters, Halifaxes and Stirlings, which carry the devastating block busters in their bomb racks. Wellingtons have headlined in the bombing and strafing attacks on communications centers.

The great raids, with hundreds of planes participating on a daily schedule, are believed to have caused considerable damage to communications which the Nazis will need to shift troops and supplies to meet an Allied invasion. German war industry appears to have been badly crippled. But with the American air force joining in the attacks in increasing numbers, raids to date may have been only a good beginning.

FARM PLAN:
From Cornbelt

The importance of a strong home front—especially in the food sector—was re-emphasized when officials of 12 cornbelt states concluded a series of meetings to offset what former President Herbert Hoover calls "symptoms of a dangerously degenerating agriculture."

Governors of eight states and high ranking officials of four others drafted a series of recommendations that, among other things, would:

Recognize farming as an essential war industry; release immediately all present stock of farm machinery now in the hands of leaders or distributors and provide sufficient material for completion of other units not now finished; grant selective service deferment for "all experienced labor essential to farm production" and "terminate the present unsatisfactory system" which sends farm machinery where "it is not adapted."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

RATION: Food ration points on blue stamps in April will remain at 48.

• • •

DEEP WATER: Representative William Rowan of Chicago has prepared a resolution asking for the deepening of the Illinois waterway and Mississippi river to 12 feet to permit major navigation from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

LOOK PRETTY: To cut absenteeism among women workers employed seven days a week and eight hours a day, the N. A. Woodworth company of Detroit has installed a beauty shop in the plant. Furnished in the modern manner, the shop has all of the latest beauty equipment and charges the regular prices. Woodworth employs approximately 3,000 women

FLARE-UP:
In France

Hopeful eyes turned for several days on the high mountain passes near the French-Swiss frontier where large numbers of French patriots had mobilized to launch guerrilla warfare against Italian and German troops. For the most these forces consisted of young Frenchmen who were being recruited for forced labor inside Germany.

First reports from Zurich and Berne, Switzerland, indicated that British RAF planes were dropping guns and ammunition to the men waiting in the Alps. German sources soon claimed that many of the men were deserting because of the lack of such supplies. This claim was substantiated by neutral reports.

Much support and advice to the movement was given by the Algiers radio. This source claimed that Italian troops in the area were refusing to help pry the patriots loose from their positions.

An ultimatum had been issued by the Germans before the fighting began but the French declined it saying that they were ready to fight through to the end.

While non-Axis nations were cheered by the news of the resistance there was little hope that the uprising could spread far.

DINNER TABLE:
And Points

While American housewives were studying what the effects of the rationing of meat, canned fish, butter, cheese and edible fats would be on their family diets, the Office of Price Administration announced that April points for processed foods would be same as in March—a total of 48 per person. These would be the points on the blue stamps lettered D, E and F in war ration book No. 2.

RATION DATES

March 29—First day for rationing of meats, canned fish, butter, cheese, edible fats and oils.

March 31—Final date for first inspection of passenger car tires for "A" card holders and motorcycles; last day on which A, B and C stamps in war ration book 2 may be used. (Stamps of second ration period may be used from March 25.)

April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.

May 31—Last day for use of stamp No. 12, good for five pounds of sugar.

June 15—Last valid date for stamp No. 17, good for one pair of shoes.

September 30—Expiration date for Period 5 fuel-oil coupons.

In announcing the meat rationing, government officials were careful to point out that while the total amount to be consumed by the nation would be cut 12 to 15 per cent, there would still be enough meat to allow healthy diets for U. S. citizens.

Meanwhile the department of labor reported that the average increase in food costs throughout the nation during the past month had been 0.5 per cent.

SECRET AIRFIELDS:
Held Dutch Harbor

The story behind Japan's failure to seize Dutch Harbor, the navy's Alaskan stronghold, is due largely to the "existence" of two imaginary salmon packing companies. The facts have just been revealed.

The two packing firms were no more than covers for one of the Alaska defense command's most remarkable jobs—the secret construction of two airfields to guard Dutch Harbor. When the Japs approached the naval base last June 3 (with two carriers, three cruisers, eight destroyers and four transports—perhaps as strong as the forces which struck at Pearl Harbor) they understood there was no airfield within 800 miles of Dutch Harbor.

In the midst of their assault the Japs found themselves hit from behind by land based planes and bombed and torpedoed by land based planes. Their spy work—so successful at Pearl Harbor—had failed.

LITTLE STEEL:
Formula Fades

A source of comfort to almost every labor union official is the fact that the Little Steel formula is fast disappearing as a factor in wage increases approved by the War Labor board. The bulk of wage adjustments now is based on "inequalities."

Reason for the disappearance of the much-debated formula is that a majority of employees already have received the 15 per cent general increase permitted by the formula as a cost-of-living adjustment. WLB officials state that scarcely any important branches of industry have not raised wages at least that much since January 1, 1941.

JAP FORCES:
Above Australia

Word from Allied headquarters in the South Pacific indicated that Japan's invasion forces appeared shifting to the ring of islands north of Australia.

This new menace was emphasized when 49 enemy planes—25 bombers and 24 fighters—attacked Port Darwin in Australia. It was one of the heaviest raids in months, although the Japs were driven off with only slight damage and casualties.

ON THE first day of shooting for "Mrs. Miniver" Greer Garson was knocked down in a street scene by a boy on a bicycle. On the first day for "Madame Curie," she was knocked down by a camera perambulator. "Maybe it's a good omen," said she. "But I hope I never start a picture in a scene with a locomotive!" Nobody was surprised when "Mrs. Miniver" got the Academy Award for the best picture of 1942; it was especially good news to Major William Wyler, who directed—he recently directed the filming of the bombing of the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven.

Nan Wynn, the popular radio, night club and motion picture singer, has been placed under long-term contract by Columbia, and will get a star build-up. She's already been given the top role in the new musical, "Rhapsody in A Flat."

An actual attack by British Coastal Command planes on Nazi raiders in northern waters is shown in "Coastal Command," the factual film released by RKO. It was made by the producers of "Target for Tonight," the British navy co-operating.

⁂

If you think you're busy, consider Anna Lee, one of the many stars of "Forever and a Day." While working in "Commandos Strike at Dawn" she turned up at the RKO studios at 10 every night and worked till past midnight in "Forever and a Day"—also managed her house and family. The only stipulation she made was that after finishing her day's work she must have time off to put her two babies to bed before starting her swing shift at RKO.

⁂

Robert Haymes also got a Columbia break. With time for only one more film before being inducted into the army, he was removed from the lead of "Doughboys in Ireland"—and replaced by Kenny Baker—and assigned to the romantic lead in "Two Senoritas From Chicago," the two senoritas being those two very lovely ladies, Jinx Falkenburg and Joan Davis!

⁂

That Charles Boyer production, so badly titled "Flesh and Fantasy," has a new and better title, "For All We Know." Robert Cummings and Betty Field have been given the romantic leads in the fourth and final sequence.

New Yorkers have learned that the place to be caught during a blackout is a radio studio—instead of turning their guests loose to wait in the corridors, the stars turn to and put on a show. Burns and Allen, the "Duffy's Tavern" folks and the members of "The Aldrich Family" can all give a superb extemporaneous show when the sirens scream.

⁂

A stranger in Culver City might think that Leo the Lion has turned prize fight promoter. Five big name boxers are working there. Freddy Steele, ex-middleweight kingpin, has been coaching Richard Carlson for "The Man Down Under"; Maxie Rosenbloom's working in "Right About Face," as are Lou Nova and Jack Roper; Johnny Indrissano, former lightweight threat, now a referee, is technical adviser.

⁂

So far Jean Gabin's American pictures haven't been up to the standard of the French ones that made him famous. But it looks as if he might remedy that situation this summer; he's obtained his release from 20th Century-Fox and will be starred by RKO in a picture to be written and produced by Dudley Nichols, and directed by Jean Renoir, which looks like a perfect combination.

Gets Tobacco, Not Ultimatums, From Stalin, to Smoke

NEW YORK.—About 15 years ago a British officer was killed in Egypt and Sir Archibald Clark Kerr got mighty tough with Egyptian officialdom. Too tough! Salving hurt feelings, London had to pretend to take Sir Archibald down a peg. He was withdrawn from the main current of British diplomacy and set to drift in South American backwaters. The spanked boy came back after a time unabashed and with a Chilean wife, Maria Teresa Diaz Salas. It was a late marriage. Sir Archibald is 60 years old now. But along with his admitted toughness it has helped keep him out in front ever since.

Pulling these days on the increasingly tangled problem of Russo - British relations, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr has one great asset. He is more friendly with Stalin than any British ambassador before him. Kremlin Joe sends him good Russian tobacco where previous plenipotentiaries got semi-ultimatums to put in their pipes and smoke.

The Ambassador was educated privately, but his sheltered start doesn't seem to have handicapped him. He got into the diplomatic service 35 years ago and has represented Britain in Sweden, Irak, Egypt, Morocco and, as noted, in South America, taking time out for a stretch with the Scots Guards back in 1918. Before he went to Russia he had the China assignment, where he said a good word for this country off and on because he is a notable friend of the United States.

That All May Fly With Ease, Safety, Dr. Dryden Labors

WHEN men like Dr. Huge L. Dryden talk of a near future in which any man may fly through the air with the greatest of ease and only a rocking chair risk, they turn the fancies of "Looking Backward" into facts, just about. The doctor, speaking from the eminence of the presidency of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, argues that even now the safest way to make a long journey is by air.

He speaks with nearly youthful enthusiasm. He is only 43, a smooth-faced thinker whose forehead tapers, whose chin comes to a point; a man his friends can call a pleasant-looking egg and mean it two ways.

Pocomoke City, off the salty Chesapeake, would get into print seldom if he hadn't been born there, and he adds luster even to Johns Hopkins university which gave him a PH. D. He is a Marylander who knew early what he wanted. Before he finished his schooling he had hired out to the Federal Bureau of Standards and he has been with it ever since. He can unravel the snarls of aerodynamics and hydrodynamics into simple speed and performance almost before Boeing can set up a production line.

Whenever he hasn't anything better to do he builds another wind tunnel, because he always has a few new notions to try out. Wind tunnels, he says, save life, time and cash for any man trying to build the foolproof airplane of the future. It was wind tunnel experiments which earned him the Reed award for research in aeronautics three years back.

He's Legal (Often 'Lethal) Minuteman For Herr Hitler

DR. OTTO GEORG THIERACK doesn't exactly say with the great Louis of France that he is the law, but he stands all primed to ding up any needed statute that isn't already on the Reich's books. At this time he warns, in Cologne, that justice must knuckle down before the policy of the state.

His status he had declared earlier when he said, "Every Reich judge may call on me when he feels compelled to render a decision not compatible with real life. I shall then provide him with the law he needs." Write one on the spot, if necessary.

For six months now Thierack has been Nazi minister for justice. He has the power of life and death and the concentration camp. No one may appeal his decisions. Only Hitler may revoke them.

Dresden, in placid Saxony, is his birthplace. He must have distilled a queer elixir from the town's china and chocolates, cigarettes and postcards, to become the man he is.

Some 20 years ago he was the minister of justice just for the Duchy of Saxony. But that was before he caught onto the Hitler bandwagon. Some time later, and this was in the Nazi era, he was picked to be vice-minister of the supreme court at Leipzig. Then he began to train directly for his present post. It was not long before he was appointed president of the People's court. This court tried cases involving offenses committed against the state. And there was no appeal from its verdicts, either. The sessions were always held in utmost secrecy.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. After Pearl Harbor, Lieut. Bulkeley orders Lieut. Kelly to take three of the boats to Bataan, where they set up headquarters. Kelly has a badly gashed finger, but doesn't dare take time to go to the hospital, as things are moving fast. During the first big air raid the PT boats shot down three Jap dive bombers. Kelly is speaking.

CHAPTER III

"When Bulkeley got back he took one look at me and ordered me to the hospital at Corregidor. But when we got there they told us that beautiful big modern one-thousand-bed hospital had been abandoned. There it was, I don't know how much it had cost, as useless to us as a Buddhist monastery. The patients had all been moved down into one hundred beds in one of the tunnels in the Rock. I wasn't so delirious that I couldn't figure out why. Because with no aircraft or anti-aircraft protection, that big expensive topside hospital was just an unprotected target.

"The next I remember was down in the tunnel in the army hospital under Corregidor, the army doctor asking me what treatment I'd had as he cut the shirt off my back—it wouldn't come off over my hand any more.

"But the thing that impressed me most—even then—was the army nurses. There were fourteen of them on the Rock, and remember, I hadn't talked to a white woman since we sailed from the States. Heretofore, I hadn't paid much attention to women, but somehow the war and everything made a big difference.

"Or maybe it was Peggy herself, because she was a very cute kid. A brunette about medium height and very trim, but mostly it was her green eyes, I guess, and a cute way she had of telling you very firmly what you had to do, so that you grinned, but just the same you did it. She started right in bossing me around while she helped cut off my shirt.

"The whole army was listening in," said Bulkeley. "Don Bell, that Manila radio announcer who they say was shot by the Japs the first day they entered the city, was always encouraging. And even more so was KGEI from the American west coast, telling us we wouldn't be forgotten, that the people knew we were putting up a magnificent fight."

"It came at eleven at night," Bulkeley went on. "I had my three boats out there by 11:30. Funny thing, that old ship had been an aircraft carrier in the battle of Jutland—first boat ever to launch a plane in actual battle. She survives the whole German Imperial fleet and more than twenty years later ends up on an American mine halfway round the world.

"When we got there, survivors were so thick we didn't have to zigzag to pick them up—just went straight ahead and we got all we could handle, although there were cries coming out of the darkness all around. Finally our shoulders got so weak pulling them up the sea ladder that we couldn't lift them. So we'd throw lines out into the dark—it was like casting for trout—and haul them back with a dozen people hanging on. We'd just pull them on in—scraping off a few ears, and now and then a nose and plenty of skin, on the side of our boat—but they were drowning every minute and it was the only way. Our boat managed to rescue as many as 196. Had 'em lying and standing every place.

"But the queerest thing came at the end. The cries out in the darkness had almost stopped, and we were cruising for the crumbs when suddenly, out over the water, I heard someone whistling a tune! I couldn't believe it. But we changed course, and presently came alongside an aviator. He'd been blown way out there along with three life belts. He'd put one of them under his feet, another under his head like a pillow, and the third under his behind. Had his hands comfortably folded on his stomach. He thanked us, said he couldn't swim, so he'd been whistling just to kill time until someone came along. Asked if there was anything he could do. That guy had plenty guts.

"Six of the survivors died before we could land them—exposure and burns."

"They began bringing them into my hospital before dawn," said Kelly. "One of them was a Filipino boy who'd been second engineer. He'd been burned all over except where his shorts had been, and he screamed horribly when they sprayed his burns. They'd put him in the stiff wagon, but an army doctor felt his pulse and said, 'Hell, that man's not dead,' so they sent him here. It hurt so bad to touch him when they had to turn him for spraying that he finally persuaded the nurses to lift him by the hair on his head.

"Meanwhile gloomy talk was getting me worried about the whole picture, and the next day the skipper here came in to see me—" said Lieut. R. B. Kelly; "they'd sent him over on courier duty. He was looking pretty grim. When I asked him about these rumors concerning the air corps, he said it had practically been annihilated—we only had six P-40's left, and that was why everything was going to hell. The Japs had wiped out Clark and Nichols Fields and also Iba, except for a few scattered planes. Also they had got seven of the navy's fourteen PBY's—clipped them off neatly when they had landed for gas. One of them had been the navy plane which hit Colin Kelly's battleship before he finally got it.

"Yet I couldn't see how they had done it, until a few days later when they began moving patients from the Manila hospital (it was the forerunner of evacuation, although we didn't guess that yet) into Corregidor. In the cot on my left was a Texas kid, a pilot from Clark Field. On the other side was an Ohio pilot from Iba. Texas was pretty sick, so the first night I shot the breeze with the Ohio boy. He said he'd been shot down the second day of the war. His squadron had been circling, looking for Jap planes which the listening devices had picked up out at sea, heading in from the direction of Formosa. They'd been up all morning, were almost out of gas, so decided to land and refuel. The first plane came in all right, but the second overshot the field. His plane was the third, and he said as he put his wheels on the ground a load of bombs crashed down out of the clouds onto the other end of the field. Of course he poured the soup into her and took off. He tried to gain altitude and headed for Nichols Field, when suddenly a flight of Jap fighters popped out of the clouds. He turned and headed right for the center of it, but when he pressed the button only one of his six guns would work—the rest were jammed. He said don't ask him why—ask the guys who designed them or installed them or serviced them. His job was just to press the button, and he'd done that. There he was with two Zeros on his tail, filling him full of holes—they were explosive bullets, too; he had gashes all over where he'd been nicked. He said he dived into a near-by cloud and managed to shake them, but then his motor began to sputter—had been almost out of gas when the attack started, and the Jap bullets in his tanks had spilled the rest. So he headed her nose down out of the cloud, and as luck would have it spotted an emergency field. But his wing tip hit a tree and the plane cracked up, mashing in all the bones on the right side of his face. He'd spent a week in a native hospital on a bamboo bunk without the bones set, and now he could only mumble to me out of the left corner of his mouth.

"Our coastal batteries were having to fall back."

"The next day Tex on the other side told me his story. He was also a fighter pilot and his squadron had been at Clark Field—flying all morning. They'd come down to gas the planes, and the pilots were sitting around on the wings or in their cockpits, waiting for orders to take off, when suddenly there was a big bang and the plane he was sitting in seemed to jump about forty feet in the air, and then pancaked back with its wings folded over the cockpit. The Japs had popped out of a cloud and let them have it. He crawled out unscratched, but he said for half an hour everything was in the wildest confusion—the Japs circling above, blowing those grounded planes around like popcorn in a hot skillet.

"The dope on the listening devices seemed to be, he said, that they had picked up the Japs a hundred miles at sea, followed them in all right, but then lost when they were fifteen miles off the coast.

"But somebody decided the Japs must be heading for Baguio, and they were sitting there, all gassed up, waiting word to take off and intercept the Japs before they got to Baguio. Whereas, as a matter of fact, the Japs were perched in a cloud right over their own field, waiting to let them have it.

"He said after the bombing they'd managed to piece together out of the wreckage about ten per cent of the planes they'd originally had. A week later he'd cracked up landing on a soft spot on the field—a bomb crater that hadn't been properly filled—and here he was.

"The next time the skipper here dropped in on me, he said that was the dope he was getting—that we had only six P-40's left. Soon it got down to two; we called 'em the Phantom and the Lone Ranger.

"And I said, 'My God, what's going to happen to us?' "

"I told him I didn't know," said Bulkeley, "but that I'd been talking to the Admiral, who'd said that we couldn't possibly hope to hold the Philippine Islands, that Singapore and Hong Kong would fall too, unless help arrived—and soon. And probably the Dutch East Indies."

"Well, that floored me," said Kelly. "So I asked him how they were going to use the MTB's—wouldn't they let us go out on any offensive missions? He said he'd been trying to get the Admiral to let him go to Lingayen Gulf on a raid. Eighty Jap transports were up there landing troops, and our coastal batteries were having to fall back because of Jap air superiority—Jap fighters diving on the batteries and machine-gunning them until no one could take it.

"Then I asked the skipper how the infantry was holding. 'Not worth a damn,' he said. 'The strafing is just cutting them to ribbons. Not only that, but the Japs are landing tanks—a hell of a lot of automatic weapons which are just what we need and haven't got.' By the time he left, I was as low as he was.

"That night Peggy, who was on night duty, got a few minutes off about one o'clock to come in and shoot the breeze with me. She'd been picking up a lot of stuff, and she said a bunch of our tank-corps boys had just been brought in. She told me what they'd been telling her, and finally said she guessed it wouldn't hurt if I went in and lay down for half an hour on an empty bunk next to them, so I could hear it myself.

"They'd walked two hundred kilometers barefoot. Four tankloads of them had been sent in to head off a Jap landing near Batangas—they were to go ahead of four columns of infantry and pave the way for retaking a little fishing village held by a small Jap force.

"The boys said their major had assured them the Japs had nothing bigger than 50-caliber machine guns—of course their armor would stop that. So they started on in, when all of a sudden—Bam! The Japs had waited until they got within good range, and then opened up with an anti-tank gun which knocked the doors off the lead tank, and then, because the road was too narrow for the rest to turn around on, they knocked the treads off all the others except one.

" 'Well, then what did you do?' I asked the kids.

" 'Fired about two hundred rounds of 50-caliber and four rounds of 37-millimeter cannon.'

" 'Which way were you shooting?'

" 'Every which way. You see, it all happened so fast we couldn't tell where the Jap fire was coming from. At the end of five minutes, three of those tanks ended up in the rice paddy—they were fourteen-ton light tanks—two of them with the doors blown off, and in one of these, the Jap machine-gun fire had cut the legs off the lieutenant in command. The others were riddled with holes. Our tank was the only one that wasn't hurt.'

" 'So what did you do?'

" 'Tried to turn it around and get the hell out of there. But the road was too narrow, and then the tank got stuck in reverse, and ended up on its side in the rice paddy.'

" 'What did the infantry do?'

" 'Ran like rabbits.'

" 'Didn't they have any guns?'

" 'Only rifles—not a machine gun in the crowd. Maybe they didn't have anything else to give them, but anyway the major said all they would find up there was rifles, and if there were any Jap machine guns, the tanks would deal with that. So there they were, being cut to ribbons by concealed machine-gun fire, and nothing else to do but get for cover.'

" 'Didn't all this—sending those tanks into a trap without scouting ahead—seem like a damn-fool maneuver to you?' I asked him.

" 'Well,' the kid said, 'the major and the lieutenant had worked out the same maneuver at armored school back in the States. It had worked there; they thought it was pretty good.'

"So I asked the kid why he thought it hadn't worked this time.

" 'Maybe because the Japs were too clever in hiding their anti-tank guns and too good shots. They knocked the treads and doors off most of the tanks before they had time to do anything. And then, unlike the roads back in the States, these were narrow native roads, with rice paddies on both sides—you couldn't maneuver.'

Wickard Is Made Target Of Farm Policy Critics

Attack on Agriculture Chief Seen as a Continuation of Farm Bureau Assault on Farm Security Administration.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

You will read in your favorite newspaper that congress is out to "get" Secretary of Agriculture Wickard. The reason being offered is: "There's going to be a food shortage and he's responsible." That isn't the half of it.

In the first place, the folks who have been leaning back with their feet on the Washington cracker-barrel and watching administrations, wars and panics come and go, aren't taking these fiery debates, these charges and counter-charges too seriously.

The fight in congress today on the surface is the farm bureau, the big farmer (who isn't so big in many cases) versus Wickard. One layer below the surface, you'll hear it called the fight of the extension services against the Farm Security administration. Back in the cracker-barrel corner it's just the fight against the administration and what's left of the New Deal.

Criticism 'Political'

One of these old timers shifted his stogie, took down his feet and said to me: "This is just politics. The idea is that 1944 is coming up and if you are an honest 'out' you've got to do all you can to discredit the 'ins.' I think Wickard will weather the storm. The Farm bureau people have nothing against him except as a symbol of the administration. He's an old farm bureau man himself."

"But," I interjected, "what about the war effort, what about hiking up the farm prices and smashing the price ceilings? You can't give the farmers higher prices without having to boost wages."

My friend caressed his stogie and smiled. "Don't worry," he said, "nobody is going to do anything in the long run that will interfere with war plans. But in a political fight, everybody leans as far out of the tree as he can without falling. Everybody says the other fellow is playing politics — but everybody plays the game just the same."

What is this "extension service" versus Farm Security fight? Well, it goes back a long way.

In the old days, the extension service, the idea of the "county agents" was started by commercial organizations which wanted to improve farm prosperity so they could sell more city goods. Later, the system was financed by the states with the help of federal grants. But the states dominated. Then the American Farm Bureau federation was formed, officially in 1920.

The organization pushed certain ideas for attacking surpluses not very different from what the AAA developed later. As the farm problem grew worse, a farm conference was called in Washington in 1932. This group prepared a bill containing many features similar to those finally incorporated into the Agricultural Adjustment act.

Then came the first friction between the farm bureau and the administration. There was a good deal of politics in that, too. It was a struggle between the AAA representatives in the field and the state set-ups.

Farmers' Union Formed

Later, the Farmers Union came into the picture. It was started among the low income farmers in Texas. It was the left wing of Agriculture and to the other farm groups, it was "pink." It had the strong backing of Mrs. Roosevelt; its policies were reflected by the Farm Security administration, a rival of the more conservative Farm Credit administration which ministered to the financial ills of the bigger farmers. The friction has never ceased.

A blow-up came when Wickard started his food administration. As an old farm bureau man, he always leaned over backward in an effort not to be prejudiced against Farm Security. Also, as a cabinet member, he couldn't stray too far from White House preachments. So he named Parisius, a Farm Security man, to head up his food conservation machinery and immediately a nest of hornets was loose. There was no choice. It was a question of making a left turn against traffic. Parisius had to go.

Wickard was accused of turning right by one group but that didn't save him from the wrath of those opposed to the administration. Nor did his incentive payment policy which would not help the Democrat cotton raisers in the South nor the Republican wheat raisers in the north since what we don't need to feed America today is more wheat or more cotton.

So the storm rages. Farm Security will probably be the burnt offering as anything with even a faintly pink complexion is a red flag to congress.

Gardens Nothing New; They Were Old Treat

You've heard the expression: "he ain't what he usta be and what's more, he never wuz."

In a number of ways, these United States of ours ain't what they used to be—but they WUZ!

Take these victory gardens.

My goodness! It was long after we moved into town (population 20,000) that I had my real private gardening experience. Back on Spruce street, of course, there was a whole orchard and the garden was so big, it was ploughed. But big or little, the backyard could produce plenty for mother to "put up" (we never called it "canning"), everything from tomatoes and corn and those cucumbers—'what memories the name conjures up'—to those wonderful watermelon pickles.

I was talking with another old-timer, and he isn't so old either, about his little Kansas town. He said he couldn't remember anybody who didn't have a garden; or had milk delivered to the doorstep either.

When the onions and the radishes stuck their sprouts up, I used to watch them with an eagle eye hoping I would be able to deliver a luscious bunch of them before the corner grocer had his somewhat wilted product to display. Of course, I never could beat him by much and by the time the fat tomatoes were asking for a piece of lath to keep their chins out of the dirt, all the neighbors had them too. But that didn't matter. Came the day when the kitchen was redolent with entrancing odors and the womenfolk's aprons were stained red as a victorious banner, and when evening fell, the mason jars were cooling in the pantry before they were stored in the cool cellar.

In those days, about the only time a can opener was used was when somebody broached a Sunday evening can of sardines as a special treat to go along with the fudge (made in a chafing dish if you were a little doggy) and flavored with songs around the piano to mandolin obligato.

And what about the dry throats? No ice cubes. No cocktail shakers. Perhaps a bottle of raspberry shrub from the top shelf from the preserves closet—a rich purple liquid which had been squeezed through a cheese cloth bag with strong and loving hands, the fat berries inside plucked from those sprawling bushes along the back fence.

What good things came out of the backyard garden by way of the fruit jars and the jelly glasses! Can you forget the quinces, smooth and shiny and hard that hung on the gnarled tree, harsh fruit that mysteriously turned into a delightful pink delicacy, which spread over a crisp cracker like a benediction.

Drill Congressmen

On Tuesday, March 2, 1943, there appeared for the first time in the history of America, the following item in the Congressional Record, the journal of day to day happenings of congress:

RECESS

THE SPEAKER. Pursuant to the inherent power lodged in the Presiding Officer in case of emergency, the Chair declares this House in recess subject to the call of the Chair for the purpose of participating in a practice air-raid drill. The alarm has sounded. Members will leave the Chamber as rapidly as possible, and the galleries will be cleared.

Accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess, subject to the call of the Speaker.

AFTER RECESS

At 3 o'clock and 4 minutes p. m., the House was called to order by the Speaker.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Japanese officials have decided to establish six more training centers to meet present demands for 80,000 brides for Jap colonists in occupied Manchuria. As recorded by the foreign broadcast intelligence service of the United States, the Tokyo radio said current plans call for 250,000 "colonists" and that "about 80,000 brides to go to the continent are desired."

The treasury's cache of gold now amounts to $22,743,000,000.

When Your Back Hurts-

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

42ND Annual Statement

LIBERTY NATIONAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Report to Policyholders

The Company continued to forge ahead during 1942 in the face of war conditions which have affected every American business.

During the past year, the assets of the Company increased $1,344,673.82. Policyowners' surplus—an additional guarantee of fulfillment of policy contracts over and above legal reserves—increased $152,430.95 during 1942 and now stands at $1,102,116.92. Insurance in force climbed to $111,538,954.00, a growth of $8,888,449.00 over 1941.

The Company has furnished fifteen men from its Home Office staff and fifty from its field force to the armed services. In spite of the loss of 13% of its trained personnel, it has continued to maintain a high standard of services to its policyholders.

With assets of exceptional quality and $115.00 available for each $100.00 of outstanding liabilities, the Company is amply fortified to meet the problems of the war and play its part as a stabilizing influence in the readjustment period after the Victory.

Again may I express appreciation to our policyowners for the contribution they have made to the Company's continuing development.

FSA Members Pledge All-Out Production

Three hundred farmers of Chilton County, aided by the Farm Security Administration and pledged to all-out production of essential foods, livestock and poultry, are making excellent progress according to Marvin Durbin, F. S. A. county supervisor. "They are getting the seeds into the ground but most encouraging however, is the fine manner in which the families are co-operating with one another," Mr. Durbin said.

A four-point program of neighborly aid is being observed as follows:

1. Share equipment and join with neighbors in buyng needed equipment so all can use it.
2. Lend a hand to neighbors when the hand is needed.
3. Give each other news of markets and of other opportunities to haul items to town or from town for each other, thereby saving the extra trip.
4. Exchange labor for sewing, harvesting, marketing, building, clearing or other jobs of emergency nature.

The families find this neighborly co-operation is not only pleasant but a matter of good business as it means more economical production and marketing.

Another SOS From Red Cross

Everyone knows what an SOS call is, but how many people in Clanton and vicinity have yet realized just the importance of the SOS calls that have repeatedly been sent out from the Red Cross room right here in Clanton, our native land, our homeland, asking women, girls and men to come and give "only" their "spare time" in helping to make surgical dressings, a necessity in emergencies. We all know what is needed in case of emergency, but what we don't realize yet is that "our boys" are "over there" fighting for their freedom and our freedom. They are doing without lots of things they have been used to having and going places they have been used to gong. They don't have any "spare time" to offer, they are "told" what to do with their time. We have only been asked to 'voluntarily" give our spare time in this emergency at home and it is of most importance and urgent that you leave off some of your "flowers," clubs, circle meetings (what could be more missionary?) and come to the Red Cross Room, next door to Broadhead's Market, and really show your "patriotism" and do your "patriotic duty" to help your son, or brother, or husband, or nephew or uncle to have the necessary surgical dressings and bandages they need!

The following names are of those who have been so faithful in helping with this 'war duty" of "ours:" Mesdames Mary Will Browder, Jack Hayes, F. J. Callen, W. A. Reynolds, Ethel Mae Downs, H. M. Simpson, Hugh Jones, J. Watts Moore, T. C. McSwain, J. S. Johnston, Omar Reynolds, A. L. Robinson, J. P. Hayes, Sophia Jones, Brooks Connell, Maurice Popwell, Rip Burnett, John Mullins, John Dermaus, Miss Dolly Mae Harris, Miss Bertha Margolis and only three of the High School girls responded and they were Dorothy Bossinger, Sarah Dean Smith and Melva Studdard.

Now if you have helped and your name is not on this list don't get a chip on your shoulder, for these names were taken from last week's register, just remember, it wasn't left off intentionally and you are needed again and You and You and You! So forget everything else and come help these ladies to get these "bandages and dressings" ready to send "our boys". An average of five or six ladies a day shouldn't have to do this job. Do you think so?

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE MEETING HERE APRIL 10

There will be a meeting of the Old Age Assistance Association of Chilton County on Saturday, April 10, beginning at 10 o'clock a.m., the same to be held at the courthouse. An outstanding speaker will be present to address the meeting. All are invited, young and old.—Dr. V. G. Gragg, chairman.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census report shows that 8,366 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1942 prior to March 1, as compared with 4,883 bales for the crop of 1941.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CIRCLE HONOR GUESTS

The members of the Business Women's Circle were the honor guests at a banquet held Monday night in the First Baptist Church. This is the first of the fellowship nights which have been planned during the year for various groups. Since Miss Irene Jeffers was the guest of honor a Chinese theme was carried out in the decorations. The song books, which contained many delightful songs appropriate for the occasion, were in the shape of Chinese lanterns and were in many colors to add to the cheerfulness of the banquet. Mrs. Frank Scott, as president of W. M. S., was the leader for the evening and with the aid of Mrs. Owens led the members in a joyous evening. Miss Suan Powers added to the evening's entertainment by singing a special number.

Immediately following the banquet the members went to the church auditorium to hear Miss Irene Jeffers. Miss Jeffers is a native of Roanoke, Ala., but for the past year she has carried on Baptist missionary work in China. There was special music as a prelude to Miss Jeffer's talk. She told of many of her experiences while she was under the Japanese military guard. She also told of the privations which the Chinese themselves are suffering as the results of the war.

Miss Jeffers was repatriated at the orders of the Japanese. It was not her desire to return to America. Throughout her talk, Miss Jeffers emphasized the goodness of God to those who trusted in Him. The incidents which were told revealed just how much the Chinese are in need of help, which Americans can give.

Those who missed this service surely missed a treat.

FARMERS ASSURED GOOD SWEET POTATO PRICES

To encourage sweet potato growers to meet the production goal of one million acres the U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced that it will support prices of U. S. No. 1 grade sweet potatoes produced in 1943 at $1.15 to $1.45 per bushel, depending on seasonal differences.

Prices will be supported through purchases by the Food Distribution Administration at $1.15 per bushel during the harvesting season from August through November; at $1.30 per bushel in December and January, and at $1.45 per bushel during February, March and April. These prices apply to sweet potatoes grading U. S. No. 1 and packed in either bushel crates, baskets or hampers. U. S. No. 2 containing 75 per cent or better of U. S. No. 1 quality will be supported at 15 cents per bushel below the prices for U. S. No. 1.

"Food Distribution Administration will stand ready to BUY sweet potatoes at the announced prices," says the announcement. "FDA will buy in carload lots from growers. Growers may pool their supplies to make up car loads. The department is asking farmers to increase their acreage of sweet potatoes over last year by nearly a third."

Mayor Moulthrop, Eugaula, has asked boys to cease shooting small firearms within the city limits, declaring the practice dangerous.

"Don't Take My Penny"

MT. SPRINGS AND EASTVIEW

Annie R. Campbell, Pastor

There will be a service at Mountain Springs at 3:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon and one at Eastview at 7:30 Sunday night.

Rev. D. W. Shepherd, of Roanoke, Ala., the new pastor at large for the Congregational Christian Churches of Georgia and Alabama, and Rev. Howard Kester, of Black Mountain, N. C., secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, will give the messages.

EARLIER PLANTINGS WILL INCREASE COTTON YIELDS

By planting cotton one to two weeks earlier than the average planting date, farmers in most Alabama counties can increse cotton yields, reports J. T. Williamson, experiment station agronomist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, in reporting on four-year experiments conducted over the State.

At the Tennessee Valley sub-station the yields were 402 pounds per acre more when the cotton was planted April 15 than when planted May 13. At the Sand Mountain station the yields were increased 296 pounds per acre when planted April 16 over that planted April 30. The yields at Aliceville were increased 176 pounds per acre by panting 10 days earlier. At the LaFayette field the yields were increased 89 pounds per acre, at the Monroeville field 81 pounds per acre, and at the Prattville field 27 pounds per acre when planted two weeks earier.

Cullman is to have a dehydration plant where 10 tons of sweet potatoes will be processed daily. From the 1942 crop 400 tons will be processed, while plans call for 1,800 tons from the 1943 crop. About 60 persons will be employed.

Rationing News

TIRES—The information coming to the local rationing board office regarding tires for all kinds of pickup trucks is that in the future only Grade No. 1 passenger tires can be issued to pickup trucks. These tires are of good quality and will give satisfactory service, provided they are not overloaded The instructions regarding the use of these tires says that if tires show evidence of having been abused, then the tire user is not eligible for additional tires. The local rationing board office wishes to suggest that tire users of trucks watch out for overloading, and thereby avoid blow-outs.

Use Of Red Stamps

On and after Monday, March 29, consumers will be required to use red stamps from War Ration Book Two for all purchases of meat, cheese, canned fish, fats and oils covered by Ration Order No. 16. Red stamps are valid in the following order during the first month of rationing:

Stamp	Validity Date	Exp. Date
A	March 29	April 30
B	April 29	April 30
C	April 11	April 30
D	April 18	April 30

Local Producers

The State Office of OPA is trying to get a simplified form approved for farmers, curb market sellers and other people of this class who sell meat, butter and similar products to the local consumer. Nothing definite has been worked out as yet. As matters now stand the regulations state that any one selling less than $2,000 worth of produce per month is to register with the local rationing board and obtain the necessary information and blanks for reporting sales, and keeping a record of stamps collected from consumers. The local rationing office hopes to have more definite information on this by next week.

SINGING AT THORSBY

On account of the food rationing the Thorsby Singing Society decided to not have the annual all-day singing but there will be a singing in the afternoon beginning at 1:30 next Sunday, April 4th. All singers and lovers of music are ivited to be with us. New books will be used.—J. Thomas Childress, chairman.

P.-T. A. MEETING POSTPONED

The meeting of the Enterprise P.-T. A. has been postponed until Thursday night, April 8th. The parents and friends of the school are cordially invited to attend.

COST OF LIVING TRIFLING CENTURY AGO

Long before ration books were thought of, there wasn't a bit of inflation reflected in the charges of an extinct hotel at Gaston (now known as Thelma), N. C., as disclosed by a ledger sheet recently unearthed in the Seaboard Railway station here. It shows:

"Gaston, Tuesday, 31st March, 1940, Raleigh and Gaston R.R. Co., Dr.

"Engineer, captain, trainhand, each breakfast and dinner, 75c.

'Extra engineer and fireman, each breakfast, 25c.

"Petersburg R. R. Co., Dr.

"Egineer, captain, fireman, two trainhands, dinner, supper, breakfast and lodgings, $1.88.

'Extra, one engineer, supper, lodging and breakfast, 38c.

Mr. Styles, three drinks, 19c.

Mr. Myers, 5 drinks, one ditto, one ditto, four ditto, at 4 1-2c, 49c.

"Two pints brandy and bottles, 50c.

The Washinton and Gaston Railroad was one of the earliest parent companies of the present Seaboard Railway system, but at the headquarters of the road in Norfolk, Va., it is stated that no relationship is claimed to Mr. Styles and particularly to Mr. Myers.

ARCHIES CHAPEL

Annie R. Campbell, Pastor

F. F. A. MEMBERS TO TREAT COTTONSEED

Isabella F. F. A. members plan to treat cottonseed for farmers in the community this year. During the last 2 years they have treated several hundred bushels for themselves and neighbors. The price for treating will be 15c per bushel.

Farmers desiring to get seed treated should take them to the Agricultural Building between 8 a. m. and 1 p. m.

Treating cottonseed reduces losses from anthracnose, angular leaf spot, damping off, and seed decay. It is a means of increasing efficiency of production, and improving farm income.

It should be remembered that treated seed should not be fed to animals because they are poisonous.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. and British Teamwork in Tunisia Forces Definite Shift of Nazi Strategy; Moscow-Bryansk Drive Ended: Russia; Fortresses Smash Jap Base at Rabaul

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TUNISIA:
Big Punch

Working as a team, Allied armies have thrown their big punch at the Axis in Tunisia.

With Allied planes flying over the southern front in waves bombing and strafing the enemy, the British 8th army opened a powerful assault against the Mareth line. Units of this army smashed through the left side of the Axis positions and raced to within 20 miles of Gabes, a vital communications center for the enemy.

At the same time, Lieut. Gen. George Patton led his armored American forces into Maknassy, which stands 20 miles from the Gabes coastal area. Patton's men held their positions despite the fierce counterfire of German dive bombers.

In the welter of fighting, it appeared as though the British were succeeding in herding the Germans back up the coast, while the Americans were driving eastward to cut off the retreat from the rear. Enjoying air superiority, the Allies claim to have bagged 24 Axis planes in the early stages of the fighting to a loss of seven of their own.

KISKA:
Jap Air Base

The silence shrouding Japanese activities on Kiska island in the Aleutians was broken with word of America's stepped-up air offensive designed primarily to prevent the enemy from accomplishing the task of building an air field on the mountainous island base.

Almost three times as many raids were made in March as in February. The Japs are working 24 hours a day to construct a flight strip from which they can operate land planes. Previously such an installation had been considered impossible, due to the rough nature of the land. Construction of the field would permit the Japs to do a much better job of defending Kiska. From there, too, they might try to raid the American base in the Andreanoff islands.

SILENT TREATMENT:
For Argentina

When Vice President Wallace went no further into South America than to Chile, natives of Argentina began to really wake up to the fact that Washington was handing them a good dose of the "silent treatment." Comment on Wallace's trip became general throughout the country and the government went so far as to issue an official explanation—that it had been learned in Washington that Wallace was visiting only the West coast of South America on this trip.

Argentina, major food producing nation, received no mention in plans for the United Nations' forthcoming agricultural conference and this, too, caused wide discussion of America's policy toward the republic.

Citizens of Argentina realize that their government is being handled this way because of its policy of failing to cast in completely with the United Nations in political and military action against the Axis.

RUSSIA:
Deeds, Few Words

Even while the Germans were claiming new gains in the area west of Kursk, 120 miles north of Kharkov, Moscow communiques told of beaten Nazi forces up and down the line running from Smolensk to Rostov.

Russian dispatches told of strong German forces which had smashed against the Moscow-Bryansk rail trunk. The Nazis were reported to have lost 7,000 officers and men in killed alone. The Russians said the Nazi offensive had ceased.

In their own offensive west of Moscow toward Smolensk, the Red army captured an additional number of populated places. On the Donets river front, far to the south, the Russians fought defensive engagements with German tanks and infantry in the Belgorod area. Belgorod, about 60 miles northeast of Kharkov, is held by the Germans.

For the first time in weeks the Russians announced an advance in the Kuban area of the Caucasus. There they captured the district center and large railway station of Slavyanskaya, 45 miles northeast of Novorossisk.

STEEL: And Faked Tests

Charges of crookedness vs. patriotism were aired before a senate investigating committee when officers and employees of the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation acknowledged that tests had been faked on steel produced by its Irvin, Pa., plant to fill war orders.

Steel company officials steadfastly denied there was any motive except patriotism—a desire to win the war. Chairman Harry S. Truman of Missouri said he considered the practice "just plain crookedness and cheating on the government."

J. Lester Perry, president of the corporation, testified that the "regrettable failure" to carry out testing procedures on steel plates for the navy, maritime commission and lend-lease was not known to the higher management and declared he intended to "clear it up."

250 JAP PLANES:
Blasted at Rabaul

The Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, shuddered under its third heaviest raid of the war when a strong force of Flying Fortresses dropped 54 tons of bombs on more than 250 Jap planes trapped on the ground.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported that "a substantial proportion" of the grounded enemy planes were destroyed or damaged. The Fortresses dropped bombs ranging in size from small incendiaries to 2,000-pound block-busters. Rabaul has three airdromes—Lakunai, Vunakanau and Rapopo. All Allied planes returned.

On their return from Rabaul, Allied planes strafed and set afire a 10,000-ton Japanese transport off Cape Gazelle. Enemy shipping also was attacked at three other places.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

FISHY TREATY: Russia and Japan are still haggling over renewal of the 1942 fishing treaty, giving the Japs free movement in the waters off Siberia. The treaty is of military importance to Japan since it allows her to operate a weather station on the Kamchatka peninsula, which allows an accurate gauge of atmospheric conditions in the Bering sea.

LIVE AND LET LIVE: "Live and let live" must be the world's motto for the future, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek told 23,000 people in Chicago's stadium. Although the League of Nations failed, she said, concerted action will be necessary for the reconstruction and preservation of peace in the post-war period. Mme. Kai-shek called war the "acme of human folly."

DOWN UNDER:
Subs Big Menace

With submarines operating in packs in the North Atlantic, signs pointed early to the opening of the Nazis spring offensive against Allied shipping to the European war fronts.

That the Nazis were concentrating on such an offensive seemed to be borne out by the appointment of Karl Doenitz as commander of the German fleet. Doenitz is a submarine specialist, who has organized the latest technique of operating U-boats in packs.

Thirty-two ships totaling over 200,000 tons were sunk in a recent convoy, the Nazis said. The Allies did not confirm the claim, but survivors from a late North Atlantic convoy said their losses were heavy, although partly compensated by damage to the attacking underseas horde.

The Nazis are said to have 500 subs, with at least a third in action at one time. The practice of operating the submersibles in packs under one experienced commander, relieves the necessity for training individual commanders. In the new technique, U-boats attack their prey from both sides of the convoy.

Construction of a fast destroyer escort by the U. S. is expected to assist in running down subs. Volume production of these escorts will allow the navy to use them as the Nazis use their U-boats, that is, in packs. Building also has been speeded on small auxiliary aircraft carriers to permit planes to take off at sea and maintain close patrol over convoys at all times.

RATIONING:
Juggling Act

Almost all the items that go into the American market basket are now regulated under the rationing system and the job of juggling points to insure a proper diet is as an important job for the housewife as is juggling the dollars in the family's grocery budget.

When meat, butter, cheese, shortening, lard and margarine joined the foods brought under the point system the full force of war hit the nation's dinner table. OPA indicated that with the 16 points allotted each week during the first weeks for these items would provide approximately these amounts:

RATION DATES

April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.
April 25—Last valid date for stamp No. 26, good for one pound of coffee.
May 21—Last day on which Coupon 5 in "A" gas ration book is valid.
May 31—Last day for use of stamp No. 12, good for five pounds of sugar.
June 15—Last valid date for stamp No. 17, good for one pair of shoes.
Sept. 30—Expiration date for Period 5 fuel-oil coupons.

1. Meat—Slightly under two pounds.
2. Butter—About ¼ pound.
3. Cheese—About 1.7 ounces.
4. Shortening—About 3 ounces.
5. Lard—About ¼ pound.
6. Margarine — About 1.2 ounces.

Officials reported that in general the attitude to this almost complete rationing of foodstuffs was good. Most Americans realize, it was pointed out, that rationing is the safest way to insure adequate supplies for the armed forces and our allies as well as insure equitable distribution of what is left for the home front.

VIEWPOINTS:
Death, Dust, Ashes

A quiet confidence ran through Prime Minister Winston Churchill's recent speech when he warned the British that it may take two more years to crush Hitler "and his evil powers of evil into death, dust and ashes."

That was Churchill's warning to those people who believe that the war already is won. "I am not able to share those sanguine hopes and my earnest advice to you is . . . not to take your eye off the ball even for a moment."

In a speech both grave and optimistic, Churchill asserted that after Germany is beaten the Allies would turn immediately to "punish the greedy, cruel empire of Japan." The prime minister proposed post-war councils of the Allied nations to insure peace, and drew a hopeful picture of social and economic post-war planning.

Meanwhile, another voice was heard—this one from Berlin. It was the voice of Adolf Hitler, rumored to be dead, ill or insane. Emerging from months of seclusion, Hitler admitted that German soil has become a war zone, but boasted that the eastern front crisis has been overcome and that the German nation was moving toward "success until final victory."

WARNING:

Broadcasts from Tokyo are warning the Japanese people to expect air raids over Japan and increasing submarine attacks upon shipping. A war review broadcast said "the enemy is still continuing air raids on our forces. The American planes in China will be further strengthened and therefore the enemy hopes to carry out raids over Japan . . . The enemy is using her submarines in the hope of destroying our supply lines . . . We must build more ships to replace our lost ships."

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

GRACIE ALLEN sets an example for all radio and movie stars to shoot at. Asked to pose digging in a Victory Garden at a huge department store in New York, she arrived right on time — though she'd been up late doing a benefit — liked the clothes she was to pose in, complimented the store because she wasn't mobbed for autographs. "Sometimes when we're traveling we hardly get a chance to eat, because people want to talk to us," she said, then added, "But if it weren't for the radio public maybe we wouldn't be eating!" Incidentally, broadcasting still scares her, because she gets to thinking of all the thousands of us, who are listening to her!

Danny Kaye, one of the most amusing men on the stage, has reported to the Samuel Goldwyn studios for his first picture, "Up in Arms"; he should be a riot on the screen, but sometimes what's funny on the stage just goes flat before the cameras.

A touching scene in "The Human Comedy" takes place between Mickey Rooney and five-year-old Butch Jenkins, who plays his brother. Butch had to wear a long nightgown—and flatly refused. Finally Mickey, with Butch riding on his shoulders, disappeared, to return with Butch in the nightgown. "I told him that Buck Rogers and General MacArthur wear 'em, every night," Mickey explained.

In addition to his regular weekly radio appearance with Guy Lombardo on "Three-Ring Time" Ogden Nash is collaborating on the script of a new musical, "One Touch of Venus," which will star Marlene Dietrich; he says that she's not just beautiful and movie-wise, but is also a very creative woman with decidedly individual ideas of her own. What Marlene thinks of the humorist we don't know.

Most actors of dramatic parts in radio yearn for a good comedy spot which will land them on the road to fame, but Alan Reed, "Solomon Levy" on "Abie's Irish Rose," reversed things; he started as an ace stooge for Fred Allen and other comedians. After getting a good start that way, he branched out into straight character acting both in radio and the theater.

The first scene that Zoltan Korda planned to shoot for Columbia's "Somewhere in Sahara," on location in the desert near Brawley, Calif., called for a search by a unit of Nazi mechanized troops, dying of thirst, for an abandoned, dried-up water hole. NEW YORK.—When Maj. Gen. Robert W. Crawford talks in earnest, his thin, small mouth twists and the words come out of one corner after the manner of the late, great Cohan. The general is in North Africa now, talking in earnest to keep guns and grub and gasoline rolling to the American army there. He commands the Middle East Service of Supply. He reached Africa around the middle of January and had a whole month of ease before work caught up with him. Before that he commanded an armored division at Fort Knox. The chances are that in Africa he has lost weight. For him it would be an easy matter, because he has always been one of our plumper men-at-arms.

Keeps Guns, Gas, Grub Rolling to Men in N. Africa

In the last war the guys in the trenches used to rib the SOS with pointed mention of non-fighting soldiers. They talked that way even when the supply trucks ran Boche barrages like ducks diving into a shower of No. 9 shot. Very likely the talk in African fox-holes is the same and with even less reason, for in these days of fluid fronts the Crawford cargo crews are as likely to find themselves alongside a Mark VI tank as a purely American supply point. In such a dilemma the general instructs the crews to say "Vot iss!" in a loudly deceptive voice if they feel it will help, but above all to get a-rolling.

General Crawford is of the army's elite on two counts. He was graduated from West Point. He took the best post-graduate courses, War College, Command and General Staff school. He is a New Yorker, 52 years old and was three years out of West Point when we went to war the last time. A captain then, he finished a lieutenant-colonel. This was fairly close to par for the year and a half course.

AMBASSADOR CLARENCE E. GAUSS, starting toward bond-weary Washington from bomb-weary Chungking for consultations, should have all the news we need about China on the tip of his tongue. Except for a couple of turns in Paris and Australia, he has served all his diplomatic career there, and his career runs back to 1907.

On Way Here With First-Hand Tale of War-Weary China

Shanghai was his first post. He was deputy consul, after a while spent at stenography in the house of representatives. Then he was consul at Amoy, Tsinan, Mukden, and finally counselor to the legation at Peiping.

Washington was his birthplace and he got back now and then, marrying a Los Angeles girl on one visit. Maybe her preference turned him to the Paris consulate. The Australian assignment came later. He was our first minister there. But when an ambassador to China was needed two years ago he packed up and went back to his old stamping ground.

He has been a quiet ambassador. He has a lean, quiet look and a shrewd one too, behind neat spectacles. When he smiles a dimple that is practically a sinkhole appears in his right cheek. This is because he smiles so much more with the right side of his sharp mouth. The effect, though this description may make it seem otherwise, isn't bad at all.

IN RUSSIA a Bolshevist by any other name is just as Red. Thus Trotsky was really somebody else. So is Stalin. And Vycheslav Mikailovich Molotoff, whose department of foreign affairs considers Admiral Standley's brusque speech, was born Scriabin. Molotoff means hammer, plainly a better way to call a man who set out at 15 years of age to break the old Imperial government.

Like Trotsky and Stalin, Molotoff Altered Moniker

Molotoff's official biography says he was born the son of a shop assistant. That was 53 years ago. By 190[illegible] he was a professed Marxist, and a year later joined a bolshevik group. Ten years later he was on the Bolshevik Central Committee. Meanwhile he and Stalin had met, and started their newspaper, Pravda, and Molotoff had been arrested or exiled thrice. Both Lenin and Stalin schooled Molotoff, and he likes to tell of this.

He likes, too, to boast that he is an old Bolshevist, an early bird among the revolutionists. In Russia he is called Stalin's chief aide. He is, actually, vice premier as well as commissar of foreign affairs but when the Russians say chief aide, they mean to point to his loyalty to his superior. He is Stalin's Harry Hopkins.

Molotoff is heavy, but not fat. His hair has grown gray, but his thick mustache is still black. His mouth is strong, confident. His wide forehead tops off a face more than ordinarily good looking.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of heir part in the battle for the Philip- ines is being told by four of the five aval officers who are all that is left f Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They re Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieuten- nt Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; nd Ensigns Anthony Akers and George :. Cox, Jr. Lieut. Kelly has told how e was sent to the tunnel hospital on Corregidor, where he met a nurse named Peggy. Survivors from the sinking of a hipload of refugees were brought to the ospital, and patients from Manila were noved there. From them he learned ow badly the war was going for us. A nember of the tank corps is speaking.

CHAPTER IV

"What happened to your tank?"

" 'We were lying on our side in at paddy, and the Japs would me over and look at us. We played ssum in there all day. They tried open our door with bayonets, but had it locked. In the afternoon Jap officer looked at us through e slots—all of us lying still, hold- g breath, and then he said, in nglish, "They're all dead."

" 'But we figured it was a trick— pt right on playing possum and, re enough, in about an hour they me back for another look. But e were lying in exactly the same sitions. This time they gave a w disgusted grunts and walked off. bout an hour after dark we lis- ned carefully, and then unlocked r door. Sure enough, they'd gone, we beat it for the road.'

" 'Tell me what became of your oes,' I asked him. I couldn't fig- e how an experienced soldier ould ever let himself get separat- l from his shoes. The kid grinned eepishly. 'I guess that was a amn-fool trick,' he said. 'You see had been hotter than hell in that nk, and we were all dirty and red and sweaty, so we decided to ke a bath in a creek just across e rice paddy. But we had to go rough mud to get there, so, keep- g our clothes on until we got to e water hole, we took off our oes and hid them in the tall grass. ut when we got back we hunted r several hours, and we couldn't nd that grass clump. Finally we arted on, barefooted.'

" 'But where were the Japs?'

" 'They'd gone on ahead toward Manila. The next night we were esting by the roadside. We heard noise behind us, so we scooted low the bushes by the side of the oad, and saw more of them go by bicycles—all headed toward Ma- ila. It seemed to be a Jap recon- aissance patrol, because behind hem came trucks and guns and in- antry, going by in the dark—so close e could have reached out and ouched them. If we'd had a ma- hine gun, we could have wiped out everal hundred, but we only had ur 45's. They kept up most of that ight—one group stopped and ate how on the road bank opposite us; e were scared stiff they'd come ver and find us. It was hard for he wounded to lie quiet. Our tank river had a rivet stuck in his hroat—every time he took a drink, he water would come leaking out— nd the radio operator's arm was ll of shrapnel from an exploding ullet. The rest of us were okay, ut our feet were getting damned ore.

" 'At dawn we stopped by a native illage to collect some shoes, but heir feet were all too small.'

" 'How'd they treat you?'

" 'Fine—gave us all the food we ould eat, but you could see they idn't want us around. Afraid the aps would find us hiding there and hoot them too. You couldn't blame he natives. So we got out, and pent the other six days of the trip leeping in ditches or brush clumps, alking nights.'

" 'Were the wounded weak?'

" 'Sure, and so were we. The tank river with the hole in his throat anted to stop—said for us to leave im behind. We were afraid the aps would get him and we couldn't pare him a gun—we had only three 5's for the six of us.'

" 'What did you do, carry him?'

" 'Hell, no. We gave him a 45, old him he'd better use it now if e wasn't coming with us. So he hanged his mind, and decided to ome on. He made it, too. But it ook plenty of guts.'

"None of them lacked that." Here Kelly shook his head. "Sometimes raining, often equipment, but never uts.

"But getting back to that hos- pital. I went back to my bunk. Peggy helped me get my arm set- led, and we talked a little bit. She vas a smart girl. Having been vith the Regular Army, she knew eal soldiers when she saw them, nd you didn't have to talk long vith these poor brave kids who were o green they forgot their shoes to now what the score was. Here we vere, trying to hold off the Japs vith less than two thousand regu- ars, plus these green kids who had eally been sent here to polish off heir training, plus thousands of Fil- pino boys just as brave but just as green, most of whom had never been n uniform until a few weeks before he war started.

" 'Where in hell's the navy?' hey'd ask me. 'Why aren't they bringing us tanks and planes and more men? It only takes two weeks o get here from Pearl Harbor.' Of course none of them knew what had happened at Pearl Harbor.

" 'They'll be along,' I'd say. 'Any day now.'

" 'Hell,' they'd say disgustedly. 'We won't see them for six months.'

" 'Suppose we don't,' I'd say. 'This place can last six months. Wasn't it built like Malta and Gibraltar—to withstand siege?'

"Only pretty quick I began to find out how wrong I was. Corregidor had been built years ago, and then we'd agreed not to modernize if the Japs didn't modernize the Carolines. We kept the agreement; they didn't. Anyway, ammunition and provisions were so short the Rock would be doing good to hold out three months.

"A few days after that the nurses in my ward were buzzing around—I heard some talk about a party they were giving in their quarters that evening, inviting their boy friends, who for the most part were young army officers stationed on the Rock. And I almost fell out of my cot that afternoon when Peggy, in a seemingly offhand way, asked me if I'd like to go. It was nice, of course, to be chosen, by the girl I liked best, out of 10,999 other men on that Rock, most of whom would have given an ear just to talk to a white girl. But it got me to thinking, too. I liked her, but the other girls had said there was a young medical officer she'd been dating pretty steady—and what the hell was I? A naval officer in an army hospital—here today, gone tomorrow—so I hadn't let myself get started thinking—or tried not to, anyway.

"Sure enough, in about an hour they came back for another look."

"Naturally, I said sure I wanted to go. So Peggy said she'd see if she could fix it with the doctor. And after she got through with him, he was certain it would do me good, if I was back in the ward by ten.

"Here in Newport maybe you wouldn't think it was much of a party. But it was a swell night, with a big moon hanging over Manila Bay—peaceful—and best of all, the girls had broken out with their civilian dresses. That doesn't sound like much, but one look at them after seeing nothing but uniforms for months was like a trip back home. Makeup too—they looked so damned nice you could eat them with a spoon, and Peggy had put just a touch of perfume in her hair—anyway if it wasn't that, it was something. What did we do? Well, danced to a portable—I'll bet we played 'Rose of San Antone' a dozen times—and Peggy and I figured out a way we could dance with my arm in a sling. And afterward we sat out on the grass and talked. I remember someone saying, 'You think they'll ever bomb this place?' Of course we knew eventually they would, but that night the war seemed a thousand miles away. Only somebody spoiled it all by asking Peggy when this medical officer was getting back from Bataan, and she said she thought tomorrow.

"Next day I was out in the courtyard getting some fresh air," Lieutenant Kelly, who was invalided in the tunnel hospital at Corregidor continued: "I was allowed a certain number of hours per day out of my bunk—when the air-raid alarm went off, but by now we didn't pay any attention. I looked up to notice that nine Jap planes were going overhead, but what the hell, they did that all the time, and of course the anti-aircraft opened up—just a formality, because they were up out of range—when all of a sudden—Bam! the whole Rock seemed to jump, and we made a dive for the tunnel, because at last they were bombing us.

"It was quite a pasting. Half an hour later a batch of nurses came in in an ambulance—pretty well shaken up. They'd been strafed—had to leave the ambulance and run for the roadside ditches. A few minutes later the wounded began to come in—all the serious cases went into my ward. They had only two operating tables, so the litters were lined up, waiting their turn, while the nurses pitched in and took care of the minor surgery — cleaning wounds, digging for shrapnel, bandaging. There was no time for anesthetics except a quarter of a grain of morphine, but the wounded certainly had guts. They'd grab the side of their litter with clenched fists, and tell the nurses to go to it—it really wasn't hurting much.

"The raid had been going an hour when all of a sudden the lights went out, but in half a minute the girls had produced flashlights. I remember Peggy standing there holding a flashlight on a guy's naked back on the operating table while a doctor probed for some shrapnel in his kidney. You could see her face and those steady blue-green eyes of hers by the light reflected back up from this guy's back, and just then there was a terrific crunching bang—a bomb had landed right outside the tunnel entrance—and with it a sudden blast of air through the tunnel. It wasn't nice, and yet I don't think Peggy's hand even wobbled.

"Presently the lights came on, and we found one hospital-corps man had crawled under a bed. He wasn't even sheepish. 'You're damn right I was scared,' he said. 'Thought the whole place was coming down on us.' Peggy's flashlight beam on that naked back had not moved. Hell of a fine, nervy girl to have in a war. Or any other time.

"But it was getting on toward New Year's, and bad news began to come from Manila. The Japs were closing in."

"But very few of them realized it in Manila," said Akers. "I was there with my boat on courier duty from December 13 until Manila fell. Staying with Admiral Hart until the seaplane took him out to join the Dutch East Indies fleet.

"You certainly couldn't criticize morale. The average Filipino had a childish belief in us. He was absolutely certain that the Americans would be there next week with plenty of equipment. Dead-sure that our American soldiers would throw back the Japanese. Believed all the optimistic broadcasts and rumors.

"When a raid would come, of course, they were pretty excitable. We slept aboard the boat, and when the bombs started down, we were supposed to get away from the wharf and out into the bay. Sometimes people used to stow away, to get away from the bombs.

"They never lost faith, though. Right up to the end there were big dances at the Manila Hotel, and you could watch the Filipino boys in uniform, telling their girls about their heroic exploits. And there were plenty of them to tell, too.

"But over at the American Army and Navy Club, they knew what the score was. They didn't feel like dancing there. Their faces were plenty long.

"Of course the higher-up Filipinos knew the truth. If you'd see one with a long face, you could be sure he was a Senator, or better.

"I had a girl there—Dolores was her first name, and by American standards she was good-looking as hell. Her father was a Spaniard from Catalonia and her mother was a mestiza. She'd been elected Miss Philippines a year or so before. Fairly tall and lithe, with big black eyes and enough of the Oriental so you'd never forget her face among the other brunettes you know.

"Her father I think was a Senator, and the family had a hell of a lot of money. His brother owned a lot of mines. They had a big colonial house in the suburbs. Usually when I was invited out she'd send a car down for me, but the first time I was coming out alone she said never mind about directions—and so it turned out. Every traffic cop I met knew just who they were and could point me on my way. So they were really big shots on the island.

"Her father knew what the score was, although Dolores didn't dream it was coming so soon. The last time I saw her, just before the Japs came in, she knew Manila had been declared an open city, but she thought that only meant there wouldn't be any more bombs. All that night the southern army had been moving through Manila, trying to get to Bataan before they were cut off, but she didn't know what the marching meant. That night her uncle, a tough old Spaniard who had mines all over the world, got pretty drunk and almost had a row with her father, the Senator.

"The uncle said the whole mess was the fault of this opposition faction of Filipino politicians hollering their silly heads off for independence—no wonder the Americans, if they were getting out in four more years, hadn't socked a lot of money into fortifications. Then he cussed the Filipino politicians out for not appropriating money for the army—they'd set MacArthur up with a big salary and a penthouse, and then hardly given him a dime to train and equip an army—it was all window-dressing.

"He said he wasn't so worried about himself because he owned plenty of property outside the islands. But he told the Senator he'd probably end up pulling a rickhsa for his part in this independence foolishness, and serve him damned well right. So I could see there were a few natives who knew what the score was.

Results Justify Expenses Of Overseas Propaganda

Axis Has Employed Elaborate Means to Get Its Views Across to Neutral Nations; U. S. Must Use Press and Radio.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

The other day, Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, held a press conference. He opened it with the remark that we were witnessing an Uncle Tom's Cabin without the Simon Legree. I didn't get the significance of the remark until Davis explained that Representative Tabor, who charged Mr. Davis with using the Office of War Information to distribute propaganda for a fourth term, had been invited to share the conference but had other duties.

Obviously, the purpose of the meeting was to show how the money for the publication of propaganda was being spent and a good deal of time was taken up on comparative costs of British, American and Axis propaganda efforts. If the OWI carries out present plans, it will be spending at the rate of 45 millions of dollars by the end of the year. Britain, with its separate ministry of information, is spending much more than we are—Germany probably four or five times as much. That's a rough estimate. But the figures didn't interest me so much and I'll tell you why. I had come to the meeting a little early and had been studying the array of literature—arranged on two tables—the American and the Axis propaganda material. There were handsome publications like the German magazines "Signal," "Berlin-Rome-Tokyo," and Japan's "Nippon." "Signal" costs 75 cents a copy to produce—the art work in all of them must make "Esquire" and "Fortune" envious. There were tiny pamphlets—these were American—you could slip into your hat band. The OWI's masterpiece is "Victory" which was the target of congressional attack—it isn't so bad in comparison with the expensive Axis magazines but it costs only 35 cents to produce.

Three things struck me as a result of the conference: first, if there is an even chance of obtaining the results expected, the investment is not worth quibbling about; second, since Davis admits that material got into the Roosevelt sketch which should not have and won't again, we either ought to take Davis' judgment or else fire him. Thirdly, the public hasn't had a chance to know what the propaganda is all about and the criticism of one phase of it utterly distorts the general picture of the function, purpose and value of the OWI effort.

In the first place, these publications under consideration are not for our troops abroad or our people at home — though I believe they ought to be given some circulation here simply so that their function is understood, at least when it is compatible with the confidential nature of some of the means of distribution in enemy countries.

It is accepted as the duty and function for one political party to do all it can to discredit the leaders of the other party—according to the rules of the game of politics—but, as Davis quoted the Baltimore Sun, you have to exploit your personalities. People mean a lot more than mere ideas when you are trying to make an impression. Roosevelt can be played up as a powerful symbol to people abroad without affecting the political situation at home. That was done effectively in the case of Woodrow Wilson in the last war, his picture was worshiped all over Europe, as the symbol of the leader of a nation coming to liberate them. But when he came home, he couldn't sell his program to the American people.

'Sell' Allied Cause

I tried to find out what the objective of the OWI was, whether it could show any results.

Purpose one is counter-attack. We know what German propaganda has done, first in softening countries about to be invaded; second, to keep neutrals leaning Nazi-ward. OWI wants to fight fire with fire.

The second purpose is the same as the first and more of it—not merely to nullify enemy effort but sell the prospect the idea that America can win and is winning the war and that American victory will be a greater selfish advantage to the prospect than a Nazi victory would be.

How about results? That is pretty hard to reduce to statistics or even concrete statements. We know some Japs have surrendered with our propaganda leaflets in their hands. We know that leaflets dropped over occupied countries or pamphlets smuggled in have started people talking. OWI has reports to this effect. They say that this means that the idea has been spread that America is in touch with the people within the occupied territory.

We know that some of these pamphlets have been photostated or copied in others and given further distribution. It was stated that these copies or excerpts from them have even been circulated in prison camps.

We know that from four to six clandestine newspapers are made up chiefly from Allied propaganda material.

Of course, by no means all of the OWI propaganda is spread through publications. In fact, the radio broadcasts represent the greater part of the expenditure.

OWI is confident that this radio propaganda is not wasted as has been charged although it is admitted that the listening audience is being cut down as short-wave sets are seized or wear out and the depreciation is heavy. On the other hand, it is known that the radio broadcasts are repeated—by word of mouth and in clandestine pamphlets and newspapers.

The chief evidence that propaganda is reaching into Germany comes from two sources: first, the speeches of Goebbels and other German leaders who warn against black listening—warning not to believe the foreign propaganda—and, second, the records of trials of persons arrested for this black listening.

Effective in Turkey

It is stated that American propaganda has been effective in Turkey because Turks believe it whereas they have caught the Axis in too many lies. Since publications printed in Turkish are still forbidden to be sent into Turkey, the printing has to be done there or the material sent in in French or English.

In Spain, it is said that in spite of strong handicaps—that is, the power of the Falangist party which is openly pro-Axis—American propaganda has curtailed this power, has swung many people from a pro-Axis to a pro-Ally attitude. The persecution of the Catholic church in Germany has been used effectively in Spain.

Of course, this isn't the whole story of propaganda. All is fair in love and war and some pretty precarious tight-rope walking is sometimes done—witness democracy's tete-a-tete with Darlan which history will probably disclose was less a desertion of democratic political methods than waiving of the Queensberry rules of gallant combat. We can't expect the Allies to show their hands to the enemy and there is no use disturbing the squeamish by revealing the possible although not entirely immaculate condition which might arise from grappling with an especially noisome enemy.

What Davis did not go into at this meeting was the question of enemy propaganda directed toward us. That is a very delicate matter and sometimes governments are willing to give the enemy credit for the circulation of certain sentiments expressed by people who are just mad at their own public servants and are exercising the inherent right of grousing.

As I said before, I am much more interested in whether the propaganda job we are doing is effective. As to getting in puffs for the party in power, that is up to the party out of power to stop but one of the inescapable advantages of being an "in" in wartime is that you can squelch some opposition on the ground of patriotism. On the other hand, there was never an administration yet that wasn't thrown out after a war so there is some compensation—furthermore, the party of the opposition doesn't share the blame for the mistakes.

Now that Governor Bricker has announced that he expects the Ohio delegation will support him as a favorite son candidate for the presidency, politics will be raising its lovely head in every headline.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

An Open Letter To Our Senator And Congressman

We received a letter from the United States Post Office at San Francisco last night stating that if we did not conform to such and such an order regarding the mailing of papers to boys in the armed forces that the papers would be turned back to us.

The letter in itself doesn't amount to much, we imagine it is only something else to give us to try and figure out, we don't understand the reason for it at all.

It just happens to be the "straw that breaks the camel's back" for this country editor.

We are being ridden to death by at least twenty-five different worthy branches of government all with scores of publicity men and not a dime to pay for the publicity they seek.

Last year the newspapers in Canada received approximately $1.000.00 each for war advertising. In England every newspaper received several hundreds of dollars for helping advertise the war.

Today, hundreds of necessary private businesses are getting rich off of government contracts and from government patronage while the nawspapers starve.

Were it not for the weekly newspaper and the job that they are doing the government would never put over the big drives that they have been sponsoring. Were it not for the weekly newspapers the coming drive for $13,000,000,000 would fall flat.

It is true that the newspaper editor is given credit by all the departments for the "fine job" that he is doing for his country, BUT, you can't eat letters of appreciation or can you buy food and clothes with the

In closing let me say that it is time som done for the newspaper. It is doing its job. Th job that it has ever done, or had to do.

Respectfully yours,

R. M. TU

Sunday being a pretty day we had a large crowd out for Sunday School and Church services. After Sunday School Bro. Culpepper brought the message which was enjoyed by all.

We are sorry to report that Mrs W. J. Huett is on the sick list this week. We all wish her a speedy recovery.

We are glad to report a lot of visitors out to church Sunday. Among them were: Mr. and Mrs. Nations and family from near Rockford; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Prickett had as their Sunday dinner guests J. L. Culpepper, C. B. Huett. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hudman had as their Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. Nation and family.; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sims; Mr. and Mrs. Grady Hudman from Montgomery; Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Hudman and Miss Zonnie Hudman of Montgomery and Mr. and Mrs. Harvie Rowell from Coopers.

Let everybody come to Sunday School next Sunday, it will be our reguler preaching day.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

Capt. Carl Ekblad of the U. S. Air Corps, a graduate of Thorsby Institute in 1933, whose home is here in Thorsby, has been visiting his family for a few days and on Monday gave a talk in chapel.

Dr. Roswell Owens, pastor of the Baptist Church at Clanton, gave a talk Monday, March 29th, to the Bible Class at Thorsby Institute on the customs and dress of the country.

Christian Life Conference

The Christian Life Conference, annual gathering for young people at Thorsby, will open with registration at 3:45 p.m. on Friday, April 2, and extend through the vesper services at 5:00 p.m. on Sunday April 4. All sessions, except those which are out-of-doors or in the dining hall, will be held in the auditorium at Thorsby Institute, and many good times will be mixed with the more serious features. Don't miss them. Send your name to Mable Wood, secretary, Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala., now, telling how many will be in your party.

Dr. and Mrs. Roswell E. Owens of Clanton, who have served as missionaries in Palestine, will speak the first evening at 8:45 after a supper and reception for the delegates. Saturday morning begins with a song service and includes talks by Dr. Edythe Saylor and Dr. Hallie Farmer, both of Montevallo, and at 11:00 a service by Dr. Carl Polson of the Congregational Church in Thorsby. A picnic luncheon will be followed by a play put on by the [illegible] Class and discussions conducted by Miss Ouida Wright, Dr. Hallie Farmer, Rev. Howard Kester, secretary of the Alabama Temperance Alliance, and Mr. Henry Adair of Clanton High School. At 4:00 there will be time out to do what you like, or rest for the banquet at 6:30 with games and stunts afterward which are sure to be amusing. The speaker on Saturday evening will be Dr. Hotalen, secretary of the Alabama Temperance Alliance.

The Baptist Children's Home, Troy, received in Christmas donations $62,126.66. Trustees voted to spend $15,000 in improvements of buildings. The home has 63 stars on its service flag, for 62 boys and one girl now in the United States armed forces.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

You gotta give a dog his dues. Not that we are refering to anyone as a canine but that gang at the postoffice has surely done a swell job of cleaning up the shrubbery around the building. Looks good . . . Right here we want to tell those who have been inquiring about Folks & Things that we appreciate their interest and promise as long as there is nothing to write about, we will try and say something about it . . . We just must take time off some week to make the rounds in Clanton and record for posterty the many "fish stories" going the rounds. There are so many, so big and so varied until you wouldn't believe them either.

For instance: J. T. King and Cecil Ramsey was down on the river the other afternoon fishing. They had stayed pretty late on account of the fish not biting. About dark one of them got a crappie on the end of his line that was a nice one. After pulling in the catch they found hanging to the fish's back a small eel about eight inches long. He never did let the fish go until they had it in the boat and pulled the fish away from him either. They never did find out what the eel was mad at the fish about but Cecil declares when pulled out of the water the eel was growling.

After this week Era's Beauty Shop will be no more. Era is taking a position at Roger's Beauty Shop next to the Goodyear Tire Store. The management was wise in getting Mrs. Era Wyatt for his new shop as she has many friends and customers in the county who appreciate her good work and friendly manner.

We went "big city" last week-end. Three robberies in one night. The only difference is that our law enforcement catch their men. They took these into custody the same day at one of the hotels. As we understand it, they were two youths from Montgomery starting out the wrong way. Dubb's, Studdard Bros. and Eubanks Barber Shop were the places honored by the culprits. We understand that four haircuts and three shaves were stolen from the barber shop.

Don't say we didn't tell you to go around by Katherine and James Wade's and see those beautiful azaleas that line their drive . . . Received today Number 1 and Volume 1, of the Meteor, published by AAFMTD No. 21, Nashville, Tenn. Cadet Irvin Lande sent us the copy and it was very interesting, containing news of the Cadets in school there . . . A story current in Norway is that a bull gored to death a German soldier, whereupon the Germans lined up ten innocent cows and shot them . . . You heard where the draftee sent his girl two letters every day from the day he was drafted and after the fourth month she married the postman.

Robinson Springs

We want to announce that Saturday night and Sunday is our regular preaching date at this place, which will be the first Saturday night and Sunday in April, and we invite every one to come out and be with us. And be sure you bring someone with you as you won't regret your trip I'm sure. I feel like Brother Cost will deliver you a wonderful message.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

Students enjoyed a four-day holiday last week as school turned out for the A. E. A. convention in Birmingham. This week the students came right back with increased vigor with which to tackle their tests.

The F. F. A. had charge of chapel last week. The program was mostly muscal with Thomas Williams, Charles Ray Scott and Ernest McCary "doing the making." They were assisted by Josie Mae Abbott and Jettie Owens.

Devotional was by Hudson Calfee. Jesse Culp gave his speech on "The Future of Farming." With this speech, Jesse will represent his chapter and the county in the F. F. A. quarterfinals.

The Seniors were all a-twitter last Wednesday—their invitations and calling cards had come. There were a few undesirable changes in them, however, but they were sensible enough to realize that these were necessitated by the war. Shot throwing has reached a new high here of late. If you have a few extra shot, please do not throw them in class. This is very disturbing. Oh yes, the Senior play has been selected for this year. We understand that it is a three-act comedy entitled "No Bride For The Groom." We are not prepared to comment on it yet, but we must admit that the title sounds very funny. Watch for further announcements. If you need any information on figuring fertilizer problems, see the Sr. II Ag. Class. They are about to learn how (at least). 'Tis observed by some that our love quartet is still progressing . . . Well, spring is in the air, and an epidemic is going around. Spring fever? Lord no—it's mumps!

PAYMENTS TO DEPENDENTS OF PERSONNEL MISSING IN ACTION

Payments to dependents of military or civilian personnel, officially reported missing, missing in action, captured or interned, are authorized by law, it was announced today by headquarters, Fourth Servce Command.

These payments may be continuation of previously made allotments, by increases in such allotments, or by making new allotments, deductions to be made from the pay which accrues to the credit of the missing person, according to the regulation.

Increased or additional allotments may not exceed the amount required for the reasonable support of dependents and in no case may they, with other deductions from pay, exceed the base and longevity pay to be credited to the absent person.

It is pointed out that other relief authorizations in this law include payments of insurance premiums by allotments from pay and provision for transportation of dependents and effects of persons killed, injured or missing, as a result of military operations.

The above regulaton is in addition to Form 625, covering family allowance payments made to dependents of enlisted men in the four lowest grades. However, increased allotments may be made to these dependents to cover an emergency or to supplement a family allowance which is proved to be inadequate.

Emphasis is made of the importance of solders in these grades making family allowance applications (Form 625), since this allowance continues if the soldier is later reported missing, captured or interned. Should a soldier in these four grades have no family allowance in effect and is reported missing, a dependent needing support should apply for the family allowance and may also make application for an additional allotment from the soldier's pay, if the family allowance can be proved insufficient.

Dependents finding it necessary to make application for family allowances or for additional allotments and services, are advised to contact the nearest Red Cross chapter, which will assist in preparing such applications, or to write directly to the Dependency Allotment Section, Allowance and Allotment Branch, A. G. O. Buiding, "Y", 20th & B Sts., N. E., Washington, D. C., with a full statement of the circumstances.

A civilian's prayer

HELP ME, Almighty God, to be the only kind of hero I can ever be.

HELP ME see how important it is that I go gladly and energetically about the humdrum business of saving my tires and my fuel, of spending less and saving more, of eating less and working harder, of asking less and giving more.

HELP ME see that while the war may be won no matter what I do, the light we fight to keep alive may go out because of what I prove myself to be.

HELP ME to realize that Americans are fighting today, not to create freedom and opportunity for the ruthless and greedy, but to make it possible for kind men, men of integrity, responsible men, to work in peace, and to work for the common good.

HELP ME realize that these fighting men—indeed, the good men and women of the whole world—are waiting now for one small but all-important sign from me:

THEY KNOW I can't join them in the blood and dirt. But they want to see if I will seek responsibility. They wait now to see if I need merely to be led to do my part, or if I must be driven. For that will tell them if their spirit is also my spirit, and their purpose mine.

HELP ME not to fail them. Amen.

Church service was over, and three of the congregation walked home together, discussing the message they had heard.

"I tell you," said the first, enthusiastically, "Dr. Blank can certainly dive deeper into the truth than any minister I ever heard!"

"Yes," said the second man, "and he can stay under longer."

"Yes," echoed the third, "and come up drier."

On Her Last Legs

What's in a name? We'll let you guess!

Tilly—How do you feel now?

Lilly—Terrible; I feel as if I was going to die.

Tilly—You can't die in here; this is the living room.

Preliminary

Young Reporter—And are you really going to retire from the stage?

Actress—Oh, no. This is merely a farewell tour.

BROADLY SPEAKING

Jones—Have you seen our friend Lem lately?

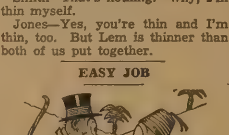
Smith—No, I haven't seen him for several days. What's wrong with him?

Jones—He's gotten terribly thin. I'm worried about him.

Smith—That's nothing. Why, I'm thin myself.

Jones—Yes, you're thin and I'm thin, too. But Lem is thinner than both of us put together.

EASY JOB



"They say man is descended from us."

"Maybe that's why it's so easy for any woman to make a monkey of a man."

WOMAN'S WRATH

A youngster, very much out of breath, rushed into a police station. "You're—wanted —down—our street —and bring an ambulance," he gasped to an officer.

"What's the trouble?" demanded the officer. "And why the ambulance?"

"Because," explained the youngster, when he had recovered his breath, "mother's discovered the woman who stole our door-mat!"

Not So Surprising

Like we said, it all depends on your point of view ——

Mr. Jones—And I saw him treating his wife in a way I wouldn't treat a dog.

Mrs. Jones—Oh, my dear! What was he doing to her?

Mr. Jones—He was kissing her.

Smells Mad

Henry—I suppose you were pretty mad when you stumbled over that skunk.

Harry—Mad. I was highly incensed.

Egg Slices Ring Around Lima Bean Casserole
(See Recipes Below)

Nutritious Dishes

Are you struggling with the problems of planning meals with rationing or depleted stocks of food? Do you get late to market some days and find you can't find what you wanted? Then, today's recipes and suggestions will be of real help to you—for these times are real problems for every homemaker.

Now that you are shopping not only with a budget but also with a point budget, you must plan carefully so as not to use all the precious points before your month is up. Use as many unrationed foods as possible, and budget those points carefully which you have to use. Never lose sight of nutrition qualities however, for your body must be properly fed to do its work.

Lima beans, rich source of vegetable protein, thiamin and riboflavin make an excellent meat extender. With three eggs and careful seasoning, it will have an unmistakable appeal—and plenty of hearty satisfaction:

Lima Beans California.
(Serves 6)

2 cups dried limas
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup hot water
2 hard-cooked eggs
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1 egg beaten
1 tablespoon lemon juice

To cook dried lima beans, soak in cold water 4 to 5 hours or overnight. Before dinner, cook in same water 20 minutes, add salt and cook 20 minutes longer or until beans are tender.

Cream butter, add salt, pepper, parsley, lemon juice, and beaten egg. Mix well, add hot water, then pour over limas and cook in double boiler until creamy. Turn into a hot vegetable dish and arrange hard-cooked eggs over top and sprinkle finely chopped parsley in a border around dish.

Plump limas combined with another good protein food, cheese, in this dish, meet the requirements of a good main dish:

Lima Bean Cheese Loaf.
(Serves 6)

2 cups cooked, dried lima beans, pureed
1 cup cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ cup onion, minced
¼ cup ham, ground
2 tablespoons parsley, minced
½ cup American cheese, shredded
¼ cup milk
2 tablespoons chili sauce
½ cup meat stock

This Week's Menu
*Lima Bean Cheese Loaf
Orange-Apple Salad
Oatmeal Refrigerator Rolls
Snow Pudding Custard Sauce
Beverage
*Recipe Given

One cup of dried lima beans makes about 3 cups when cooked. Soak them overnight in cold water, then cook for 20 minutes, add salt and cook 10 to 20 minutes more until tender. To puree lima beans, put through a sieve.

Brown onion and green pepper in butter. Blend all ingredients except stock together thoroughly. Pack into a well-greased loaf tin. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 50 minutes. Baste frequently with stock.

An excellent tomato sauce to serve with this loaf can be made by sauteeing 2 tablespoons minced onion and 2 tablespoons chopped celery in 2 tablespoons butter. Add to this 2 bay leaves, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 can tomato soup. Simmer 10 minutes, strain, and serve with loaf.

Several times recently when I have visited the butcher, he has offered me pork tenderloin. This is an excellent tasting meat—very rich in vitamin B1 or thiamin, which prevents nervousness, restlessness, listlessness and tiredness.

Breaded Pork Tenderloin.
(Serves 4)

1 pound pork tenderloin
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup fine bread crumbs
1 egg
2 tablespoons water or milk
Meat drippings

Cut tenderloin into 2-inch sections. Flatten. Season with salt and pepper. Dip in crumbs, slightly beaten egg, diluted, and again in crumbs. Let stand in refrigerator 15 minutes. Brown on both sides on hot drippings. Cover and cook slowly for 30 minutes.

An unrestricted meat is tongue—you don't have to carry a ration book to get it at your butcher's. Learn how to cook it, and you will really discover a culinary delight for your family:

Tongue With Carrots in Spinach Nests.

1 fresh beef tongue
Water
2 teaspoons salt
3½ cups cooked spinach
2 cups cooked, diced carrots

Cover tongue with water and add salt. Cover. Allow to simmer 1 hour to each pound of tongue, or until tongue is tender. Remove from water and skin. Serve hot, sliced. Arrange nests of spinach and carrots on platter around tongue.

Smothered Chicken.
(Serves 4)

2 pounds chicken
1 pound mushrooms
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or fat
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon flour

Cut chicken in serving pieces and brown in fat. Slice and fry mushrooms until browned. Place chicken in baking dish, cover with mushrooms. Thicken remaining fat with flour, add salt and pepper, then milk and cook until thickened. Pour sauce over mushrooms and chicken. Cover baking dish and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 45 minutes.

Lynn Chambers welcomes you to submit your household queries to her problem clinic. Send your letters to her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: When you plan meals these days, do it with ration book in hand. Remember, you're spending not only money but points and that requires extra keeping of accounts.

Plan meals in advance keeping in mind what you need and what points you can use to best advantage with it. Don't squander points. If, for example, you have an eight-point coupon, and need something valued at six points, try not to use the eight-point coupon except with anything which corresponds with it.

Since canned and packaged goods will be at a premium, plan those menus carefully. Don't do without fruits and vegetables if the coupons are used up—have plenty of fresh, unrationed ones on hand.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

PETER AND JOHN BECOME DISCIPLES OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—John 1:29-42; Mark 1:16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.—Mark 1:17.

Personal faith in Christ is the heart of Christian experience. Since persons are won by other persons it was vitally important that the Lord choose the right disciples at the very beginning of the Church. Outstanding among the twelve disciples were Peter and John, whose lives and letters we study during the next three months.

The manner in which they became disciples is of unusual interest—and is instructive as well. We will observe that our Lord is working in much the same way on the Peters and Johns of our own day. They came to Him by way of

I. Testimony—They Heard About Jesus (John 1:29-34, 41).

John, who modestly refrains from naming himself (v. 40), heard about Jesus from John the Baptist. His testimony is notable for its pointed presentation of Christ, and its unmistakable desire that they follow Him. John was an important man with a vigorous message, but he recognized that his only real business for God was to point men to Christ. He enjoyed having men follow him, but only that he might lead them to Jesus.

In doing Christian work we should learn so to bear our testimony that we may magnify Christ, and not ourselves. We must be careful to win men to Christ, and not to ourselves or our cause or church.

Peter was brought to Jesus by his brother Andrew. Andrew was a quiet, modest man of whom we do not read that he preached a single sermon. But he did do personal work (see John 6:8, 9; 12:21, 22). He has been called "Andrew the finder." May "his tribe" increase. We need more like him.

Hearing about Jesus is not enough. There must be the next step, the indispensable personal meeting with the Lord.

II. Experience—They Saw Jesus (John 1:35-39, 42).

The necessity of a personal experience with Christ is so clearly stated in Scripture that one can only marvel that it is so neglected in many churches today.

Neither John the Baptist nor, later, Andrew was content to tell about Jesus. They brought John and Peter to the Lord. John said, "Behold the Lamb of God" (v. 36); and Andrew "brought him to Jesus" (v. 42). These sum up the soul-winner's duty. We must bring our family, our friends, yes, the stranger with whom we deal, into the presence of Jesus.

He will look into their eyes and into their souls and see in them all the gifts and graces which may make them useful to Him (v. 42). John was the brother of James and Peter the brother of Andrew—just two humble fishermen in the sight of men. But Jesus saw in them two of the most useful men who have ever lived. Let us give Him a chance to deal with our friends and acquaintances.

Hearing and seeing are both excellent, but they lack one final step—and here it is—

III. Action—They Followed Jesus (John 1:40; Mark 1:16-20).

First of all they followed Jesus in becoming believers on Him as the Messiah. That experience of John's we find in John 1:40, and of Peter's (by inference) in verse 42. There is no salvation apart from that act of the will which follows a knowledge of Christ.

In the passage in Mark we find Him calling them to leave their secular calling as fishers of fish to follow Him and become fishers of men. Before they could become what He wanted them to be, they had to do something—rise up and follow Him.

Their unquestioning response indicated their faith, but, more than that, it showed that they were the kind of obedient men who could be used of the Lord. Jesus might have called His disciples from the learned and the mighty. But one wonders whether they would have been willing to respond without argument, and to learn of Him without prejudice or preconceived ideas of theology.

God must often pass the mighty and the noble of this world, and call those who are foolish enough to believe Him and obey (read I Cor. 1:17-29). The reason is given there—"That no flesh should glory in his presence." The glory belongs to the Lord, not to His servants.

Because they did obey they became "fishers of men." He led them, trained them, encouraged them, blessed them, and used them.

A disciple is a "learner," but he is learning for a purpose. Learning for its own sake, as an ornament or a selfish pleasure, is always a sad thing, but with the disciple of Christ it cannot be that if he rightly knows Christ.

The disciple is to win other disciples. That is the very heart of Christian witness.

Our Navy Launched 159 Fighting Ships in Year

During the 12 months following Pearl Harbor, the United States navy launched 159 fighting ships, or four times as many as the corresponding types sunk by enemy action, says Collier's. Among these new vessels were three battleships, six aircraft carriers, ten cruisers, 107 destroyers and 33 submarines, having a total estimated tonnage of 558,000.

In addition, American shipyards produced more than 7,000,000 tons of merchant shipping.

Italy's Life Lines

Switzerland's heavily mined Simplon, Lotschberg and Saint Gotthard tunnels are the life lines of Italy. Eighty per cent of all the coal, oil, ore, food and other vital war supplies which Germany sends to Italy are shipped through these three tunnels in the Alps. The Swiss are prepared to blow up the tunnels in the event of a German invasion.

Telling time in the Navy is on the 24-hour system. Morning hours are from one to twelve, but afternoon hours are from 1300 to 2400 (midnight). So if you ask a sailor the time and he says "seventeen," subtract 12 and you get five o'clock in the afternoon. It's simpler if you ask him what cigarette he smokes. Chances are he'll say: "Camel," for Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as well as among men in the Army, Marines, Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) Local dealers are featuring Camel cartons as gifts for men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

Diner Was Quick to Recognize an Old Friend

As a man entered a restaurant and sat down at a table the man already there looked up with a smile of recognition.

"Pardon me, sir," he said, "I think we met a fortnight ago."

After a brief glance of inspection, the other man shook his head negatively.

"Sorry," he said, "but I don't know you."

"Maybe not. I don't know you, but I recognized that umbrella you're carrying."

"That's impossible, sir! A fortnight ago I had no umbrella."

"No," came the quick retort, "but I had!"

SCHOOL BUS OPERATION IN ALABAMA ECONOMICAL

Montgomery — Alabama operates its school buses at the most economical rate known in the South, Dr. E. B. Norton, state superintendent of education, said today. In the 1941-42 fiscal year, Alabama school buses transported 233,597 pupils at a cost of $2,100,000—a per capita cost of $8.99.

"This compares with a per capita cost of $14.15 in Kentucky, $20.18 in Texas, $13.26 in Tennessee, $14.42 in Mississippi, $19.04 in Lousiana, $11.29 in Arkansas, $10.46 in Vrginia, $13.46 in South Carolina, $17.34 in Florida, $14.64 n Georgia and $19.68 in Maryland. North Carolina operates under a different system, so a fair comparison there is not possible.

"With the exception of Texas, which transported 333,510 pupils at a cost of $6,729,000, Alabama transported the largest number of pupils of any Southern state. We also compare favorably with Pennsylvania, which has a per capita cost of $21.20, Indiana $23.11 and Ohio $24.05."

INOCULATION IMPORTANT IN PEANUT PRODUCTION

An increase of more than 100 pounds of marketable peanuts have been realized per acre by inoculating seed peanuts with commercial culture, reports Dr. H. R. Albrecht, experiment station agronomist, Alabama polytechnic Institute.

The cultures used in these tests contained new strains of bacteria which have been produced by the commercial laboratories in recent years. Dr. Albrecht believes that they are superior to the cultures which were put out several years ago and that they should be used where peanuts have not been grown before and that they should be tried even in the old peanut sections of the State. These cultures may be secured through local seed dealers.

BIBLE SAVES LIFE OF SOLDIER

(NOTE: Herewith is presented a letter from a lieutenant in the United States Army in some far-off battle front to his sister in Pennsylvania. The original is in the possession of Rev. Ray B. White of Zarephath, N. J.)

The Wilds of Nowhere, The Land of Death and Destruction.

Dear Sirs:

In writing this letter to you, I don't know where to start first. So many things have happened since I last wrote. Well, to begin with, I have escaped death at the hand of an enemy in a way so amazing I am still in a daze. You remember I told you when I knew I was going over, I was going over armed with the Bible That Bible is the reason I am still here and able to write this letter to all America.

"Here is my story: My buddy and I were sent out on duty with our unit, equipped in the work I told you before was our job.

We had just received information—the most important in weeks. When we were discovered by the enemy, I gave my buddy the information we had collected, told him to beat it with it and prepared myself to face them. It was the first time I'd been faced with the necessity of pointing my gun at a man and blasting the life from his miserable body. I thought fast; then I said, Lord, it's Your responsibility, now. My buddy had not obeyed my order. He had no such scruples. As I reached for my carbine, a shot from one of them struck me in the breast and blasted me down. Thinking I was dead, my pal jumped for me, grabbed my carbine as well as his own, stood astride my body, blasting away with both guns. He was blasted too—his knees with three bullet wounds. But when he finished, there was not one of them left. He was amazed when I rolled over and tried to get up. The force of the bullet had stunned me. Dazedly, I wondered why I pulled that little Bible out of my pocket and in utter muteness looked at the ugly hole in the cover. It had ripped through Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, on through the Pentateuch, on through the other books, Samuel, Kings, Chronicles, and kept going. Where do you think it stopped? In the middle of Psalm 91, pointing like a finger at these verses: "A thousand shall fall at Thy side, and ten thousand at Thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh Thee. Only with thine eyes shalt Thou behold and see the reward of the wicked."

"Sis, when I read that verse that raised me three feet off the ground. I did not know there was such a verse in the Bible. I'd been reading mostly in the New Testament. I read the rest of that chapter—the first part that ripped apart. In utter humility I said, 'Thank you, precious God,' and felt like a little boy that had escaped the mouth of an enemy of prey.

"When I got my buddy back to the post, he said, 'Lute (he calls me Lute), I've had enough. This convinces me. Come on—I want to get right with God starting right now.' He wouldn't let them tend his wounds. He said, 'Nothing matters now but this.' He stayed on his knees 16 hours with three wounds. His body became numb, he couldn't move it. But he wouldn't give up. When the Lord finally came in he moved. That soldier went crazy for God. He jumped over chairs (I mean boxes). He even ran outside and shouted to the whole camp.

"Since I've given my heart to God and talked with the boys, holding meetings and prayed with them, God has given me 25 souls. Twenty-five of my buddies have prayed through and come out for God. God even gave me my general. It took a long time. He was so dignified. But God told me to go after him.

I stuck on his trail until he was grounded and came through. The Spirit of God hovered over that tent with a sort of glimmering golden haze. I tell you, Sis, prayer is going to win this, not guns alone. Fervent agonizing prayer I know is. God is bringing them in one by one. The whole company will be a company of praying men. God has promised them to me, given me the assurance. Think of it —120 praying men and one general in one regiment! When that happens this unit will be unconquerable. Pray, Sis, pray as you have never prayed before. Tell everyone to pray. Tell all America to go on its knees.

Talks About Palestine

Rev. Roswell Owens, pastor of First Baptist Church of Clanton, began a series of talks on Palestine last Sunday evening. These talks will be on the customs and life of the people of Palestine and on the city itself. If you haven't heard Rev. and Mrs. Owens tell about Palestine as they know it from living there so long as missionaries, then you have missed something you need.

It will make you realize that there really is a "Palestine" where Jesus lived, still standing today. These talks are to be given each Sunday evening at the First Baptist Church in Clanton at 7:30 o'clock. Come and bring somebody with you.

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES

THE VICTORY BOND DRIVE IS ON

Speeches will be made. letters will be written. volumes of printed matter will be released to the press and the radio will play its part. It all boils down to a simple question, viz.:

Should I buy bonds to help out?

There are many reasons why you should. It does not appear necessary here to repeat these reasons. After all, the answer is with you. Get off to yourself and reason this thing out. Consider the present position of you and your family and compare this with the condition that could exist if the United Nations lost this war. What is the condition in the countries that have already lost?

Can we lose the war? The answer is absolutely YES!

Wars are lost by nations at their weakest point. Now we have strong points and we have weak points. One think we can depend on. our boys will not lose. They do not know how to lose. They are Americans.

Chilton County has sent over fifteen hundred boys to the service. We can't abandon them after they get into the service. We have got to stay with them. We have got to see that they have the food, the ammuition, the guns, the tanks and planes. Now these things do not grow on trees. The governmet can and does supply them, but the government has got to have money in order to do this, and the money has got to come from the people. If we fail, then the weak point has been found—it is the home front.

Chilton County has a quota to meet. Now. in the month of April. Chilton County is not in the habit of failing and Chilton County will not fail now.

Invest your money in these bonds. There is absolutely no question as to their safety. The income is reasonable and this is the one way you can say to the boys, "we are with you."

Ask yourself this question, "if every one in the United States did just what I am doing, would we win the war." If your answer is "yes," then keep up the good work. If your answer is "no," then enlist yonr dollars in this cause. Protect yourself, your family, your freedom.

The committees who will work on this drive will be very busy. they have a tremendous job. Cooperate with them and buy bonds 'till it hurts. Adolph Hitler will not like it if you buy these bonds. He would much prefer that the home front break down. He might want to use you as one of his slave laborers. He might want your child to work in German factories. Let Chilton County's slogan be "We Will Win Or We Will Die."

F. J. CALLEN, Chairman
Victory Fund Drive.

THEY DESERVE CREDIT

Chilton County Chapter American Red Cross has completed its War Fund Drive. The citizens of the county who cooperated in this most worthy undertaking are deserving of all the credit they get for a hard job well done. They have worked tirelessly to accomplish what they knew to begin with was a huge undertaking, what with all the other drives and campaigns that are being staged to raise monies for this and that.

Anyway, it's over and much of the credit must go to Leo Thompson and Dock Levine, co-chairmen of the organization, and to Miss Ruth Hicks, of Stanton, who turned in the largest amount of any individual during the drive Theirs played a big part in final victory.

It is not possible to name everyone who contributed his time and money to make the drive a success. Let us just say that we all did the very best we could and are happy in the outcome of the campaign.

UNITY ASSOCIATIONAL MEETING

On Tuesday of this week one of the most inspirational meetings ever held in this association was called to order at the Baptist Church in Maplesville by Mrs. Roswell Owens, who was presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. Grady Heflin. (The meeting opened with the hymn, "Tell Me the Old, Old Story," and the devotional message was brought by Mrs. Boykin, using the 10th Chapter of Luke as her Bible study.

Most interesting talks were given during the morning session by Mrs. J. Z. Mims, Clanton; Rev. Cary Cox, of Prattville; Mrs. Hudgins. of Birmingham, and Rev. Owens.

Lunch was served and a most enjoyable fellowship hour was held after which the afternoon session was opened with prayer and Mrs. Owens told something of the customs and people in Palestine and Bethlehem.

A business session was held and the meeting closed with the hymn, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," dedicated to the son of Mrs. Jones, of Alpine, and all the other boys "Over There."

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE MEETING HERE APRIL 10

There will be a meeting of the Old Age Assistance Association of Chilton County on Saturday, April 10, beginning at 10 o'clock a.m., the same to be held at the courthouse. An outstanding speaker will be present to address the meeting. All are invited, young and old.—Dr. V. J. Gragg. chairman.

Rationing News

OPA today reminded all farmers that both large and small producers of country butter must report their retail sales of rationed items and turn in all point coupons collected within 15 days of the end of the first reporting period—which in the normal case will be the period ending April 30.

At the same time, several creamery officials reported concern over the drop in cream sales to their plants by farmers who had customarily sold all or most of their cream to commercial butter plants. They maintain the drop in cream sales will result in a corresponding drop in deliveries of butter to the armed forces which receive 30 per cent of all creamery butter produced.

This, the creamery, men allege. results from the fact that more farmers are churning butter for sale to consumers and consequently are not selling their cream for commercial butter production.

Outlining the requirements for farmers who sell butter direct to consumers under the fat rationing program, OPA officials said both small and large producers are governed by individual sets of rules.

Small producers, whose gross sales during the first period of all items rationed under the meat and fats program were less than $2,000, must turn coupons collected from consumer sales into their local war price and rationing boards. As part of this report, they will indicate their inventory and ther sales of any rationed commodities. A duplicate of their first report will constitute their registration.

Large farmer - producers, whose gross sales of all ratoned items were more than $2,000 during the first period must file similar reports and turn in their point coupons to the nearest State or district OPA office.

OPA recommends that farmers adopt the calendar month as their reporting period, although they may elect to use either a four-week period or a combination of four and five week periods, the result of dividing the year into 12 equal periods.

Let us examine your eyes before it is too late. Upchurch Drug Co.

Chilton County Share Three Hundred And Eleven Thousand Dollars

Although only 14 billion dollars has been raised in War Bonds in the past two years, Mr. and Mrs. America has been called upon to buy 13 billion dollars worth in April.

Of that amount Chilton County's share will amount to $311.000. Committees have already been named by the Victory Bond chairman, F. J. Callen, who is working with the War Saving chairman, L. H. Reynolds, in placing Chilton County in the Victory Column before April 30th, when the drive ends.

According to Mr. Callen, a complete committee will be named for each type of business, each profession, government agency. municipality. for the county employees, etc. Also there will be a committee functioning in each community. House to house canvassing will be practiced throughout the campaign to reach every man, woman and child who will buy a bond.

At a meeting held last Friday afternoon at the courthouse personal contact in selling War Savings Bonds was the keynote of the speech making and that is the system that will be followed in this campaign.

Remember, the drive starts Monday, April 12th. If you have already bought bonds, buy more — if you haven't, buy some NOW!

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is a partial list of committees in the April War Bond Drive for Chilton County's quota of $311,000. The list is not complete and if you are willing to help, get in touch with Mr. Callen or Mr. Reynolds and they will add your name to the group in which you wish to serve. *Greet the Day With a Well-Balanced Breakfast
(See Recipes Below)

Good Morning!

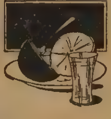
What's your breakfast? A squirt of orange juice and a sip of coffee or fruit, cereal, eggs, toast and coffee? No need to tell you which one you can start a man-sized day's work on, is there? A breakfast should supply almost a third of the day's calories and food value.

A slight breakfast will prevent you from waking up fully—and thus starting to realize your full quota of production whether you're on the home or factory front. But, treat the first meal of the day with the same respect you do the other two, and you find yourself refreshed and more than ready to do your job—and do it well.

If you're still in doubt about the value of a good breakfast, look at breakfasts fed servicemen. Do you think they could get up and do their work if it weren't for fruit, cereals, eggs, toast or hotbread and beverage for their first fare of the day? No, ma'am.

Breakfast affords a grand chance for you to get your vitamin B1—that important morale vitamin which prevents nervousness and restlessness. You need this vitamin every day—and its best sources are whole grain cereal and bread—and yeast.

On warmer days, serve oatmeal or whole wheat cereal, on cooler days, use the enriched, ready-to-eat cereals which are unrationed. When the berries and fruits start coming in, use a few of them with the cereals for a delightful breakfast dish.



Breakfast is a good way to take care of the citrus fruit requirement of the day, too. A half grapefruit, a large orange or a large glass of orange juice will fulfill the vitamin C quota of the day. Remember, however, that vitamin C is easily destroyed by air, and that means you should not squeeze or cut up oranges until just before serving.

Old-Fashioned Popovers.

3 eggs
1½ cups milk
1½ cups enriched flour
½ teaspoon salt

Sift flour and salt into a bowl. Beat eggs and add milk to them and stir gradually into the flour to make a smooth batter, then beat thoroughly with egg beater; put in hot greased muffin tins two-thirds full of mixture. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) half hour, then in moderate (350 degree) oven 15 minutes until brown. Note: No leavening agent is used in popovers, and their rising action is dependent upon thorough beating.

Lynn Says:

Make Rationing Work: Keep food essentials in mind when planning your menus, and use point-rationed food to best advantage. When you spend any of your coupons for rationed food, make sure you are not buying anything that you could buy fresh.

In buying meats buy those of which you get the most for your points. Extend whatever cuts of meat you can with cereals, stuffings, food extenders and vegetables to make them go further.

Start today to save sugar and put it in a bank so that you will have enough for the canning you are going to do this summer. Do not use sugar anywhere that you possibly can avoid it. Start planning your victory garden, so that you will be ready to put up as much of your share in fruits and vegetables.

Buy quality foods to get the most value of your points. This applies to canned and processed foods, meat, cheese and butter.

*Recipes Given

If possible, have eggs for breakfast—with bacon, if you can manage it, but remember that a nice hot bowlful of oatmeal will give a goodly quantity of health. Then, of course, you can vary the menu with pancakes, french toast and waffles when the mood strikes you.

Baked pears or apples are a good fruit for breakfast variation. Try apples this way:

Baked Apple With Orange Marmalade Filling.

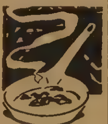
Select apples that are suitable for baking. Core, and fill cavities with orange marmalade. Prick skins with fork and place in a baking pan with a little water. Cover with lid and bake in a slow oven until tender. Remove lid just long enough to brown.

Creamed Chipped Beef Omelet. (Serves 8)

1 cup chipped beef, cut fine
1½ cups white sauce
6 eggs
6 tablespoons top milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper



Fold chipped beef into white sauce. Beat eggs until fluffy, then add milk, salt and pepper. Melt enough butter or margarine into a heavy skillet to cover bottom and sides of pan, pour in eggs and shake gently over fire. When set, loosen sides and bottom, cover with heated creamed beef, carefully fold over with spatula, and slide onto hot platter. Serve at once.

For variety, there are many types of griddle cakes:

Sour Milk Griddle Cakes.

1½ cups flour
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon sugar
2 eggs

Sift flour and sugar; dissolve soda in buttermilk and add to flour. Drop in unbeaten eggs and beat well, then fold in butter. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot, greased griddle and brown on both sides.

Flannel Cakes.

2 eggs
1½ cups milk
2 cups enriched flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
3 teaspoons baking powder

Sift all dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks and add to milk. Pour this into the flour, add melted butter, and lastly the well-beaten eggs. Drop by spoonfuls on hot, greased griddle and serve with syrup, preserves or jelly.

Crisp Waffles.
(Makes 4 4-section waffles)

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks, well beaten
1 cup milk
⅓ cup melted shortening
2 egg whites

Sift flour, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift again. Combine egg yolks and milk, add to flour, beating until smooth. Add shortening. Beat egg whites until they hold up but are still moist, then fold into batter. Bake on hot waffle iron.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

PETER AND JOHN WITNESS CHRIST'S GLORY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-8; II Peter :16-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Mark 9:7.

Christ is God! The one who comes to know that truth is ready to follow Christ, and to make Him known to others. The want of such a true conception of the Son of God weakens our convictions and hinders our usefulness.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish," said the wise man (Prov. 29:18). For want of a true vision of Christ as God, and the God-given constraint which makes men give themselves in sacrificial service, the people perish in their sins.

Peter and John saw our Lord in His transfiguration, and the glow of that experience lighted their entire life and ministry. The touch of the supernatural was on these men and their message—for they had seen the glory of Christ.

I. The Amazing Glory of the Son (Mark 9:2-6).

The transfiguration of Christ is one of those wonderfully beautiful and deeply spiritual experiences which defy analysis or satisfactory description. Poetry and art have vainly tried to depict it only to become "in fact a confession of the impotence of the loftiest art to rise to the level of the divine" (Van Dyke).

Peter was so dazzled that he could only suggest that they remain there, forgetting for the moment that down in the valley was demon-ridden humanity waiting for the divine deliverance of the Son of God (see Luke 9:37-42).

What took place on the mount can possibly best be explained as the outshining of the inner glory of the Christ. He had laid aside His glory when He became flesh, but not His divine attributes as very God. There in the presence of God and the heavenly visitors that glory shone through His humanity and His appearance became dazzling in its whiteness.

II. The Approving Word of the Father (Mark 9:7, 8).

A cloud, like the cloud which filled the Temple of old (I Kings 8:10,11), covered them, and the Father spoke out of it words of approval of His Son.

These words carry "both judgment and command; judgment concerning Jesus, 'This is my beloved Son,' and command to the disciples, 'Hear ye him'—that is, 'Listen to him' " (Lesson Commentary.)

John and Peter came to a fuller conviction that He was the Son of God as they saw Him transfigured and heard the words of the Father. They learned more plainly the fact that He was God manifest in the flesh for the redemption of man. They saw in the indescribable beauty of that moment a foregleam of His coming glory. What important truths —His deity, His redemption, His coming kingdom. Have we learned them as we have beheld His glory?

III. The Assured Faith of the Disciples (II Pet. 1:16-18).

These words were written by Peter when he was nearly eighty years of age—about thirty-five years after the transfiguration. John wrote sixty years after the event and said, "We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (John 1:14).

The one who follows these eyewitnesses in believing in Christ may share their assurance expressed by Peter that we do not "follow cunningly devised fables" in making known to the world the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our faith is built on God's Word, and upon such testimony as this by eyewitnesses. Here is real ground for assured belief in Christ.

Great experiences of spiritual renewing and power lead to effective life and testimony for Christ. They may not be in outward manifestations, in fact they are most often in the inner recesses of man's soul; but they do transform men and send them forth to magnificent living for God. One wonders if much of the dearth of power in the Christian Church is not to be attributed directly to the lack of such experiences with God.

The disciples had an unforgettable mountain-top experience. Even so have many others found the secret of power. It came to D. L. Moody as he walked down a New York street, praying in agony, "Deliver me from myself. Take absolute sway." The story of what happened to him and through him as a surrendered instrument in God's hand is written large on the pages of history. Others have had similar experiences.

Let us remember that such privileges are not reserved for a few, they are the birthright of every Christian. Power without knowledge is a dangerous and destructive thing, but knowledge without power is a dead thing, resulting in a stale and unfruitful orthodoxy that in turn produces a dreadful and unchristian religious system.

Tot's Wardrobe

WHAT the well-dressed young lady of 1 to 5 years will wear this spring is right here—a gaily printed ensemble consisting of playsuit, overall and dress. Everyone's going to be the happier for these clothes—the youngster because they are so pretty and sensible and her mother because they are practically no bother at all.

* * *

Pattern No. 8363 is in sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 2 dress takes 1⅝ yards 35-inch material, overall 1⅜ yards, playsuit ⅝ yard; 8½ yards binding.

Pigeons Being Trained In U. S. as Commandos

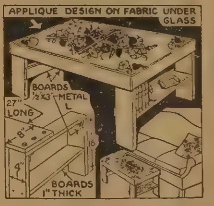
Several hundred pigeons now being trained as carriers of messages for the United States forces are undergoing a strenuous Commando course.

To get them accustomed to the black-out the birds, which normally roost at night, are sent out in the darkness to make two-way flights. They are also trained to return to roosts mounted on trailers which sometimes remain only a few days at one station.

To get them ready for battle conditions aeroplanes are used to dive at them, and they fly amid exploding firecrackers. They are given medical attention, and, like the troops, they get leave.

In the RAF there are instances on record in this war of these couriers flying through battles to deliver messages despite a bullet wound in the breast or the loss of a leg.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS



IT ALL started with a bright idea for making a simple, painted coffee table from odds and ends. The sketch at the lower left gives the dimensions and shows the simple construction. Two end sections were made first; the top and sides of these being fastened together with metal angles, as illustrated. A shelf was then nailed in and a ½ by 3-inch board nailed across the back of it. Two boards for the top of the table were then screwed to the end sections.

So far the table was substantial but crude and that is where the lady with the needle came in. The table was to be painted putty color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and appliqued a design of bright blue and red morning glories and green leaves on it with stems and tendrils in green outline stitch. This was placed over the table top and tacked around the edge. A piece of glass was then cut to fit and ½ by 3-inch pieces were screwed to the sides flush with the top of glass.

* * *

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a sheet—17 by 22 inches—giving complete dimensions and directions for making this table. Even the gal who is just learning to do small chores with hammer, saw and screw driver can follow these simple, clear directions. To get a copy ask for Design 254, address:

Retentive Minds

Many psychologists believe that everything we have heard, said or experienced in our lives is retained in the subconscious mind, but that most of these details rarely return except under exceptional circumstances.

Classic case cited is that of an illiterate servant girl who, while delirious, repeated numerous passages in Hebrew, Greek and Latin which she had overheard a former employer recite in his study.

Smile Awhile

Settles It

"They say brunettes have better dispositions than blondes."

"Bunk! Jean has been both, and I never noticed any difference."

No Limit

"A dollar doesn't go as far as it used to."

"No, but see how much faster it goes."

Their Source

"Your husband ought to be more generous with you, my dear. Now, every time I'm in the dumps, I just get myself a new hat."

"Is that so, darling? I often wondered where you found them."

Gentle art of making enemies: When a woman asks you, "I don't look thirty, do I?" reply, "Not any more."

Another View

"Is Jack conceited?"

"Is he conceited? Why, he joined the navy to let the world see him!"

Going Along

A well-known author met an old Negro called Uncle Joe, who was always cheerful in spite of having had more than his share of life's troubles.

"How have you managed to retain your calmness and cheerfulness in spite of them all?" asked the author.

"Well, sah, Ah'll tell you," replied Uncle Joe, "Ahse jest learned to co-operate wid de inevitable."

Just Imagine

"George, why do you close your eyes so tight when you kiss me?"

"I'm trying to imagine you're Dorothy Lamour."

Hair-Raising

"I told Jim all my past history yesterday."

"What did he say?"

"Oh, nothing. He just took out a comb and smoothed his hair down."

Services of USO

The USO now has more than 650 clubs, 300 units and lounges, 100 information centers and 50 mobile units in 500 cities and towns of this country, for the service and entertainment of our soldiers, reports Collier's. The organization also maintains 70 road shows, with 1,000 performers, the scenery, salaries and traveling expenses of which will amount to about $4,000,000 in 1943.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Laboratory tests demonstrate that rubber can be made to stretch from 50 to 1000 percent or to have no stretch at all, as in hard rubber.

A cubical piece of about half an inch of the substance we now know as rubber was selling for three shillings in London art shops in 1770. It was then called rubber because it could erase pencil marks.

The first articles of rubber to be manufactured were clothing and shoes.

American seamen are now equipped with rubber life-saving suits weighing slightly over 14 pounds. This new buoyant suit features a whistle, flashlight, knife and yellow hood and gloves to attract rescuers. Weighted shoes keep the wearer upright in the water.

SARDIS

We had a good attendance at church and Sunday School last Sunday. A good message was rendered by the pastor, Rev. Hyman Athercon, which was enjoyed by all.

A good message was delivered by the Rev. Floyd Smith, Sunday night, which I'm sure was enjoyed by all and we invite him to come back again.

Everyone remember prayer service Thursday night at the church. Come and bring some one with you.

Mrs. Cecil Bovor and daughter spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ratliff.

Miss Mattie B. White spent Saturday night with Miss Billie Ruth Deason.

Miss Rubye Edwards of Selma spent a while Sunday with her mother.

Miss Sara Traywick, of Birmingham, visited her parents Sunday.

Miss Janie Ruth Lewis dined with Miss Mattie B. White, Sunday.

Miss Annie Pearl Edwards dined with Miss Billie Ruth Deason, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Traywick are the proud parents of a fine baby girl whom they have named Charlotte Annette.

Every one remember Sunday School next Sunday and bring some one with you.

Floyd News

As spring has opened up everybody is busy getting ready for planting their crops.

The health of our community is good at present except Mrs. Leola Pierce is on the sick list this week. We all hope for her a speedy recovery.

Sunday was our regular preaching day. Our crowd was small but we had two wonderful sermons Sunday and Sunday night. We also had a wonderful prayer service Sunday night. We invite every one that will to come and worship with us. We have prayer service every Sunday night.

Lets everybody remember that we have set the time for our Sunday School to start at 10 o'clock (war time). Lets every one be on time if you don't you might miss Sunday School. Lets not be slow in carrying on our Master's work.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Williams and Brother Wilkins were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Taylor, Sunday.

Mrs. A. O. Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. J M. Williams visited Mrs. Leola Pierce a while Sunday afternoon.

Lets everybody remember our singing the third Sunday afternoon. Come and bring your new books. We invite all singers to come and help us. We are looking forward for a wonderful singing.

ANTIOCH

Saturday night we preach at Antioch at 7:30 o'clock and again Sunday morning at 9:30.

Walnut Creek at 11 a.m., Lime Springs at 2:30 p.m., and then back again at Walnut Creek at 7:30 p.m. Everybody has a cordial welcome to any and all of these services.—Rev. Reese Farnell.

FORD-SMITH

Milton Charles Smith wishes to announce the marrage of his daughter, Inez, to Ralph Horton Ford, on Monday the eighth of March, nineteen hundred and forty-three, at the Highland Methodist Church of Birmingham, Ala.

The couple are at home to their many friends at 411 South Broadway, Sylacauga, Ala.

The 2nd War Loan Starts April 12

WAR FINANCE COMMITTEE

13 billion dollars must be raised!

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States is asking us to lend it 13 billion dollars in the next few weeks. We can do it. And we must do it. Every American must realize the truth:

In this, our toughest war, we've made a good start. We've trained a lot of men—made a lot of weapons—built a lot of ships.

But it's only a start. No man or woman among us would contend for a single instant that we're doing enough now to win this war!

We've Got to Build More!

We broke all records building 8 million tons of shipping last year. But grim-faced Army and Navy men will tell you that the 18 MILLION tons we're building this year still won't be enough!

We've Got to Fight More!

From now till this war is won, America must be on the offensive. In ever-increasing numbers, your sons, brothers, husbands must go into actual battle. Our losses have already begun to mount—and they will not grow less.

And We've Got to Buy More War Bonds!

Sure we're all buying War Bonds now. But we've got to help pay for our increased fighting and building . . . We've got to match, as best we can the sacrifice of those Americans who are toiling and sweating on a dozen battlefronts—with the bloodiest yet to come. The blunt fact is this: to keep our war machine going, we've got to dig up 13 billion extra dollars this month. 13 billion dollars over and above our regular War Bond buying!

In the next few weeks you may be visited by one of the thousands of volunteers who are contributing their time and effort to this Drive. But don't wait for him. Make up your mind now that before this drive is over, you're going to march right down to your nearest bank, Post Office, or place where they sell War Bonds, and do your duty. And don't ever forget this: in doing your duty, you're doing yourself one of the biggest favors of your life!

For United States War Bonds are the greatest investment in the world—bar none. They're investments tailored to fit your particular situation. And they give you the chance of a lifetime to order and get the kind of world you want to live in after this war. Every cent you put in War Bonds now will help to guarantee plenty of peace-time jobs making peace-living for every one of us.

For your Country's sake—for your own sake—invest all you can!

There Are 7 Different Types of U. S. Government Securities — Choose The Ones Best Suited For You:

United States War Savings Bonds—Series E: The perfect investment for individual and family savings. Gives you back $4 for every $3 when the Bond matures. Designed especially for the smaller investor. Dated 1st day of month in which payment is received. Interest: 2.9% a year if held to maturity. Denominations: $25, $50, $100, $500, $1000. Redemption: any time 60 days after issue date. Price: 75% of maturity value.

2½% Treasury Bonds of 1964-1969: Readily marketable, acceptable as bank collateral, these Bonds are ideal investments for trust funds, estates and individuals. A special feature provides that they may be redeemed at par and accrued interest for the purpose of satisfying Federal estate taxes. Dated April 15, 1943; due June 15, 1969. Denominations: $500, $1000, $5000, $10,000, $100,000—also $1,000,000 if registered. Redemption: Not callable till June 15, 1964; thereafter at par and accrued interest on any interest date at 4 months' notice. Subject to Federal taxes only. Price: par and accrued interest.

Other Securities: Series "C" Tax Notes; ⅞% Certificates of Indebtedness; 2% Treasury Bonds of 1950-1952; United States Savings Bonds Series "F"; United States Savings Bonds Series "G."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Forces Continue Drive in Tunisia; Pressure for Tough Labor Legislation Halted by Continuation of Coal Parley; Soggy Terrain Hampers Red Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A British Bofors gun as it was pulled toward the front in Tunisia by a British army lorry. Note how the road is lined with German tank debris. In foreground is a Nazi tank turret. This official British photo was made after the Allies repulsed the Germans between Thala and the Kasserine Pass.

TUNISIA:

'Fox' Seeks Cover

When Marshal Rommel threw back the British eighth army in the narrow coastal corridor of Tunisia, it looked like the great struggle of the Mareth line might resolve into a bloody battle of attrition. But then Gen. Bernard Montgomery sent a strong armored column around the southern anchor of the Mareth line and it succeeded in swinging back and trapping the Axis forces from the rear.

Thus faced with heavy pressure from his front and rear, Rommel pulled out his army from the Mareth line. As the British took over Gabes and El Hamma, Rommel was withdrawing northward toward the marshes and salt flats strung out along the coastal plain. Here Rommel is expected to concentrate his army of 80,000 men in the few passable trails.

Threatening Rommel's flank for almost 100 miles up the coastal plain to the north, were two American columns. One was poised at Maknassy and the other at Fondouk. Both overlook roads leading to the main path of Rommel's retreat. Should either of these forces break through the Allies would cut the Axis armies in the south off from those in the north.

BASE:

For Offensive?

When Herbert Morrison, British home security minister, announced that the entire east and south coast of Great Britain to a depth of ten miles was to become a "restricted area," military experts began speeding up their predictions regarding the Allied invasion of Europe.

In fact, the official British announcement declared that there was a possibility that this area might be used as "a base for offensive operations."

Meanwhile, London sources were busy issuing bits of information leading friend and foe alike to believe that as soon as the fighting was over in Tunisia, the invasion of the continent would begin. British, U. S. and Canadian land forces were massed together with air and sea power for this action, these reports indicated, and practically every mile of coastline was said to be the first objective of the United Nations' drive.

BERLIN:

Blocks Busted

One thousand tons of bombs were showered on Berlin by 400 British bombers in the 60th air raid of the war on the German capital. Twenty-one ships failed to return.

The raid on Berlin followed an equally heavy assault on the Nazi submarine base of St. Nazaire. Here, 1,000 tons of bombs also were reported dropped on docks, hangars and warehouses. One-quarter of the city was aflame and seven huge fires raged.

Continuing to pound Germany's vital industrial valley of the Ruhr, RAF bombers pounded the iron, steel and coal center of Bochum, which stands 10 miles east of the great Krupp steel works of Essen. Bombs also were dropped on the engine manufacturing center of Duisberg.

RUSSIA:

New General

All eyes are turned now on General Spring in Russia.

Spring thaws along the entire 2,000-mile Russian front are not expected to be severe because of the relatively mild winter. The degree of bogginess depends upon the intensity of the spring rains.

Soggy terrain has been hampering the Red push on Smolensk. One column bearing down on the Nazi base from the north is reported to have knifed through defensive positions below Bely. Two other columns moving in from the east have encountered stiff resistance. Rains have turned the swampy country into almost impassable quagmires.

Following the Nazi's successful counterattack in the Kharkov and Belgorod areas along the southern front, fighting in this sector has abated. Russian troops are said to hold some positions on the western bank of the Donets river, gained during their recent winter offensive.

LABOR:

Tough Legislation

Extension of the negotiations between the Appalachian soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers union for a 30-day period stalled temporarily the pressure for some of the toughest labor legislation to be given consideration in congress in recent years.

Had the agreement not been reached it had been freely predicted around Capitol Hill that stern steps to curb union activities would have been taken in both house and senate. One such measure which had been reported ready for a quick vote was the Hobbs anti-racketeering bill. Also the senate judiciary committee gave a unanimous indorsement to a measure intended to empower the President to seize and operate any mine or factory whenever a labor dispute halted production. This was the anti-strike law first introduced in November, 1941.

This measure had once been allowed to die because the White House had asked the pressure be taken off.

SKIP-YEAR TAX:

First Defeat

In an action reflecting on both Democratic and Republican leadership the house of representatives rejected the Ruml skip-a-year tax plan and the administration's collection-at-the-source plans.

Excited representatives directed the ways and means committee to draw up a new bill that would put the income taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Representative Martin, Republican leader, had expressed confidence that Republicans would get across the Ruml plan to skip 1942 taxes and let them apply on 1943 income taxes.

Representative McCormack, Democratic leader, failed to keep majority members in line for the administration's collection-at-the-source bills. He was in charge while Speaker Sam Rayburn was absent.

The chamber's defeat of the Ruml plan tossed the controversy back into the lap of the committee. Leaders predicted there will be no effort to revive it until increased tax rates are considered later in the year.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SMALL FAMILIES: Out of the 35 million families in the U. S. in 1940, 85 per cent had two children or less. The birth rate of 1942 also fell below the World War I standard despite the recent record level.

TAXES: Nearly 40 million income tax returns have been filed, the treasury reported, and income tax payments for March approximated $4,500,000,000.

BUMS RUSHED: On a recent night, only 629 vagrants applied for shelter in British institutions. This was the lowest figure in 100 years. 16,911 were housed during the peak of the depression of 1932.

DRAFT: Only employment in essential industry is now considered grounds for draft deferment. Dependency is no longer regarded as a factor.

CONGRESSMEN:

And Garden Seeds

Out of the nation's capital came this message to the country's ambitious 1943 Victory Gardeners:

Don't ask your congressman, whoever he is, for garden seeds. He'll be glad to get you all the informational booklets obtainable (from the department of agriculture) but he hasn't been giving away seeds since 1923.

The practice of giving away seeds was stopped at that time because the packets were cluttering up the Capitol and encouraging great armies of rats to invade the offices of the lawmakers.

Requests are still coming in, say the congressmen, and cannot be filled for no seeds are available.

The fact that such requests have been addressed to congressmen indicates the widespread interest in the Victory Garden program.

FARM LABOR:

New Plans

Shortly after he had been summoned to Washington as the nation's new food administrator, Chester C. Davis conferred with President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard and farm leaders to discuss means of handling the mounting crisis in farm labor. Later, President Roosevelt declared that while Davis was not yet to make known his plans, it was rather definite that a strongly persuasive program to get draft-age men in nonessential pursuits to shift to war jobs, including agriculture.

First objective would now be to get former experienced workers back into dairying. It is here that the farm labor situation is most critical. Employment offices throughout the country are now listing names of dairy farmers needing help and county war boards are urging men between 38-45 with dairy or farm experience to seek re-employment at these places.

Conscientious objectors may be released from camps to take farm jobs; men now classified 4F now on nonessential jobs will be urged to get into essential work; selective service registrants over 45 having dairy experience will be urged to get back into that line of work; and if these methods do not work county war boards will obtain the names of experienced dairy workers who have left the farm and these workers will be urged to return.

CLAUDE WICKARD

The mounting crisis in farm labor

It is predicted that these general methods will be used in solving the labor problem in all other lines of farming in addition to dairying.

Also in the offing is the organization of a "land army" to help harvest the nation's food crops this year. English-speaking workers from the Bahama islands and Jamaica may be brought in for work in the East and Mexicans may be used in the Southwest.

LONE FORTRESS

A single American Flying Fortress wrote its own page of history in the South Pacific when it forced a Japanese convoy of four fast destroyers to turn tail as it attempted to reinforce New Guinea garrisons.

The Fortress spotted the convoy in the same Bismark sea area where a Jap convoy of 22 ships was sunk in March. Although the weather was so bad the bombardier had to drop flares to illuminate the target, he scored a direct hit on the stern of the largest destroyer.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE little town of Brawley, Calif., woke up one morning recently to find a motorized battalion of German troops, armed to the teeth, lining the streets. As the Mexican border's only 25 miles away, the townsfolk were a bit jittery. Then they took another look at the "invaders" and recognized them as Brawley high school boys, drafted by Columbia Pictures to represent a unit of the Nazi Afrika Korps in the picture "Somewhere in Sahara." Humphrey Bogart's starred in it.

Janice Gilbert, who's twenty, has been acting since she was eight, has been on the radio since she was ten. On "The O'Neills" she plays "Janice O'Neill" and also an infant and four children. But her most famous juvenile role is "Little Orphan Annie"—when she tours army camps, entertaining the boys, she gets vociferous requests for a session with "Annie."

The night Ann Ayars, Metro starlet, sang for the boys at Fort MacArthur, Calif., she got a rousing reception, but could have dispensed with part of it. Arriving in a pouring rain, she was escorted to the hall by a new recruit who led her smack into a deep puddle at the stage door. Ann fell in to her hips. She says that most of what the soldiers saw of her was mud!

Any Hollywood personage who discovers Lupe Velez watching him intently is likely to be uneasy; experience shows that Lupe's just gathering material for a devastatingly funny impersonation of him. Her imitations seldom reach the screen, but in "Redhead from Manhattan" she does several imitations of fellow stars. She plays identical cousins, both of whom are revue stars.

*

Lionel Barrymore was in a dangerous spot a while back, and it wasn't one of those things that are part of a scenario, when the actor knows he'll be rescued. Driving home, he miscalculated the depth of flood water near his ranch, and found himself sitting in his stalled car in water up to his neck. The swift current started moving the car toward deeper water. But neighboring farmers came along with chains and hauled the car back onto the highway. The car was ruined, but the famous Barrymore wasn't damaged.

*

When Robert Ryan joined the army he knew that he'd have a job when he came back; he has a contract with RKO that assures his return to the screen at the war's end, at a salary exceeding the one he was getting when he left. His work in "Bombardier" and "The Sky's the Limit" was responsible for the scrapping of the old contract and the writing of the more favorable new one.

*

Bob Hope's set for another of those cross-country tours of army, navy and marine posts and bases, which is good news for the men who'll benefit; he gives them a swell show. In fact, he probably works harder at entertaining servicemen than at anything else.

*

Jack Miller, orchestra director for Kate Smith and "The Aldrich Family," can drop off to sleep any time. He dozed off in the studio before a recent "Aldrich Family" broadcast, so the cast slipped out and sent a page in to wake him and explain that the program was over and all visitors must leave. He spent a frenzied five minutes before he caught up with the truth.

*

ODDS AND ENDS

The voice which Willy Maher uses for "Wilbur" on the Tommy Riggs broadcasts is going into the movies for the second time, as the lead in the Metro cartoon, "The Screwy Squirrel" . . . After three years' preparation, King Vidor is nearly ready to begin production of "America," starring Brian Donlevy . . . Helmut Dantine, the Nazi aviator of "Mrs. Miniver," has a leading role in Warner Bros.' "To the Last Man," starring Errol Flynn . . . New Orleans' famous French market, exactly as it was back in 1885, has been erected as a setting for "Saratoga Trunk." $250,000 has been appropriated for advertising and exploitation of "Mission to Moscow."

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Harold B. Rowe stands in Washington holding a serving spoon that reaches all across the continent. You eat what he dishes out. He counts the beans, the prunes, the pounds of beef, divvies them up among the army, our lend-lease friends, and the home front. He is the OPA's boss of food rationing, and his promise that national control will cramp hoarders and end local shortages makes a pin-up poster that John Citizen wouldn't swap for Hollywood's loveliest.

Here's Chap Who Dishes Out What We Have to Eat

Rowe was born on one of those deep black Iowa farms where any man can learn a lot about food because it is so abundant. He needed the big University of Minnesota to finish his education although he studied first at Iowa State. At Minnesota he moved a step along toward his present eminence as a food expert. He learned to cook. He hired out as a waiter to get the meals he couldn't afford to buy, but when he dropped a tray of glasses the lords of the University cafeteria figured he would do less damage in the kitchen. If he dropped a roast it could be brushed off, and they hoped he'd hang onto pies.

After Minnesota he taught for six years at Massachusetts State college. He has been with the government since 1941. He lives in Kenwood, Md., with his wife, son and daughter, Verna, Marvin and Shirley Ann. He has a round mild face and an easy manner that ought to keep him from looking old for quite a spell. He is in his middle thirties.

TWO brothers of Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, were killed in the last World war and he fought all through it, coming clear with a major's tab and the Military Cross. Today his two sons, like your sons and the sons of everybody else, are in increasing jeopardy with every month that this second World war hangs on. These are reasons why Eden, on his visit in Washington, went to work like a nailer to smooth over aggravations among the United Nations and to stave off the third World war that some people say is shaping up even now.

Eden, Hitler Had Chance in '17 to Finish Each Other

A few years back Sir Austin Chamberlain, brother of Munich's Neville, called Mr. Eden a first-class second-rater. The Chamberlains are gone now and the second-rater is the No. 2 man of Britain. Only Churchill stands above him.

Eden got into politics as soon as he finished at Oxford after the war. He was old Stanley Baldwin's white-haired boy. He has been in the house of commons since 1923, but his real start dates from the time he was named secretary to the secretary of state for foreign affairs. He zoomed after that and now is himself the secretary for foreign affairs. This is his second turn at the job.

He is still only 46 years old, tall, broad-shouldered and usually the best-dressed man at the party. Admirers say he takes after his mother, a famous beauty. His family runs a long way back. Robert de Eden started it in 1413 and Hitler might have ended it. Eden and Adolf, talking one day, discovered that their outfits had shot at each other around Ypres in 1917.

ONE of tallest generals in any army helps the Americans push against Rommel's men on the side opposite from where Leclerc fights. This is Brig. Gen. Everett S. Hughes. He stands a bit over six feet five inches in his army shoes.

Should Take Much Tape to Bind Gen. Hughes' 6½ Feet

Hughes has cussed at red tape all his army life and it is his odd luck to be made Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's deputy commander in charge of training, supply, hospitalization and personnel, all bound round with red tape. In the battle zone the loss of any military property can be blamed on a lone enemy shell; a little one will do. In the supply area everything must be signed for, and if the papers aren't kept there is weeping all the way back to Washington.

The artillery got him first and he served in it down in Mexico and then down in the Philippines. In the first World war he was decorated for meritorious service, but he landed in the service of supply and so trained for his present post.

For a while he was the golf champion of the United States army, and he finds great pleasure in hunting. Traveling is also one of his favorite pastimes. While on leave in Europe, he retraced Napoleon's campaigns. With his men he seems stiff, but he is actually more shy than hard.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. Lieut. Kelly, sent to the tunnel hospital on Corregidor, learned from the wounded there how badly the war was going for us. Cavite, our big naval base, was gone and our air force nearly wiped out. While he was there the hospital was bombed. Ensign Akers is telling some of his experiences before Manila fell.

CHAPTER V

"Twelve hours before the Japs entered the town I was sent back into Manila to pick up the remnants. I had just eighty gallons of gas to go those thirty miles—finally got back with ten. A curious thing happened during those closing hours; nobody had given orders to blow up the oil reserves. Maybe some of them belonged to private companies; it would go against a business man's grain to blow up good oil. Finally a little junior-grade naval lieutenant noticed it. He had no authority, but he gave orders he had no right to give, and presently the oil was blazing. I hear he got a Navy Cross for doing it.

"I was in Manila about that time," said Cox. "A big air attack was going on, although it had already been declared an open city. For that reason I had gone in with the guns on my boat with their canvas covers on—for welfare reasons. Yet, open city or not, the big air raid was on—streets deserted except for a few people running nowhere in particular like crazy, planes crisscrossing the sky above. The big church, about a mile from shore, was just beginning to burn. In the harbor, boats were burning and sinking on all sides—five and ten-thousand tonners. But not a single shot was fired at the planes—which came down as low as five hundred feet.

"I went up on into the city, and everywhere people were kind and helpful. The Japs were right outside the town, and yet the storekeepers would give me anything we Americans needed without either money or a voucher—just sign a paper, that was all. They trusted us."

"I took my boat into the harbor just as the Japs were entering the city," said Bulkeley. "It was night, and we could see the town burning—a huge death-pall of smoke hanging above and oil six inches deep over the water. It looked like doom hanging over a great city, and it was. Made you feel bad. We stayed out there from nine o'clock at night until about three in the morning. Didn't dare go ashore, and anyway our job was to destroy harbor shipping—so what was left of it wouldn't fall into Jap hands."

"I had to leave all my spare uniforms in my locker there, damn them," said Akers. "I hope none of them fit."

"Watching them take over made you feel pretty sick," said Bulkeley. "We finished up and started home, to get back before dawn, now and then looking back at the fires over the water. Every time it made us sore."

"It was a tough New Year's Eve for me, too," said Kelly, "because we knew more or less what was going on. Then there was another reason. Some of the army officers were throwing a little New Year's party with the nurses that night, and since this medical officer Peggy had been going with was just back from Bataan, of course I knew where she'd be.

"Along in the evening after sunset I walked out to the mouth of the tunnel and sat down, to watch the twilight of the old year die away. It had been a tough year, but the one ahead looked worse. And here was I, useless for the war, in an army hospital. From away off I could hear them playing the portable at the officers' party, and I remembered how cute Peggy had looked in her civilian dress when she danced, and that didn't help any. Pretty soon one of the other nurses I knew, Charlotte, came out and sat down near me. She wasn't at the party because she had to go on duty soon, but that didn't matter, because her boy friend had just been wounded three days before, and she was worried sick about him.

"Just then I noticed someone sitting down on the other side of me—I turned and, by George, it was Peggy. Not in uniform, either. She was wearing that cute cool-looking cotton-print civilian dress.

"I couldn't figure it. 'Didn't you like the party?' I asked. 'Wasn't it any good?'

"'I don't know,' she said. 'I didn't go to the party.'

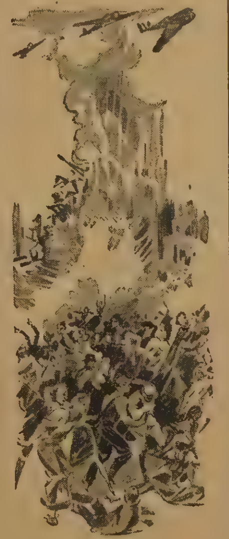
"'Weren't you asked?'

"'Yes,' she said. 'I was asked. But it was New Year's, you see, and I thought it might be nice here.'

"Not very many nice things happen to you during a war, but this was about the nicest that ever happened to me then, or any other time. It made me feel so good that between the two of us, we managed to get Charlotte cheered up. She had to go back on duty presently, and she managed to sneak us out a couple of fairly cold bottles of Pabst beer, to celebrate on. But Peggy had been preparing. The island was on two meals a day, but she'd managed to hold back a couple of apples and a whole box of marshmallows. That was our New Year's Eve supper, and I'll bet that yours, wherever you had it, couldn't have tasted any better.

"Running any kind of romance, no matter how mild, was a real problem on Corregidor. About the best place to sit was right down where we were, at the tunnel's mouth. But the road ran right in front of it, and every five minutes an army truck would barge tactlessly around the curve, shining its dimmed-down headlights right on you. Then for another three minutes you were choking with dust. If you got tired of this and tried to go for a walk, you'd hardly get started when you would realize that eleven thousand men were trying to sleep all over that little island, and if you went far, you would step on most of them in the dark, and not many of them would thank you for it. There wasn't an unoccupied square foot anywhere.

"We proved that later on when the doctor prescribed walks for me—to build back my strength, because I'd lost thirty pounds—and Peggy was assigned to go along. The troops swarmed on that island—every pond was crowded with them bathing, and I would always have to go ahead to take a look over hilltops and be sure Peggy wouldn't surprise them.



"Yet, open city or not, the big air raid was on."

"Meanwhile Bulkeley was reporting to the Admiral daily and was formulating a plan—which he would talk over with me, as I was his second officer—for what we would do when our gas ran out. We had damned little left, and the army couldn't spare us any.

"Our first plan was, when we got down to our minimum, to get out to Australia. The navy patrol bombers had planted caches of gasoline among the islands like steppingstones, and the Admiral gave us their location. But the first steppingstone was Singapore, and the Japs were working their way down the peninsula, closer and closer to it. Could we get there first? Of course we wouldn't leave the Philippines until all of our torpedoes were gone and we had just enough gas left to make the final run. But then, as you know, Singapore fell and also the southern islands—Celebes and Zamboanga. The route with the cached gas was closed—that plan was out.

"So then we said, who wanted to go to Australia anyway? Our job was to defend Manila Bay—wasn't that our part in the war plan? Yet even then it kept coming up: suppose the worst came to the worst and Luzon folded up—the whole archipelago—even Java—what then?

"Then Bulkeley here hit on a real plan. When our gas was down to just what we could carry on our decks, instead of waiting around to get captured by the Japs, we'd take our boats to China to continue the war. At first glance you'd say that was crazy—the Japanese holding most of the Chinese coast—but not the way the skipper had it thought out. He knew China from the years he'd spent out there on a gunboat while I was there on a destroyer.

"The Japs were closing in on Hong Kong—that was fine for us! We'd make our dash—shoot our last few remaining fish at their gathered transports just where they least expected an attack, and then head north toward the region of Swatow.

"Of course the Japs held that coast too, but Bulkeley had worked out an answer, all in the utmost secrecy. He'd gotten in touch with Colonel Wong, the Chinese military observer. Wong had cabled Chungking to investigate the vicinity. Chungking cabled back that it could be done.

"They said the Japs held the Swatow region thinly—at no point did they go more than ten miles inland. So, at an agreed time, and at an agreed rendezvous on the coast, Chungking would send a raiding party down to fight its way to the beach and meet us.

"There we would burn our boats—now useless with all torpedoes expended against Jap targets. The Chinese couldn't hold that point long—but long enough to hustle us through that ten-mile Jap-held strip onto free Chinese soil. There trucks would take us to the nearest airfield, we would fly to Chungking, and from there a four-motored American ferry-command plane would bring us back to the States.

"Where was the flaw? We couldn't see one, unless somehow it leaked out. Besides myself, only four living people knew. They were DeLong of our squadron, Captain Ray, chief of staff, Colonel Wong, and of course the skipper here, who had worked out every detail.

"But before we left we knew there would be plenty of action ahead for us here, and I told Bulkeley I was crazy to get out of this hospital, and asked for his help. If they'd let me get back to duty, I'd agree to anything—promise to soak my hand for so many hours a day—anything they said, just to get back even on a semiduty status.

"So we staged it for the next morning, when the ward doctor would be dressing my hand at about the same time the head surgeon made his rounds. We tackled him. I made my talk, and he seemed to waver. 'Tell this bird you need me,' I said to the skipper. 'We really do,' said Bulkeley, but just then Peggy overheard and queered the whole thing. 'Certainly not!' she said. 'You can't let him go back to duty with his hand wide-open!' That swung him back. 'Duty!' he growled. 'Who said anything about duty? Two weeks of it and you'd lose your whole arm.'

"I tried to argue—point out that if the MTB's went out on a mission, I could hold on with one arm as well as two, but Peggy had done it, and now he wouldn't listen.

"'One of these days you're going to find an empty bunk,' I said. I was gloomy all that next week, but Peggy said I was a fool. That there were plenty of well, fit men to do my job. And that if I hadn't been so damned stubborn in the first place, and had got that hand treated in time, I'd never have come to the hospital, and never met her, and she would never have been able to break up my plan to get out, so it was all my fault!

"She's always had that cute way of seeming to storm at you and dress you down, so that you ended up by grinning and couldn't stay mad at anything long.

"So it went along for another week, she leading me out for walks every day to get some of those thirty pounds back, and then one day we returned to find that Bulkeley had been by looking for me—said he was going out on a raid that night, up to Subic Bay looking for a Jap cruiser, that he'd waited hoping to take me, but finally had to leave.

"It set me almost crazy. If I hadn't been out on that damned health tour with a pretty girl, I wouldn't have missed the raid! So here I was while my gang was up there tangling with a cruiser, maybe getting killed, because the Japs had Subic Bay so thick with guns that it was almost suicide to go in.

"All that night there was no news. I was up at 5:30—'Any dope from the torpedo boats?'—still nothing. But at seven they said, yes, Bulkeley had come back, managed to sink a cruiser and get away, but the other boat was missing—probably lost."

"It was a job we did for the Army," explained Lieutenant Bulkeley (describing the historic attack of his P. T. Boat in Subic Bay mentioned.) "A couple of Jap ships, one of them an Imperial Navy auxiliary cruiser with 6-inch guns had been shelling our 155-millimeter emplacements on Bataan—blasting them with heavy stuff. The major in charge had been wondering how to get rid of them and had phoned Admiral Rockwell, who gave us permission to tackle the job. We knew they were based in Subic Bay, probably in Port Binanga. Subic is on the west coast of Luzon, just north of Bataan. I decided to send two boats—the 31 boat, which was Lieutenant DeLong's, and the 34 boat, which was Kelly's, now commanded by Ensign Chandler. I went along in it for the hell of it.

"We tested everything—tuned the motors, greased torpedoes, and got under way at nine o'clock, chugging north along the west coast of Bataan. It was very rough. We throttled down to thirty knots, and even then we were shipping water, but we got off the entrance to Subic Bay about half an hour after midnight. Here, according to plan, the two boats separated. DeLong in the 31 boat was to sweep one side of Subic Bay and I the other. We were to meet at Port Binanga, at the end. If something happened and we didn't meet there, then we were to rendezvous at dawn just outside the mine fields of Corregidor.

Little Evidence Seen of Farm Land Speculation

Rural America Seen as Bulwark Against Post-War Depression; 'Nervous Gentlemen' Admit Possibilities of Speculative Wave.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

If you see a cheerful glow along the horizon of rural America these evenings, you'll know what it is—not a prairie fire or the neighbor's barn, but the happy light of burning mortgages.

The farmers of America have had their lesson. They aren't throwing their money around this time. They are paying their debts. They are becoming the solid citizens of the nation. They are building a bulwark against a post-war depression that can save the nation financially, unless . . .

Right now, the financial health of rural America is better than it has been in many a long decade. But certain nervous gentlemen are beginning to worry. Will the farmer keep to the straight and narrow or will he be tempted to put down an option on distant hills which are beginning to turn an alluring green?

Listen to what one of those cautious gentlemen in Washington, Frank Wilson of the department of commerce, has to say. Why, you may ask, does the department of commerce, whose job it is to look after the welfare of the city man, worry about the farmer? Well, when the farmer goes broke, the city man closes up shop. But, a word from Mr. Wilson:

"While the level of farm values throughout most parts of the Middle West has increased 10 to 15 per cent in the last year, and the transfer of farm properties has been greatly accelerated, there is, as yet, no evidence of the recurrence of the destructive speculation in farm lands which followed the First World war."

So far so good. But here is Mr. Wilson's postscript:

"Farm lending authorities throughout that area, however, admit that conditions are in the making from which a speculative wave might result unless price control measures can be effective in holding farm prices at or only moderately above present levels."

Mortgage Survey

The department of commerce made a survey of the farm mortgage situation in 19 states where the bulk of the food production for war is being made.

The federal land banks and the Farm Credit administration which has been watching this situation like a hawk has plenty of data. One out of every ten—or more than 100,000—farmer-borrowers from the 12 federal land banks and land bank commissioner repaid his loan in full in 1942.

In the 19 states the department of commerce studied, according to the 1940 census, there were more than three million farms, more than half of all the farms in the country. Their total value is well over half the total value of farm lands in the country.

The survey of this territory, just made public, shows that in 1940, '41 and '42, indebtedness of farmers to the Farm Credit administration dropped a quarter of a billion dollars. This includes the drouth area in Kansas, one of the states hit hardest by the drouth, 10,000 farmers got out of debt and Kansas borrowers kept right on paying until they had deposited a million dollars in the "future payment fund" to anticipate labor installments. Similar statistics could be reeled off for other areas.

One thing that has helped the debt payment is the inability to get into further debt—for automobiles and other commodities which just aren't for sale.

Will that memory fade? Will the farmer's money begin to burn a hole in his pocket? Will those green pastures just over the hill begin to lure him beyond his means?

As I said, the cautious folk in Washington are a little worried. These are some of the danger signals they see:

A possible rise in values which cannot be exactly predicted or explained. But which is always a possibility, if not now, after the war. Then there will be an accumulation of cash; there will be a lot of war bonds in the safe deposit box or in the old sock. There will be a lot of husky young sons returning from the war for whom fathers will want to buy farms, there will be perhaps an increased demand for farm products as new foreign markets are opened or the United States begins to help feed a starving world.

In some places, there is evidence of the tendency toward speculation now. Lenders in Iowa are offering money against Iowa farm land as low as 2½ per cent. Speculation in livestock is going on in some places. But there is no trend now toward the wild buying of World War I.

"And," says Mr. Wilson, "if the tremendous gains in the farm indebtedness situation can be held, the capacity of the great agricultural areas of the nation to absorb the flood of products that will come to all markets after the war will be tremendous."

The financial fate of post-war America is pretty much in the hands of the farmers. Let's hope he won't let it (and his spare cash) slip through his fingers.

Two-Way Attack On 'Beveridge Plan'

When the administration's "Beveridge plan" for increased social security and post-war adjustment was made public, congress proceeded to make it plain that they intended to pigeon-hole it. The general impression was that it was laid away because it was too "socialistic" to suit the right wingers or even some of the middle-of-the-roaders.

But do not think that all the opposition came from one direction. The first adventure of the new social security program was, in reality, very much like the "Charge of the Light Brigade" for there were "cannons to right of them" and also "cannons to left of them" which volleyed and thundered. As I said, the offensive from the right was taken for granted. But the attack of the left wing, while not as vocal, seems to be just as vehement. There is proof in a press release which probably was released by very few papers. It comes from the "People's Lobby" in Washington, an institution which believes in "public ownership of natural resources, basic industries and essential processing and distributive agencies."

But the "People's Lobby" thinks the President's plan is nowhere near socialistic enough. In fact, it is just "another trick . . . to try to lull the people into a sense of false security while economic royalists continue, through ownership, to dictate the standards of living of the American people."

Washington— Geometric City

The other day, I heard on a radio broadcast the statement that Washington was a geometric city. We have so many squares and circles and other geometric figures—Dupont circle that I pass every day, Lafayette square with its historic memories (not to mention its squirrels) where I spend my extra seconds; the Octagon house, built by a wealthy friend of George Washington, where society was lavishly entertained in the early 1800s, now preserved by the American Institute of Architects which bought it to preserve its stately beauty as well as to house their offices; the sprawling Pentagon building of the army, "a city with a roof over it."

With this in mind, I was suddenly impressed with the new patterns imposed on Washington since the war, the human figures, two of which I watched over my lunch in a restaurant the other day. At the next table were, not circles nor squares but human loops and bulges.

One was a slim man in eyeglasses. His nose was a loop, his smooth hair was looped back over his forehead. His gestures were looped, the back of the wrist bent and higher than his fingertips as he dangled his cigarette—I could only think of the paws of a lackadaisical pup begging for a sweet.

His partner was Mr. Bulge. The bulge began below the wrinkle in his vest and it was the only thing that kept him far enough away from the table to save his bulging nose from reaching the soup I could hear him inhaling. His hands bulged like the padded arms of an overstuffed chair in a hotel lobby. His cheeks were pink and bulging hams.

Washington is learning new lessons in human geometry.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The personnel section of the Japanese ministry of commerce has prepared a set of "laws of etiquette" which is to be distributed to Japanese officialdom throughout occupied Manchuria. The "laws" cover such details as "posture, attitude, salute, honorific address and address to subordinates." The manner of one's demeanor at meals and the manner of telephoning are detailed.

By removing unnecessary frills from scores of articles, ranging from hairpins to industrial power trucks, WPB last year saved 600,000 tons of steel, 17,[illegible]00 tons of copper, 180,000,000 yards of cloth, 30,000 tons of leather, 450,000,000 feet of lumber, 227,000 tons of pulp, 35,000 tons of solder, 8,000 pounds of tungsten and enough man hours to build 23 Liberty ships.

I LICKED MY CONSTIPATION

Of course, it wasn't due to anything organically wrong with me. It was just ordinary constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

A dose of some medicinal laxative gives only temporary relief for such constipation. You got to find something that gets at the cause and corrects it. I found just that—in KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is a wonderful-tasting breakfast cereal and a swell way to start the morning. Eat it regularly, drink plenty of water and—if your constipation's like mine—you'll "Join the Regulars," too! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Michigan.

NEWS OF OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

A message from the War Department and a letter from Capt. Ealon Hocutt, who is somewhere in the Pacific, has been received by his brother, W. D. Hocutt, stating that he is improving rapidly. Captain Hocutt was injured in battle and is in the hospital.

Word has been received by Mrs. Jones, of Alpine, Ala., that her son, who was reported missing, is alive and is being held prisoner by the Japanese in the Philippines.

John Tyler Donavan, son of Mrs. Mary Stella Donavan, of Montgomery, and who had many friends and relatives here in Clanton, was wing man of the first American Volunteer Group to fight the Japanese in attempt to stop them on the Burma Road. As recognition of his gallant services and sacrifice as a pilot of this group has mother has received another certificate (No. 25) from the Chinese government signed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Pvt. Arthur C. Henley, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Henley, Clanton, Ala., has been promoted to the grade of private first class this week and enrolled in the huge B-24 Liberator mechanics school at Keesler Field.

Private Henley's promotion and his selection for technical training were results of the high scores he received in his Army mechancal aptitude tests. Congratulations and good luck, Private Henley

Pvt. Marion F. Headley, of Camp Haan, Calif., has been discharged from the hospital after about six weeks' illness.

A letter from Mrs. C. C. Gay, of Stanton, Ala., sends the addresses of her two sons, who are in the armed forces and ask that they be printed so that their friends could write to them. Their addresses are:

PS.C. Julian D. Gay,
Btry B 638th AC., Bn (AA),
A. P. O. 89,
Camp Carson, Colo.
And:
T.-Sgt. Charles C. Gay, Jr.,
Hdq. Ord. Co.
Maxwell Field, Ala.

Write to these boys and others you know and help to keep them from being lonesome and homesick.

IN MEMORIAM

Whereas: It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to take from us our friend and co-worker, Mr. John D. Griffin, and

Whereas: Faithful to his duty to the day of his death, he has devoted his life to the children of the community, having ever a deep interest in their welfare, and

Whereas: His loss will be keenly felt by his friends and fellow-workers,

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the Chilton County Teachers' Association, extend our sincere sympathy to his family, and
2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the association, and copies be sent to the family, to the local newspapers, and to the Alabama School Journel.

Victory Bond Meeting Friday, April 16th.

To All Committee Members and Workers:

When you receive this communication the United States Treasury Second War Loan Campaign will be under way.

This quota will buy a bomber and will represent a definite contribution by Chilton County to the war effort.

We have the responsibility of selling $311,000 of Treasury securities in Chilton County. We feel certain that through the concerted efforts and cooperation of every member of every committee, we will achieve our objective. This will require each of us to exert every possible effort at the opening of the campaign and throughout each day until its close.

A meeting of the chairman and members of the several committees is called to meet at the courthouse Friday afternoon. April 16th, 1943, at 5 o'clock p.m. It is imperative that you be present. LET'S ATTEND 10C PER CENT

We feel that the slogan for this drive applies to all workers, as well as to prospective purchasers, and we are confident that you will be among the first to live up to its meaning:

"YOU HAVE DONE YOUR BIT—NOW DO YOUR BEST!"

Many questions may arise in your mind, the answer to all is:

"BUY BONDS! SELL BONDS!"

Sincerely,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Executive Chairman
F. J. CALLEN,
Victory Chairman.

DOING THEIR JOB

The Street Sales Committee of the Second War Bond Drive seem to be off to a good start. They were the first to get down to real business and you can see them on the streets each day doing their job. It would be well for some of the other committees to take a lesson from these workers.

All Sugar Necessary For Canning Granted

Housewives will be able to obtain adequate amounts of sugar for canning this year's crop, James Dennis, chairman of the Chilton County War Price and Rationing Boards, assured them today.

Under sugar rationing regulations, one pound of sugar may be issued for each four quarts of finished fruit. Home canners must furnish the local ration board with a statement of the amount of fruit they have to be canned, and the correct amount of sugar will be issued them.

When they have canned this, and have more fruit on hand, additional sugar rations will be granted, Mr Dennis said.

For preserving purposes, an allowance of one pound of sugar per person per year will be made.

Mrs. Mary Will Browder also reports that much help is needed and anyone who can is requested to come to the room and do their bit.

Many Helped By Welfare Department In March—Burt

Three hundred and sixty-eight families, representing approximately 1.000 individuals, were granted financial assistance during March by the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare, according to figures released today by Miss Martha Fanny Burt. director.

Funds distributed totaled $4.580.00 or an average of $12.44 per family "Though this average represents an increase of 29.52 per cent over grants for the same period in 1941, and nearl 18 per cent more than 1942 March averages, it meets less than half of the needs of the individual families.' Miss Burt declared.

With surplus commodities no longer available to cupplement grants, and with food costs rapidly advancing, the families on public welfare rolls actually have less today than they did in 1942," Miss Burt continued, explaining that since the closing of the commodity project these small checks represent all the assistance the department can furnish to each family

"There is no extra money for medical care, nor any way whereby the department can assume or pay for past obligations of relief recipients,' the director pointed out.

Though war has thus brought hardships to relief clients, it has increased employment opportunities to such an extent that since March, 1941, there has been a 15.4 per cent drop in the total number aided by the Chilton County Department, Miss Burt's report revealed. Two years ago 468 families received financial assistance while in March, 1942, there were 401 and today only 368.

The probability that this figure will remain fairly static was voiced by Miss Burt who reported that more than two-thirds of the total were in the old age assistance group and were too old or handicapped to work Moreover, Childersburg, Birmingham and Montgomery—all in close proximity to the county—have already drained the area of its available labor supply.

Other unemployables receiving financial help from the Department of Public Welfare includes families with young, dependent children, the blind and the otherwise handicapped. Miss Burt cited the low grants as against high wages in war industry to indicate that these people would prefer work if they were able to hold a job

"Their needs are real, and their only recourse the Department of Public Welfare," her report concluded.

HOWARD MADDOX AWARDED DIPLOMA BY RADIO INSTITUTE

Mr. Howard J. Maddox has completed a course in Practical and Theoretical Radio and Television and has been awarded a diploma by the National Radio Institute of Washington D. C. He finished the prescribed course of tecnnical studies with creditable grades and is to be congratulated upon his achievement.

FOR SALE—One E-60 Allis-Chalmers Power Unit. $750 cash. Millard Reynolds, Stanton, Ala.

The annual sale of Easter Seals for the Chilton County Society for Crippled Children has officially begun The sale will continue through Saturday, April 24, 1943. County Superintendent of Education D. P. Culp is chairman. Personal solicitation will be made of the citizens of Chilton County by the school children and a countywidoe mailing list has been made up. Miss Lillian McKee is in charge of the sale in the schools. Miss Martha F. Burt is in charge of publicity.

Each seal bought will help a crippled child to receive medical attention and possibly overcome his handicap In 1942 Chilton County raised $305.58 for crippled children from the sale of Easters Seals. There was $4,756.80 spent in Chilton County for crippled children in 1942, more than 10 times as much money was spent in Chilton County as was raised in Chilton County. The 1943 goal to be made from contributions and the sale of Easter seals has been set for $500.00

There were 196 crippled children in Chilton County in 1942 that were known by the Crippled Childrens' Association of Alabama. Forty-eight crippled children from Chilton County received medical treatment, there were 95 who could not benefit from medical treatmnt while there are still 59 crippled children in Chilton County yet to be treated. Every child has the right to play, to education, and to grow into adulthood. The crippled child is aided in his rights through the service of the Crippled Children's Association and to which every person in Chilton County may help by buying the Crippled Children's Easter Seals now on sale.

Do not wait to be asked to buy ceals or make a contribution, take or mail your contribution, whether 1c or more to the Chilton County Department of Education or to the school in your neighborhood.

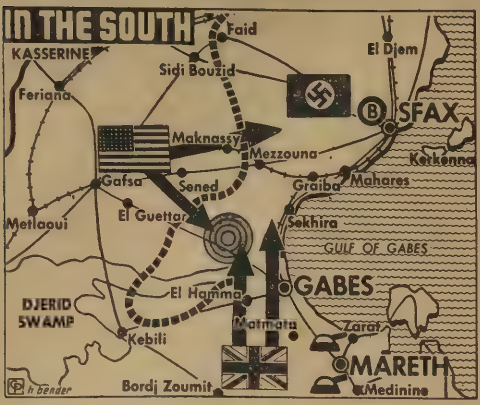
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U-Boat Warfare Takes 'Turn for Worse'; New Wedge Driven Into Rommel's Lines As Allies Continue Furious Air Attack; Morgenthau Outlines Stabilized Currency

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Map shows Allied progress in the campaign to oust Axis forces from North Africa. Hard on the heels of Marshal Rommel, "The Fox," was the British Eighth army, under Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery. After a week's pause, during which Montgomery brought up troops and supplies, the Eighth army stormed Rommel's improvised defenses at the Wada el Akarit. Chief coastal passes, where the Americans fought hot engagements, are near El Guettar, Maknassy and Fondouk.

TUNISIA:

Fight to Meet

Action in Tunisia continued with Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Second American Army corps fighting for a junction with British forces at Gabes.

Thousands of mines blocked the American advance. Sappers kept busy clearing the fields and later American tanks rumbled into action.

In their bid to prevent an American and British junction, the Axis tanks thrust at the American armored columns. Americans brought up artillery to heavily shell Axis troop and motor concentrations.

Slowly but surely Patton's men advanced along the Gafsa road. Awaiting them at Gabes were the British, who brought up their heavy guns to shell Marshal Rommel's entrenched Afrika Korps along a narrow line in the El Akarit gulch, 15 miles north of Gabes.

At Akarit, "The Fox" was expected to put up another short, stiff fight before falling back toward Sfax. His strategy calls for a series of delaying actions while the Axis completes coastal defenses in Italy.

In northern Tunisia, Nazi troops fell back toward the coastal bastion of Bizerte under the pressure of British troops. Native Arabian Ghouims, armed with knives, have been helping the British with guerrilla activity.

Fighting Before Talk

Gen. Charles DeGaulle's scheduled meeting with Gen. Henri Giraud in North Africa for the purpose of consolidating all anti-Axis French in the war has been postponed by request of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

General Eisenhower felt that political discussion in the midst of critical fighting in Tunisia could only have a disturbing effect. Prime Minister Churchill is supposed to have persuaded DeGaulle to await Anthony Eden's report of American reaction to the complicated North African problem.

U-BOAT WARFARE:

Turn for the Worse

Indications that the battle of the Atlantic has taken a turn for the worse were made evident when Secretary of the Navy Knox announced that Allied ship losses were considerably worse during the past month.

Although the secretary gave no estimate of the total number of U-boats the Nazis have used in their spring offensive, he said that "just as we expected and as I said it would be, there are more German subs out there."

The subs are concentrating in the middle Atlantic, along the shipping routes from the United States to England and the Mediterranean. It is predicted that the submarine campaign will become worse before it gets better. Naval experts estimate the Axis will have 700 submarines operating in packs along supply routes this spring.

To counter the U-boat offensive the United States is rushing construction of a fleet of destroyer-escort vessels, smaller than destroyers.

PROMISE:

More Farm Tools

Following a review of the legislative situation with Democratic congressional leaders, President Roosevelt has indicated that, in view of the improved war outlook, he will give more attention to domestic problems. Speaker Rayburn, following the conference, said the "President is going to give his personal attention to the question of having more iron and steel allotted to the manufacture of farm machinery."

RUSSIA:

Sparring for Knockout

In Russia, the two giants continue to spar for positions.

Sloughing through marshy swampland, hardy Russ engaged German infantry in hand to hand grappling near Novorossisk, gaining ground. Here the Nazis are backed against the Black sea coast.

The Germans remain active in the Kharkov district. Two hundred miles to the north, Nazis claimed advances at Orel. Seventy miles to the southeast, German attacks against Red lines on the western bank of the Donets river met stiff resistance, the Russ said.

BOLIVIA:

'Essential Move'

Even before the Bolivian congress had a chance to formally declare war on the Axis, the nation was told that such a move was essential to American solidarity and that the country's productive facilities must be immediately expanded.

When President Enrique Penaranda and his cabinet held a conference with United States Vice President Wallace to discuss a war decree, Brazil was the only South American country at war with Germany and Italy. Bolivia had broken off diplomatic relations with the Axis a year ago.

MONEY:

Stabilized Currency?

Secretary Morgenthau called it "tentative" and John Q. Public thought it looked complicated but everybody realized that it was mighty important — "it" being a comprehensive plan to stabilize postwar world currencies and fix their values in terms of gold.

Actually involved in the program were these major points for working out a system to maintain the monetary solidarity of all the nations of the world at the end of the war:

1. Creation of an international stabilization fund (five billion dollars). This would be set up by the United Nations and associates.

2. Value of currency in each country would be "fixed" in terms of gold.

3. An agreement between all nations to the effect that none would devalue their currencies without consulting the others.

BURMA:

New Air Blows

Strengthened British and American air forces continued to demonstrate their superiority in Burma, raining bombs on Japanese supply lines with emphasis on the important railway from Rangoon to Mandalay.

The RAF dropped 1,000 - pound bombs on the Rangoon railway station. Photographs showed destruction of an oil refinery, fires from which were visible for 60 miles. A power house, oil tanks and a distillation building were hit. American fliers scored hits at Mandalay.

NETHERLANDS:

Invasion Spadework?

Reports that "scores of British agents" have been landed on the Netherlands coast and are preparing the way for an Allied invasion have made their way to Dutch circles in London. The reports added that a wave of optimism, accompanied by new outbreaks of sabotage and anti-Nazi attacks was sweeping Holland. The British were said to have been landing parties of two and three bound for the interior.

BANKHEAD BILL:

And Parity

After President Roosevelt had vetoed the Bankhead farm bill (because he believed it "inflationary") supporters of the measure attempted to override this action by a two-thirds vote in congress. First scene of action in this connection was the senate floor where a day-long lively debate resulted in farm bloc members realizing that they could not muster sufficient support to bring this to pass.

These senators then became content to force the bill back to the agricultural committee from whence it could be resurrected whenever the farm bloc felt it had enough votes handy to defeat the President's action.

White House opposition to the measure on the grounds of inflation presented itself because it would prohibit deductions of benefit payments from parity in setting farm price ceilings.

FLYING FORTRESSES:

New Offensive

The American air offensive in Europe has gotten under way.

Fleets of powerful Flying Fortresses have pounded the Renault motor works near Paris, with heavy hits causing great damage among the main buildings and auxiliary plants.

Coming right back, Flying Fortresses flew over Antwerp, bombing the Erla airplane works. These works have been repairing engines for the Nazi luftwaffe. Buildings were shattered and large fires started.

Swinging at Europe's underbelly, 100 Flying Fortresses dumped their bombs on Naples, splattering 24 ships in the harbor. RAF bombers followed up the attack with another heavy raid. Wharves and the industrial area were left flaming.

Eight bombers and eight fighter planes were lost in the operations.

RUBBER:

Self Sufficiency

Self sufficiency in rubber production for the United States was predicted by William M. Jeffers, rubber director, who expressed belief that the nation will develop a synthetic rubber industry that will free the country from dependency on outside sources in the future.

"There is one very definite forecast I want to make—we'll never again be caught the way we were at the outbreak of war," Jeffers said.

He added that he envisioned a postwar rubber economy independent of any sources outside the United States. He said he viewed the huge natural rubber development in South America as "insurance" against possible shortcomings of synthetic rubber plants in this country.

LOADED DICE:

In Axis' Favor?

In the opinion of Adm. William James, British chief of naval information, the "dice are loaded heavily" in favor of the Axis in any Allied attempt to land on the continent of Europe. But, said Admiral James, ways and means could be found "when the time comes."

"We saw at Dieppe, which was a most carefully planned enterprise, how a few well-situated guns on shore can wreck an amphibious operation."

Predicting that there will be no new startling invention to deal with the U-boat problem, he said the submarine menace eventually would be beaten "by the hard unremitting work of all those engaged in protecting our trade."

NATIONAL APATHY:

General Speaks

Army day this year was passed over with little official celebration for the nation's fighting men were too hard at work to stop for festivities. However, one commanding general—Ben Lear of the Second army—took the occasion to score national apathy and lack of aggressiveness in many phases of American life. He called for the end of internal bickering and urged that Americans apply themselves to crushing the enemy. Speaking of the popular dislike of "absenteeism" General Lear declared that this situation is not confined to industry. By this he meant that unless every citizen did his or her part, whatever the job, they were defeating the war effort and were therefore—absentees.

BRIEFS

CUBAN DRAFT: Eight thousand Cubans between the ages of 20 and 25 will shortly be drafted for army service.

TRADE COMPROMISE: Bi-partisan support was seen for a compromise reciprocal trade treaty act which would allow American producers the right to seek modification of any agreement with a foreign country.

AIR LINER: Henry J. Kaiser, the shipbuilding wizard, proposes to build a metal plane that will fly 17,000 miles without stopping.

DAD'S DRAFT: Drafting of dads might be delayed if public opinion forces unmarried youths between 18 and 25 years out of deferred war jobs, Selective Service Director Hershey says.

FIRE OIL: Allied bombers hit the Japanese oil refinery below Rangoon in continuing attacks upon enemy installations in Burma. The Mytinge bridge area of the Burma Road also was raided.

TO YOUR Good Health

GOITER

Perhaps you or one of your family has been found to have the severe type of goiter or Grave's disease, in which there is rapid heart beat, trembling of limbs, failure of eyelids to move together with the eyeball, lack of appetite, and sleeplessness. Your physician may advise operation whereas in a case of the same type of goiter in another patient you know that he has advised X-ray treatment and in another rest and medical treatment.

Dr. Barton

Why should there be three methods of treatment for the same ailment?

One reason is that for the average individual surgery is considered best because the patient can withstand the operation and can be back at his work sometimes within three weeks after operation. I have spoken of a physician friend who before operation had a pulse rate of 110 to the minute, who walked into my office three weeks after operation and I found his pulse rate 72.

Why, then, should treatment by X-ray be given which may take months to get the results obtained by surgery?

There are two reasons. First, some patients naturally object to surgical operations, and second, some patients would not likely withstand operation well.

Treatment by rest and medicine is used in early or mild cases only.

It is not many years ago that patients with Grave's disease traveled hundreds of miles to have a noted surgeon operate for removal of thyroid gland-goiter. Today practically every hospital has one or several surgeons who perform this operation.

Thus the Lahey Clinic, Boston, in Annals of Surgery, reports 19,700 thyroid operations with a death rate less than one in every 100 operations. When we remember that the great majority of these cases are of the severe type of goiter and many may enter hospital in late stages of this disease, it can be seen how "safe" this operation has become.

Dr. Lahey does not advise operation on cases that can be treated by rest and medicine even though operation would bring about a cure in much less time. He points out that as there is no fear of death in the patient's present condition, awaiting the result of rest and medical treatment involves no danger.

Treatment of Stomach Ulcers

Ulcer of the stomach (gastric ulcer) is due to the same causes as duodenal ulcer which is ulcer of the first part of small intestine into which stomach empties the food after the stomach has done its part of digestion. In fact, a duodenal ulcer can be located just a fraction of an inch from the stomach. Both the stomach ulcer and the intestinal ulcer are called peptic ulcer and are treated in about the same manner by diet, medicine and surgery.

It so happens, however, that while stomach ulcer is not so common as duodenal or intestinal ulcer, unfortunately stomach ulcer turns into cancer more often; about 10 to 20 per cent of stomach ulcers develop into cancers.

In the Post Medical Journal Dr. Rodney Maingot, London, England, states that as far as symptoms are concerned the stomach ulcer cannot be distinguished from an early stomach cancer, therefore, the chances taken with a patient with ulcer of duodenum cannot be taken with a patient with a stomach ulcer. For this reason he suggests that patients with chronic stomach ulcer should enter hospital instead of undergoing home treatment. If by special diet and medical treatment in hospital the ulcer does not heal they should undergo surgical treatment, because early operation saves lives.

The medical treatment of stomach ulcer in hospital is bed rest, test meal examinations, tests for "hidden" blood in stools, complete examination of the blood, examination of stomach by gastroscope which by means of a mirror enables the physician to see the lining of the stomach, the barium X-ray examination. In addition to removing any infection (teeth, tonsils, gall bladder) present, the size, shape and position of the stomach are drawn on a special chart.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is drilling of the teeth necessarily painful?

A.—Drilling is not painful in most cases. In cases where it is necessary dentists can anaesthetize the jaw and no pain is felt. Your dentist will explain this to you.

Q.—Are pork and oysters healthful food?

A.—Pork is a good food, rich in fat. Too much can upset liver and gall bladder. Oysters are a good food, also rich in fat.

NEW YORK.—A couple of years ago Chester C. Davis would have switched 5,000,000 low-income farmers into defense industry. He'll be glad now they stuck to their plows. As food administrator he ought to like whatever the 5,000,000 farmers can grow, even if it is spinach.

Food Czar Came To His Office Via Six of Our States

Fifty-six years old now, Davis used to be footloose. He was born in Iowa and got his AB at little Grinnell, but later he picked up a law degree at Clemson in South Carolina, and his first job was in South Dakota. He was editor of a pint-sized paper there and then he rolled mosslessly on to Montana. Montana always has a fine crop of girls, and he married one in 1913 and finally became state agricultural commissioner. Marriage nails most men down, especially when it produces two sons, but Davis rolled on to Illinois to run first a grain marketing association and then a cornstalks processing company.

All this seems skitter-skatter, but it turned out to be just right for a job with the Agricultural Adjustment administration, first as director, then as administrator. And that led, by a neatly selective process, into the Federal Reserve system.

He has been president of the reserve bank in St. Louis for several years and maybe in defense against people wanting money he has formed the habit of dropping his fleshy face and looking somberly from under heavy eyebrows.

NOW and then the production of this column is interrupted by a young buck from next door who speaks the irreverent jargon of the hot spots. When, for example, grave elder speaks somberly of Japan's dangerous Premier Hideki Tojo he swings in with a carefree "Hi-de-ho."

Yellow Peril of Tokyo a Gangster To Reckon With

His is a too flippant reaction. The yellow, or tea-colored peril of Tokyo is bad medicine for people in these parts, even though he has softened his earlier promise to route conquering legions through our states. Now he will only crush our power in the Pacific. He seems to figure this won't be so difficult with those 26 new dictatorial laws, and with a new economic council to cut red tape.

Tojo, according to men lately back from the Far East, heads up a band of military gangsters. He took over the government of Japan, they say, by methods such as Dutch Schultz used to take over the liquor racket in the bad old days here. The same methods will keep him in power until his gang meets a tougher gang or he is, himself, rubbed out.

He is big for a Japanese, with an untrimmed mustache and a mere spatter of hair fringing the skin stretched tightly over his hard skull. He lives in the Samurai tradition, eats lightly, rises early, and pampers himself only in the number of cigars he puffs to ashes in a day. He graduated from Japan's Military academy and has been in the army all his life. His followers call him Razor Brains, a nickname Dutch would have envied. But as for his wife! She says that no gentler husband ever lived. She has never once heard him scold a servant.

◆

MUSSOLINI seems nearer his long-predicted final fall as the rumor hangs on that Crown Prince Humbert may be made commander-in-chief of slap-happy remnants of Italy's army.

With Good Fulcrum Humbert Might Tip Tottering Mussolini

Humbert has always given the Fascist salute with crossed fingers. His dissent, necessarily, has been guarded save perhaps when he balked at the Ethiopian razzia. But at 38 he could easily feel ready to come out in the open and tip over a tottering dictator.

He should know, too, how to run an army. He was a general on active duty two years ago. And this spring he led the Italians in Russia. Backward, mainly, but still it was experience. Once Humbert wrote a friend that he doubted he ever would be king. His prospects are brighter now, but even if he still feels the same way, he has a son.

As head of the army he might cinch the throne for the nipper. He has a daughter, too. His wife was Princess Marie Jose of Belgium. They live more happily than most pairs who make marriages of state.

Tall, bookish, and a five-way linguist, Humbert is still good-looking although a face romantically slender in youth has grown somewhat heavier with the approach of the fat forties.

An American girl competing in the Olympic games of '36 gave the crown prince a quick eye and cried, "Gosh! He's handsome."

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of heir part in the battle for the Philip-ines is being told by four of the five aval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They re Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieuten-nt Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; nd Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. Manila has fallen, and we ave lost our naval base at Cavite. Lieut. Kelly has told how he spent New Year's Eve in the hospital on Corregidor, while Lieut. Bulkeley was discussing with the Admiral a plan of escape to China. Lieut. Bulkeley is telling about a night raid two of the PT boats made against the Japs. Lieut. Bulkeley rode in the 34 boat.

CHAPTER VI

"So we separated, expecting to ieet at dawn. It was the last I ver saw of the 31 boat. But here's hat happened to our 34 boat in ubic. First, remember it was dark-r than hell, and the shore line was oaded with Jap field guns. None of s had ventured in there since the aps took over. We had got in just little way when a Jap searchlight potted us and blinked out a dot-ash challenge, asking who we ere. Since we didn't know the ap code reply, naturally we didn't nswer, but changed course, veer-ng away. But the Japs were get-ing suspicious by now, and from ver by Ilinin Point a single field iece opened up. None of it fell ear us—maybe they were shooting t DeLong in the 31 boat.

"When we were about abeam of ueste light another light came on o challenge us—this time from a hip — maybe that cruiser. We hanged course to go over and have look, but she was small fry—not orth a torpedo—the hell with her —we were headed for Binanga and he cruiser.

"By one o'clock we were off the orth entrance to Port Binanga, here we were to meet DeLong in he 31 boat and go in together for the ttack, and when he didn't show up, began to be afraid something might have happened, yet I couldn't be sure.

"But there was nothing to do but go on in alone. To make the sneak, we cut the speed down to eight knots, skirted Chiquita Island, rounded Binanga Point, and entered the little bay on two engines at idling speed. Everything was quiet, no firing down here, and then we saw her ahead in the dark not five hundred yards away. Creeping up on her, we had just readied two torpedoes when a searchlight came on and in dot-dash code she asked who we were.

"We answered, all right—with two torpedoes—but they had hardly been fired when I gave our boat hard rudder and started away. It isn't safe for an MTB to stay near a cruiser. One torpedo hit home with a hell of a thud—we heard it over our shoulders. Looking back, we saw the red fire rising, and presently two more explosions which might have been her magazines.

"But we had no time for staring, for we were into plenty trouble. One of those torpedoes had failed to clear its tube and was stuck there, just at the entrance, and was making what we call a 'hot run,' its propellers buzzing like hell, compressed air hissing so you couldn't hear yourself think. But worst of all, a torpedo is adjusted so that it won't fire until its propeller has made a certain number of revolutions—I shouldn't give it exactly, but let's say it is three hundred. After that, the torpedo is cocked like a rifle, and an eight-pound blow on its nose would set it off—blowing us all to glory.

"So what to do? Somehow that torpedo propeller had to be stopped and stopped quick, or else a good hard wave slap on the torpedo's nose would blow us all to splinters. And at this point our torpedoman, Martino, used his head fast. He ran to the head and swiped a handful of toilet paper. He jumped astride that wobbling, hissing torpedo like it was a horse, and, with the toilet paper, jammed the vanes of the propeller, stopping it.

"We'd stopped for all this, but we couldn't afford to wait long. The cruiser's fire was lighting up the bay behind us. Ahead, all over Subic, hell was breaking loose. So we started up, gave her everything we had to get through that fire.

"With three motors roaring, and us skipping around in that rough water with everything wide-open, I guess we made considerable commotion. Anyway the Japanese radio in Tokyo, reporting the attack next day, said the Americans had a new secret weapon—a monster that roared, flapped its wings, and fired torpedoes in all directions. It was only us, of course, but we felt flattered. We got the hell out of there, and that was all there was to it."

"Well," said Kelly, "MacArthur wouldn't quite agree. He gave you the D.S.C. for what you'd done."

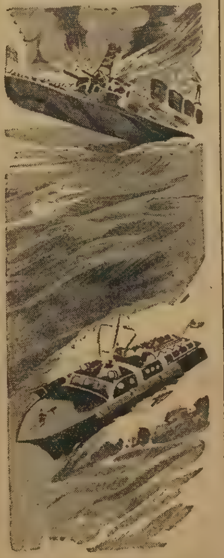
"But DeLong has the real story," insisted Bulkeley. "I pulled up outside the mine field off Corregidor to wait for him. Neither of us could go in until it got light, because otherwise the army on shore, hearing us in the dark out there, would think it was Japs and set off the mine field. But when the sky got light and I saw my boat was alone, I realized DeLong was in trouble. And since he's now a prisoner of the Japanese—if he's alive—we'd better tell his story for him.

"After we parted company at the entrance to Subic Bay, he started around its northern rim as we'd planned. But just before midnight he developed engine trouble—the saboteur's wax had clogged his strainers. He cleaned them and had just got under way when more trouble developed—the cooling system went haywire. They stopped, and were drifting as they repaired it when there was an ominous grinding sound under the boat—they were aground on a reef in Subic Bay.

"They rocked the boat, and finally started the engines to get themselves unstuck. But the noise now attracted the Japs, and a 3-inch gun on Ilinin Point opened up on them—splashes coming nearer and nearer. They worked frantically, finally burned out all reverse gears so that the engines were useless. DeLong gave orders to abandon ship. They wrapped mattresses in a tarpaulin to make a raft, and all got aboard but DeLong, who stayed to chop holes in the gas tanks and blow a hole in the boat's bottom with a hand grenade before he jumped. That was the end of the 31. Then he couldn't find the raft in the darkness, and being afraid to call out, swam to the beach.

"The raft had shoved off with all twelve aboard at three o'clock.

"He waited on the sands until dawn. Then, in the gray half-light, he picked up the tracks of nine men. He followed these until they led into a clump of bushes, where he found most of his crew. They explained they had stayed with the raft until dawn was about to break. Fearing sunrise would expose them to the Japanese, they had decided to risk a swim to the beach, where they could hide. But Ensign Plant and two men, who couldn't swim very well, decided to stay. What became of them the nine didn't know, and no one knows for sure to this day.



"We answered, all right—with two torpedoes."

"But the first thing DeLong did was to post lookouts, and all day they stayed in that clump, with an eye on the Jap observation planes which flew over them in relays, watching a hot little skirmish between the Americans and the Japanese on the far shore of the bay. At one point the Japs were falling back, and there seemed to be a chance that they could make a run for it in daylight, rejoining the American lines. But never was it quite possible, and in the meantime they had spotted a couple of bancas, native boats, farther down the beach.

"Two men who were sent out to investigate, crawling on their bellies through the grass, returned to report the bancas were in fair condition. So when the sun had set they crawled to them and started getting them in shape. For rowing they had two paddles, a couple of spades, and a board. They had to work fast and quietly, for the Japs were all around them—just as they were launching the bancas they heard Japanese voices not two hundred yards away.

"But a heavy wind came up, and at nine o'clock at night, both boats capsized. They righted them, but the shovels and the board were lost, and they now had only one paddle for each banca. Yet with these they continued to fight the head wind until three in the morning, when they were so exhausted that they decided to try the shore. So DeLong landed on what he hoped was Napo Point. They picked their way through the barbed-wire entanglement on the beach, and then found themselves up against a steep cliff.

"They kept very quiet until dawn, not knowing whether daylight would find them surrounded by Americans or Japanese. But when it became light, the first thing they saw was a Filipino sentry.

" 'Hey, Joe—got a cigarette and a match?' they called out. And an hour later they were telling their story to Captain Cockburn, in the Ninety-second American Infantry's field headquarters tent. The nine were back with us at Sisiman Cove the next evening."

"That afternoon Bulkeley came over to tell me the story of the engagement. When he was through, 'Kelly,' he said, 'we need you.'

" 'Let's get ahold of that doctor,' I said, 'and you tell him that.' This time it worked. The hole in my finger was still almost three inches long and about an inch wide, with some of the tendon exposed (but in a month it was healed, except that I can't move my finger joints). I had to promise them faithfully I would show up every other day for treatment, but the point of it was I got out of that place.

"Two days later I took the 34 boat out on my first patrol from Corregidor up along Bataan toward Subic Bay—Bulkeley, who as squadron commander rode all boats on patrol, of course was with me. It was a calm night—and chilly. Sweaters were comfortable over our khakis, although in the daytime we wore only shorts or trunks.

"Everything was going well, in fact it was monotonous. But when we were about twenty-five miles up the coast, hell suddenly started popping. Our own batteries were shooting at us. Bulkeley explained to me that was the main excitement these days—to keep from being sunk by your own side—and calmly altered course to get out of their range, which we could tell by the light of their tracer bullets.

" 'Half the time those dumb dastards don't know friend from foe,' he explained.

"Five minutes later we saw a dim light, low in the water, and headed toward it. Was it a Jap landing barge, trying to get ashore behind General Wainwright's lines? Then it occurred to us that it might be Ensign Plant and the two other men of DeLong's boat who had disappeared in Subic Bay. They might have stolen a boat and now be headed home—we couldn't take chances. So without firing we drew nearer, watching the light.

"Presently it began to blink—dots and dashes, all right, but no message that we could read. Bulkeley ordered general quarters as a precaution, and the men were crouching behind their machine guns. It was about twenty-five yards away now—a queer-shaped boat, low in the water—and suddenly its light went out.

"Bulkeley stood up with the megaphone. 'Boat ahoy!' he called. He got a quick answer. Br-r-r-r-r-r-r! They opened on him with machine guns. It looked like a fire hose of tracer bullets headed for our cockpit, and now they speeded up, trying to head for shore. But we were pouring the fire back at them.

"Now we could see it was a Jap landing barge, packed with men. It had armor on the bow and the stern, and kept twisting and turning, trying to keep those thick steel plates pointed toward us. Of course our maneuver was to come in from the side, and let them have it where they couldn't take it.

"All this had been going on for about thirty seconds when I heard a cry of pain from behind. It was Ensign Chandler. 'I've been hit,' he said. A Jap bullet had gone through both of his ankles. We pulled him out of the cockpit and laid him down on the canopy, meanwhile circling the Japs and pouring the steel down into their vulnerable sides. We could soon see we were getting them. The barge sank lower and lower in the water and presently gurgled under, while we pulled off to lick our own wounds, give first aid to Chandler, and locate any other boats in the vicinity. Surely the Japs wouldn't attempt a landing with a single barge. All we got, though, was more fire from our own shore guns—a swarm of tracers and then 3-inchers began whistling over—one of them landing two hundred yards away. But we didn't mind. The army seemed to enjoy it, and it wasn't hurting us.

"We fooled around until almost dawn and were headed for home—we couldn't have got Chandler through the mine fields to the hospital until sunrise anyway, when Bulkeley happened to glance back.

"Through the half-light he could see, bobbing in the swell, another low-lying flat craft. Should we go back? You're damned right we should, the men said—to get even for Chandler by sinking some more.

"As we got closer, sure enough, it was another landing boat, this time apparently leaving the coast of Bataan, and we opened up on her with everything we had from four hundred yards away.

"But their return fire was curiously light and spasmodic. So we closed to about ten yards. Their fire had stopped, but their boat wouldn't. Our bullets would hit its armor and engines—you could see the tracers bounce off and ricochet one hundred feet into the air, but still it kept going. Suddenly a tracer hit its fuel tanks—up they went in a blaze, the motor stopped, and now the boat was only drifting. But even as we pulled alongside, those Japs, nervy devils, gave her hard rudder and tried to ram us.

Army Clarifies Policies Regarding Farm Labor

Military Units May Be Employed on Crops During 'Emergency Situations'; Individual Furloughs Not Contemplated.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"Home on a furlough."

I wonder how many of my readers remember that very popular print of two (or maybe more) generations ago. Well, never mind if you don't (though I would appreciate a letter from any who do); "home on a furlough" is going to mean something quite different now.

I remember the original picture only vaguely. I didn't know what the word "furlough" meant. But I know there was a tousle-headed blond boy in the middle of an admiring farm family, telling his adventures.

Today, the farm boy with a conscience, and the farm family with a farm, are looking forward to the "furlough" that will bring the boy home for work, not the telling of his tales of adventure.

It isn't going to be quite that way.

The President, when the farm bloc was riding the administration its hardest last month, went into considerable detail as to what was to be done to solve the farm labor question. Since then some concrete steps have been taken but not the ones the farmers, or some of them, would have liked. They would have liked their own sons, or their own hands, who enlisted because they simply couldn't stay "out of the show," back doing the old chores they used to do. But this is what the army said:

"The army does not contemplate furloughing individual soldiers to work on farms," the war department announced in a statement clarifying policies and procedures by which soldiers may be used to alleviate the farm labor shortage.

"World War I experience demonstrated that such temporary releases of individual soldiers were of little assistance to the agriculture industry and disrupted the organization and training of the army. If furloughs were granted for this purpose, neither agriculture nor the army could be assured that the soldiers thus furloughed actually would be engaged in agricultural activities.

"Certain emergency situations may develop in which vital crops may be endangered because of critical shortages in local agricultural labor. In such cases, military units may be employed under command of their own officers to supplement the local farm labor until the crisis is over.

"Troops so employed will be housed and fed by the army and will be subject to military control at all times.

"Requests for use of military units for emergency farm duty must be transmitted to the war department by the chairman of the War Manpower commission."

Another Loophole

However, there is another loophole which all of the farmers or the farm men in service may not know about. A soldier over 38 years of age who is on active duty in the continental United States can get his discharge right now if he can get a statement from his local farm agent to the effect that he is needed.

But the application has to get in by May 1. The same thing applies to men overseas and they have until June. (Better tell them by V-Mail.)

The President explained to us twice, why a batch of young men couldn't be pulled out of a division and sent home.

You can take 10 or 20 soldiers out of an outfit that has just started training and it doesn't make much difference. But you can't take that many men out of an outfit already trained and booked for overseas. Not without crippling the outfit so badly that it really interferes with battle plans.

That's his explanation and he made it to us the other day, leaning back in his chair and obviously trying hard to get over an idea that he believes is right.

There is going to be a "land army." He said he didn't like the term because it made the farmers think they were going to have a lot of green city folks descend on them. He knows what the farmers think about folks who will scare the horses, sprain their ankles, try to milk a cow and when she doesn't give, say: "The valves are stuck." One farmer wrote me he'd rather have grasshoppers than city folks on his place.

England's Method

The President said to us that in England they have increased food production 60 per cent. And they did it with the help of a land army, mostly women with no previous training. They got the training. A lot depends on the training.

I talked with a farmer near here who took on a city boy, green as grass. The boy probably thought shorts were something you wore and probably would have looked in the toolbox for a boar.

Maybe you heard him talk on the Farm and Home Hour. Well, I met him and the farmer, too. The kid is crazy to get back this summer and the farmer told me he was sick when he had to let him go back to school. City folks are dumb in a lot of ways. But so are farmers. It's true you can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink. Also, a lot of horses have got the sense to drink if you've got sense to lead them to the water.

In spite of dumb help or none at all, in spite of lack of machines and a lot of red tape, the farmers of the country have signed up to raise a bigger crop than they've ever raised. I believe with a little horse sense and patience, they are going to pull through.

No team pulled together until they were in harness.

If they don't, God help us and the army at meal time.

The Weather— A Dead Topic

As you know, mention of the weather on the radio these days is forbidden. The newspapers can describe a snow storm or a hot spell but the radio commentators cannot.

There is a good reason for this.

A lurking submarine could pick up a newscast, and if enough facts concerning the weather were revealed by stations in enough widely separated localities, even an amateur meteorologist—and the Germans are no amateurs—could make a pretty good weather forecast by putting two and two together.

But being unable to describe the manifestations of nature that I see on my way to work in the morning is a terrible handicap to me. Recently I've gotten around the difficulty by talking about last week's weather, and before going on the air, reading what I was going to say to the censorship officials and getting their O. K. In no case did they restrict me. The other day, however, I forgot to call up the Censorship office but the Blue Network didn't forget. I got this message:

"Censorship says you have to cut out all references to weather from now on. They say that there was nothing actually censorable in what you have said or what you have written today but so many complaints have come in from other stations that you were violating the regulations, and so many other stations have been using your comments on the weather as an excuse for violating the rule, that we will have to ask you to stop discussing the subject entirely."

The following is what censorship didn't let me say but what it has no objection to my printing:

"It was pretty hard the past week not to mention the swiftly changing scene which nature provided Washingtonians—one day, not so long ago a top coat was far too heavy for comfort and in the park, the dark patches were beginning to be studded with jeweled buds and the sunlight seemed to turn into solid gold on the bursting forsythia. On that balmy day I remarked—'Well, we must be due for a blizzard.'

"Twenty-four hours later the fine snow began to fall and late that afternoon and the following morning, the tree limbs and trunks were wrapped in great soft blankets of down—even the high branches were wide bands of white—but when we went home from work in the evening, the streets were dry and clean again and only here and there in the shadow of a hedge or in the sheltering cups of the brown ivy leaves was a dust of snow—like a meager sprinkling of precious sugar on the rim of a doughnut."

Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia has joined the ranks of Victory Gardeners, planning an extensive garden on the grounds of the executive mansion. An old barn, once used to house cows, will be razed to provide additional garden space. The governor indicated that his wife and son would be the "boss gardeners" and predicted a bumper crop of vegetables.

Cotton fabrics for women's work clothing have been cut from 14 types to five.

Government purchase orders, specifying that canners pack fruits, vegetables and juices in large No. 10 size cans, instead of smaller ones, may save as much as 57,000 tons of steel, 1,000 tons of tin, 43 tons of rubber and 5,500,000 man-hours of cannery labor in 1943.

New Tea Towels Add Gayety to the Kitchen

ANIMATED cutlery, dishes, glassware, pots and pans bring their infectious gaiety to a new set of tea towels. They offer a mixing bowl parade, a knife, fork and spoon dash, the soup spoon dance, and four more equally interesting tea towel designs, with a trio of teaspoons as motif for a matching panholder. Outline embroidery does the set in a jiffy —it could even be done in running stitch.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

L. H. Reynolds Makes Appeal To Citizens To Buy Bonds

To the People of Chilton Coutny:

April 12th saw the inauguration of the biggest bond drive in the history of any nation of all times, a drive for thirteen billion dollars. While this is the biggest sum ever asked by any nation, it is to be used for the biggest purpose, the saving of the freedom of our own nation and the world as well.

Chilton County's part of this second war bond drive is $311,000 and is likewise the biggest financial job that we have ever been called upon to do, but with every person doing his part, the job can be done. Many of the citizens of Chilton County are giving of their time and effort, serving on various committees to assure the success of this campaign, and you will be called upon before this campaign closes April 30th, to do your part. When the canvasser comes to you, meet him in a cheerful way and feel that it is your privilege to lend your money in this cause.

There is three million dollars in the banks of Chilton County and only 10 per cent of this amount would easily reach our quota, and as we have been told so often, it is not a gift, but a loan, with a good interest rate and with millions of good American boys willing to sacrifice their lives to see and to keep your investment safe. If they are willing to give their lives certainly we should be willing to lend our money.

We must not forget, too, that we who are at home. are still enjoying safety and security, a blessed privilege which is today denied to most of the nations of this earth.

This is not a drive for just your neighbor, but a drive for you and me and every man, woman and child black or white, in Chilton County.

Let each of us not wait for the canvasser or for someone to urge us to buy a bond, but go today and buy all that we possibly can and we will put this campaign over with a great success, which will hasten the end of the war. and bring peace to our country and to the world, and you will be fortunate and glad for two reasons that the war is over, and that you have made a good sound investment with interest on your money.

Respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Executive Chairman

Mrs. Houston Nivens was hostess to 11 members of Circle 4 of Clanton First Baptist Church Monday afternoon at which time they had their program from the Mission magazines.

The devotional message was read by little Nanette Nivens with Mrs. Frank Scott giving the opening prayer. Others taking part on the program included Mrs. Mary Wagner, Mrs. Mel Martin and Mrs. Nivens.

Following the program a brief business session was held and the meeting was dismissed with Mispah, after which those present enjoyed a social hour together.

The Martha Frank's G. A. of Clanton were guests of Betty and Jean Hocutt on Monday of this week. There were ten members present and two visitors. The meeting was called to order by the president. The counselor, Mrs. Ben Tucker. read the scripture lesson on "Missions", and led in the opening prayer. The girls sung their G. A. song and repeated in union their "Watchword" and "Allegiance." This being their business meeting the girls discussed plans for doing some community missions and other projects for the coming season. The meeting was dismissed with sentence prayers and adjourned to meet April 26th for their mission program at the home of Patsy Fleck.

Mrs. L. F. Spivey (Inez Bishop). former resident of Moultrie, Ga., spent the last two weeks with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bishop, and has gone to join her husband in Columbus Georgia.

Mrs. W. E. Golden and daughter Beverly, of Montgomery. spent last week-end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Middlebrooks announce the birth, April 9th, of a daughter, whom they have named Sandra Ann. Mother and baby are at the West End Baptist Hospital and doing fine.

A message was received from the Navy Department by Mrs. Grady Heflin last week that her brother, George W. Duke, died recently while at work on the task of rebuilding U. S. defenses at Pearl Harbor. The deepest sympathy is sent to Mrs. Heflin and her family from the News and many friends.

Mrs. Joe Mullins is spending a month in Louisiana with her mother.

MRS. HEFLIN HOSTESS TO STUDY CLUB

The April Meeting of the Study Club was held with Mrs. Grady Heflin. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Frank Scott presided over the business session. The new officers elected for the coming year are: Mrs. J. P. Hayes, president; ;Mrs. John Mullins vice president; Mrs. Hugh Jones, secretary; Mrs. Joe Mullins, treasurer.

A program on "Society Serves" followed. Miss Lillian McKee spoke most interestingly on "How Society Serves the Underprivileged Children," and Mrs. Mason F. Jones spoke on how "Religious and Groups Serve Society."

The hostess served a delightful salad plate to 13 members and two guests, Miss Lois Smith and Miss Lillian McKee.

The Pilot Club held their business meeting for April, on Tuesday night of this week at the home of Mae Vincent with Lillian McKee as co-hostess

The meeting was called to order by the president, Ruth Waters, who presided over the discussion of a number of projects to be worked on in the next few months. Also the election of the officers for the coming year, as follows: President, Bo Searcy; first vice president, Mollie Bell Ousley; second vice president, Laura Little; secretary, Lillian Simpson; treasurer Faye Smith; reporter, Mamie C Smith.

These officers will be installed at the first meeting in May.

There were 16 members present who enjoyed the delicious refreshments and the fellowship together.

MISS MARY NEIL SMITH WEDS FRED ELLIOTT

The marriage of Miss Mary Neil Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wagoner of Clanton to Fred Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Elliott, of Opelika, was quietly solemnized at an impressive ceremony on Wednesday evening in the home of the bridegroom's parents on First Avenue.

Dr. A. C. Windham of the First Presbyterian Church was the officiating minister and performed the ring service in the presence of family members and a small group of very close friends.

The vows were spoken under an arch improvised in the French doors of the living room of greenery against which were placed tall baskets of white snapdragons and seven-branched candelabra holding slender white tapers.

Mrs. Crews, the bride's sister and only attendant, wore a model of aqua blue crepe and a corsage of gardenias

The groom's only attendant was his father who served as best man.

The bride wore a lovely dress of skylark blue with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of pastel flowers.

Immediately following the wedding the young couple left for a short wedding trip after which they will be at home on First Avenue.

Out of town guests here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wagoner, parents of the bride, Mrs Crews, the bride's sister, Barbara Ann Crews, Harold Smith, the bride's brother, all of Clanton, and Mrs. W T. Seymour, of Alexander City.

W. M. U. CIRCLE No. 6

The Georgia Mae Ogburn Circle met at the home of Mrs. W. C. Golden on Monday. The Mission Study chairman, Mrs. Ed Propst, led in a study of Chapters 1 and 2 of "The Guide for Community Missions." How To Invest In "FIGHTING $$'s"

13 billion dollars must be raised!

THE 2nd WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

"Lend more money to help carry on the fight!" That's what our Government is asking you and all the rest of us . . . asking us to lend it 13 billion fighting dollars in the next few weeks! 13 billion extra dollars—over and above all regular War Bond buying!

We can do it . . . we must do it . . . we owe it to our boys who are fighting overseas. For their sake. . . .

We've got to build more ships! We broke all records last year when we built 8 million tons of shipping. This year, we're building 18 million tons . . . but still it is not enough!

We've got to do more fighting! More and more of our soldiers and sailors are going into actual combat . . . requiring more equipment, and more supplies. We cannot let them down!

We've got to buy more War Bonds! To help pay for the things our fighting men need . . . we've got to buy War Bonds as we never bought them before!

In the next few weeks you may be visited by one of the thousands of men and women who are giving their time and effort to the 2nd War Loan Drive. Welcome these patriotic workers if they call . . . buy from them all the War Bonds you can!

Better still, don't wait for them. Go to your nearest bank, post office, or War Bond booth, and invest more fighting dollars now! It's the least you can do to help those who are fighting and dying overseas!

Among the 7 different kinds of U. S. Government securities is one that exactly fits your own particular purse and requirements. These securities are the finest investment in the world . . . bar none! For your Country's sake . . . for your own sake . . . invest all you can!

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES . . . YOU LEND YOUR MONEY!

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Homemakers May Learn Ration Wisdom Through Study.

This easily prepared gelatin dessert uses all unrationed food. It's pretty but easy to make, and will top off either a light or heavy meal.

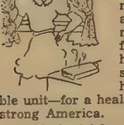
These are times when changes are the fashion—and that particularly applies to changes in foods and cooking methods. Mrs. America can no longer dash to the grocer's and get enough canned or processed foods to put together a quick meal. Nor can she get together a meal, even one that would take time, with those rationed foods.

Points must be budgeted far more carefully than dollars and cents in the past! That is the realization every homemaker has been feeling since Ration Book II went into effect. Out of that has arisen one maxim: never to buy a canned or processed food if a fresh one is available.

Confusion, indecision, and slowness in buying were the adjectives grocers used when buying with War Ration Book II began. But this is gradually wearing away as Mrs. America learns new shopping methods.

Since point values change monthly, it's a good idea to keep a list of point values on hand when making the menu. Plan menus for a week at a time—marketing lists and budget lists all on hand when you're doing this important bit of work. Don't go to the store and wander aimlessly, selecting whatever appeals to the eye. Even if you have four or five ration books from which to spend, it's certain you won't get enough out of them by the hit or miss method.

Keep on the lookout for point values which may change—they vary from month to month and sometimes change during the month as the public's buying habits are watched.



Haphazard shopping, meal-planning, and carelessness about the health of the family are out of date. The homemaker must be alert and vigilant now as never before to make of her family the strongest and healthiest possible unit—for a healthy America is a strong America.

Lamb is fairly easily obtainable meat and second to pork, richest source of thiamin—our morale vitamin. Very little, if any, lamb is being sent to the armed forces and Allies, and that means it is for civilian use.

Baked Lamb Loaf.
(Serves 8 to 10)

1½ pounds ground lamb
1½ cups bread crumbs
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons minced green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons grated onion
1 cup cooked peas
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Soak crumbs and mix well with meat and other ingredients. Pack into a loaf pan. Bake in a 300 degree oven for 1½ hours. This may also be baked in a ring mold and served with parsleyed potatoes.

Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Menus

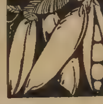
*Deviled Egg, Macaroni and Pea Salad
Hot Biscuits with Jam
Marmalade Bavarian Milk
*Recipe Given

Fish will come into more popularity to help extend our main dishes when ration points will not cover that major item:

Fish Loaf.
(Serves 6)

2 cups cooked, flaked fish (leftover may be used)
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup fine, soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs, separated
½ cup milk
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Shred the fish. Saute green pepper and onion in butter, add to fish with bread crumbs and seasonings. Beat egg yolks, add milk and then add to fish mixture. Stir in lemon juice. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Poured into a greased loaf pan, set in a pan of hot water. Bake for 1 hour in a 350 degree oven. Serve with white sauce to which hard-cooked eggs have been added.



As the days become warmer we will gradually begin adding salads for our main dishes, to help save on pointage. Here is a splendid suggestion, using all unrationed foods:

*Deviled Egg, Macaroni and Pea Salad.
(Serves 8)

10 to 12 deviled eggs
1 package (12 to 16-ounce) macaroni
2½ cups cooked, fresh peas
French dressing
Radish roses
Salad greens—optional

Deviled eggs
10 to 12 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons salad dressing
2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar
1½ teaspoons mustard
1½ teaspoons worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cut a half-inch slice from rounded end of egg. Cut a saw tooth edge around white, if desired. Remove yolk carefully. Press yolks and bits of leftover whites through sieve, add remaining ingredients and beat until light and fluffy. Refill shells, using pastry tube for decorating top, if desired.

Boil macaroni in salted water according to directions on package. Drain, rinse, then drain thoroughly. Marinate with a little french dressing, then chill.

Cook peas, drain, and save stock for soup. Marinate peas in french dressing.

To make salad, heap macaroni in center of dish. Alternate deviled eggs and radish roses around edge, pressing them into macaroni. Fill with a border of peas between eggs and macaroni.

A main dish salad that's a meal in itself includes macaroni, deviled eggs, and a ring of freshly cooked peas. This supplies a good quantity of protein to build and repair body tissues and gives food with that stick-to-the-ribs quality.

Marmalade Bavarian.
(Serves 6)

1 package orange-flavored gelatin
1¾ cups hot water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup heavy cream
⅓ cup orange marmalade

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add salt. Chill until cold and syrupy. Fold in cream, whipped only until thick and shiny, but not stiff. Fold in marmalade.

Fresh Vegetables: To those of you accustomed to using canned vegetables and learning how many they serve, these hints are given on how many fresh vegetables will serve:

Asparagus: One pound yields two cups, cut, serve three to four.

Beans, green or yellow: yields three to three and one-half cups, serves four or five.

Beets: One pound yields three to four servings. Use young beet greens as vegetable, too!

Broccoli: One pound serves four to five.

Cabbage: One pound, shredded, yields three and one half cups. One pound cooked serves three.

Parsnips: Four medium sized roots make a pound, serves four to five.

Peas: One pound gives two servings.

Spinach: One pound serves three to four.

Turnips: One pound yields three to four servings.

IT'S hard to write about Signe Hasso because only superlatives should be used, and there's so much to say. Very beautiful, talented and intelligent, the young Swedish dramatic star is famous on the Scandinavian stage and in England. She put in her year of waiting here for her quota number, so that she could act, by writing for Swedish newspapers; even covered the President's press conferences. She's a superb actress, beautifully trained. You'll get just a small sample of her work in Metro's thrilling "Assignment in Brittany"; she stands out in a cast including such experts as Margaret Wycherly, Richard Whorf, John Emery and George Coulouris.

Carlton Morse, whose "One Man's Family" has been a ten-year favorite on the air, is finally making a screen treatment of it for United Artists. What with still doing the famous radio serial and having his "I Love a Mystery" broadcast again, he's fairly busy.

There's an ambitious plan under way to open United Artists' "Stage Door Canteen" on all fighting fronts simultaneously—practically all over the world, as well as on ships at sea. The event will be brought to the American public by radio; the famous folk of the show world who appear in the picture will participate, and there'll be conversations between them and the men of the armed forces.

Lum and Abner, who must deliver their fourth picture to RKO by June 1, are still searching frantically for just the right story. Meantime, their second film, "Bashful Bachelor," still makes money; the third, "Two Weeks to Live," is just out.

At the request of King Haakon of Norway, the English offices of Warner Bros. have asked that a print of "Edge of Darkness" be sent over immediately for a special showing; the print was rushed to Lisbon by Clipper, then to London. Starring Ann Sheridan and Errol Flynn, with a cast including Walter Huston, Judith Anderson, Ruth Gordon and Morris Carnovsky, it tells the story of the revolt of a Norwegian village against the Nazi invaders; it's a picture fit for a king, showing the spirit of his native land.

"Ladies in Gray," a story of the American women who are working in government hospitals to help rehabilitate the wounded, will be produced by Metro with the co-operation of the war department and the Red Cross.

For the first time in eight years Adolphe Menjou and his wife, Veree Teasdale, will appear together in a picture; they'll be seen in "Hi Diddle Diddle" as a husband-wife team, and are planning to continue as a starring partnership.

Ann Shirley and Walter Reed, who took screen tests together when they were 13, for child parts in a Brian Foy picture, have the romantic leads in "Bombardier." He didn't immediately recognize her when they met at the RKO studio; in the days when they made those tests together she was known as "Dawn O'Day"—the kind of name that always used to be inflicted on child actresses.

In Demand

The farmer's wife had a very sharp tongue, but one day he got a rest from her nagging. A farm horse kicked her so badly that she had to go to a hospital.

During her absence there was an unusual run of callers at the farm.

"It's very nice of the neighbors, especially the men, to call and ask after the missus," the farmer remarked to the servant-girl.

"Yes, sir," replied the girl; "but most of them want to know if you'll sell the horse."

Cryptic Response

The landlord of offices tenanted by a firm of Scots lawyers whose lease was about to expire wrote to ask whether they were going to continue in occupation. Their reply was:

"Dear Sir, We are, Yours truly—"

Not appreciating this effort in economy of words—and paper—he wrote again to demand whether or not it was their intention to remain. The answer was:

"Dear Sir, We remain, Yours truly—"

The landlord is not trying again.

This Changing World

The landscape architect was showing an ignorant, newly rich woman over a formal garden.

"What's that?" she asked.

The landscape architect told her it was a sundial.

"What's a sundial?"

Whereupon her companion patiently explained how the sun, moving through the heavens, casts a shadow which is recorded on the dial, indicating the time of day.

"My! What will they be thinking of next?" she exclaimed.

PETER AND JOHN IN GETHSEMANE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:36-46; John 18:10-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. Matthew 26:41.

The morning of that great day when atonement was made for the sins of all the world was nearly at hand. In the darkness of the night, following the institution of the Lord's Supper, and the words and prayer of our Lord (John 15-17), He and His disciples came to the Garden of Gethsemane. Taking three of His disciples He went deeper into the shadows to pour out before the Father His soul, "exceeding sorrowful even unto death."

It is a sacred scene, and we feel a sense of awe and reverence as we approach it, feeling that we too would prefer to tarry outside the garden, did we not feel that we should try to understand a little better what took place that night.

We are especially concerned with Peter and John, who with James shared our Lord's sorrow up to a point, and then so sadly failed Him. We note that they had a

I. High Privilege (Matt. 26:36-38).

To be asked by Christ to stand by in this crucial hour was to be entrusted with one of the greatest privileges a man could ever know. As there swept over His holy soul a great tidal wave of sorrow unto death, He wanted and needed their fellowship. As Dr. Maclaren puts it, He "grazed the very edge" of human endurance. "Out of the darkness He reaches a hand to feel the grasp of a friend, and piteously asks these humble lovers to stay beside Him; not that they could help Him bear the weight, but that their presence had some solace in it. His agony . . . they could not bear with Him, but they could watch with Him, and that poor comfort is all He asked."

Undoubtedly they intended to do it. Jesus bore witness that their spirit was willing (v. 41), but in spite of that, and all the boasting of Peter at the table that he would never desert Him, they failed Him in His hour of need. It was

II. Sad Weakness (vv. 39-46).

Our Lord's prayer showed great faith in God the Father, the terrific recoil of His soul against being blackened with the burden of sin, and a complete surrender to the Father's will. Here was true denial of self and submission to God, but it was nonetheless an appalling experience for our sinless Lord. So He went back for fellowship with His three trusted friends—and they were asleep.

Jesus recognized that the weakness of the flesh caused them to forget and slumber. We may profit by a little closer scrutiny of the scene. Was it just a physical tiredness? That doubtless entered in, but was not Jesus even more tired than they could possibly be? Was it not rather the weakness of indifference? They did not yet fully believe that their Lord was about to die. That was why they were quickly scattered in unbelief when He did die. This matter was not so serious in their sight, so it was not difficult to yield to the tired body and the deep, quiet darkness, and fall asleep.

We are in much the same position. Danger—grave, spiritual danger—threatens our souls, our families, our nation. We who call ourselves Christians have declared our readiness to stay awake and alert. But we hav become at home in this world, the enemy soothes us with the assurance that all is well, time goes on and nothing too serious happens. So, we go to sleep right in the midst of danger, and sleep on even though the Master awakens us again and again.

But now the scene changes. The mob has come to take Christ, and then the sleepy Peter, now much awake, indulges in

III. Foolish Courage (John 18:10-12).

The act of Peter was courageous, even to the point of recklessness. What chance had he against a great armed multitude? It was the natural impulse of a loving heart, but it was misguided and foolish.

What did he think to accomplish—to deliver Jesus from those who would crucify Him? That would have meant no death on the cross and no redemption. The hour for the offering up of the Son of Man as Saviour had come. Peter might have learned that with our Lord in the garden, but then he was asleep. Christ who had hitherto walked right through the crowd of enemies (Luke 4:30), now submitted. In the dark hours of the night He had been prepared to drink this bitter cup (v. 11).

We need to learn from this experience of Peter's lest we make the same mistake. There are all too many in the Church who are asleep as far as its spiritual struggles and opportunities are concerned, who are eager to wield a reckless sword in outward conflict. In their folly and ignorance they do more harm than good, and yet they think they are working for Christ.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

War workers cars are being checked in company parking lots by at least one manufacturer to make certain that tires are kept in serviceable condition. If the worker fails to have his tires recapped in time he is denied further application either for tires or recaps.

It takes three to eleven times normal distance to stop on snow or ice without tire chains, and you can't negotiate slippery hills with bare tires that spin on packed snow, waste gas and wear tires.

Each tapper on a rubber plantation is responsible for about 300 trees, which in one day's tapping will net an average of 50 pounds of latex, equal to about 17 pounds of dry rubber.

Automotive conservation authorities in New Hampshire boast of the reduction of that state's tire needs by 57 per cent as an example of what can be done in saving rubber now on motor vehicles.

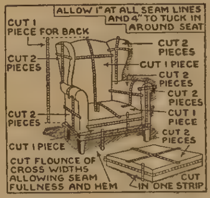
ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS



YOUR tape measure and a little figuring can help you save material when making those new slip covers. In estimating goods remember that the length and width of each section must be the same as the widest and longest measurement of the part of the chair to which it is to be fitted plus seams, seat tuck-in and flounce fullness. The method of measuring is shown here.

Slip cover material usually comes in 36 and 50-inch widths. Frequently a narrow chair back may be covered by splitting a 50-inch width of goods. For other chairs 36-inch material might be cut to better advantage. If the material has a large figure an extra yard will be needed for matching and centering the design. Decide in advance which seams are to be accented with welting or trimming and measure them to determine the amount needed.

Pay of Captives

When an American soldier is captured, his pay is continued and the accumulated amount given to him upon his return, minus such deductions as insurance premiums and allotments made to dependents. When a man is reported missing in action and his fate is unknown, he remains on a pay status for at least a year.
